ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1892

Full Titles by Authors

NOTE.

In this list the titles generally are verbatim transcriptions (according to the rule of the American Library Association) from books received. Books not received are indicated by a prefixed asterisk, and this office cannot be held responsible for the correctness of their record.

The abbreviations are usually self-explanatory. A colon after initial designates the most usual given name, as: A: Augustus; B: Benjamin; C: Charles; D: David; E: Edward; F: Frederic; G: George; H: Henry; I: Isaac; J: John; L: Louis; N: Nicholas; P: Peter; R: Richard; S: Samuel; T: Thomas; W: William.

Sizes are designated as follows: F. (folio: over 30 centimeters high); Q. (4to: under 30 cm.); O. (8vo: 25 cm.); E. (12mo: 20 cm.); S: (16mo: 17½ cm.); T: (24mo: 15 cm.); Tt. (32mo: 12½ cm.); Fe. (48mo: 10 cm.). Sq., obl., nar., designate square, oblong, narrow books of these heights.

THE ANNUAL AMERICAN CATALOGUE, 1892,

Abarbanell, J. R. The rector's secret; or, love conquers all: a study from life. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1892.] c. 179 p. D. (Peerless ser.. no. 61.) pap., 25 c.

The prologue pictures a forsaken woman committing suicide by drowning after depositing her two-weeks old boy-baby in a crèche in Abingdon Square, N. Y. City. This boy reappears at twenty-five, the adopted son of a much-loved clergyman, goes to Europe to find comfort after a sad love experience, and there comes upon the secret of his parentage.

Abbott, A. C., M.D. Principles of bacteriology. Phil., Lea Bros. & Co., 1892. 263 p. il. 8°, cl., $2.

Abbott, Austin. Digest of New York statutes and reports, from Jan. 1, 1891, to Jan. 1, 1892; with tables of statutes, constitutional provisions, rules of court and cases cited. N. Y., Diossy Law-Book Co., 1892. c. 6+25+502 p. O. shp., $4.25.

Abbott, Austin. New cases selected chiefly from decisions of the courts of the State of New York; with notes; with an analytical index to all points of law and practice and all code citations contained in the standard reports of N. Y. issued during the period covered by this volume. V. 27, 28. N. Y., The Diossy Law-Book Co., 1892. c. 6+14+548; 7+49+539 p. O. ea., shp., $5.

Abbott, C: C., M.D. Recent archæological explorations in the valley of the Delaware. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 2+30 p. il. O. (Univ. of Pa. ser. in philology, literature and archæology, v. 2, no. 1.) bds., 75 c.

Abbott, C: C., M.D. Recent rambles; or, in touch with nature. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. 4–330 p. il. D. cl., $2.

The author of "A naturalist's rambles about home," "Outings at odd times," etc., tells the thoughts that came to him on his rambles, under such headings as: A river view, A victim of Thoreau, Animals as barometers, All day afloat, A rocky ramble, In a seaside forest, A cool gray day, An August reverie, A defence of idleness, A pre-Columbian mine, Why do the birds sing? In winter quarters, Caught in the rain, etc.

Abbott, Edwin A. The Anglican career of Cardinal Newman. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 2 v., 8°, cl., $10.

Abbott, Evelyn. A history of Greece. Pt. 2, From the Ionian revolt to the thirty years' peace, 500-445 B.C. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. 6+541 p. O. cl., $2.25.

The first part, "From the earliest times to the Ionian revolt," was published in 1888. The author expects to complete the work in four volumes, but each volume will be complete in itself, covering a distinct period of history. The work is written for those who are acquainted with the outlines of the subject, and have some knowledge of the Greek language. The style is easy and clear, with the special charm that was found in the author's "Pericles."

Abbott, Rev. Lyman. The evolution of Christianity. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 7+258 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The chapters which constitute this book were originally delivered, extemporaneously, as lectures before the Lowell Institute of Boston. Dr. Abbott says in his preface: "I hope that the reader of these pages will discover that I have not abandoned the historic faith of Christendom to become an evolutionist, but have endeavored to show that the historic faith of Christendom, when stated in the terms of an evolutionary philosophy, is not only preserved, but is so cleansed of pagan thought and feeling as to be presented in a purer and more powerful form."

About, Edmond. The mother of a marquise. [Also,] The aunt's stratagem; from the original [French] by Mrs. Carlton A. Kingsbury. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 4+222 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 104.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Two novelettes of French every-day life. The agonizing efforts of the rich bourgeoise to become the mother of a marquise are delightfully set forth in the one story, while the strategies of the aunt to wed her niece to an artist are equally amusing in the other.

Acland. Arthur H. D., and Smith, H. Llewellyn, eds. Studies in secondary education; with introd. by Ja. Bryce. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 28+334 p. 12°, cl., $1.75.

Acts of the Apostles: an account of the first age of the Christian church: with chronological appendix. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1892. 136 p. map, 12°, cl., 80 c.

Adam, Ja. The nuptial number of Plato; its solution and significance. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 8°, pap., $1.10.

Adams, C: Francis. Three episodes of Massachusetts history: the settlement of Boston Bay; the Antinomian controversy; a study of church and town government. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 2 v., 7+531; 531-1067 p. maps, O. cl., $4.

The first episode deals exhaustively with the settlement of Massachusetts Bay, showing the struggle which took place between the royal party represented by Sir Ferdinando Gorges, and the Puritans led by John Winthrop. In this episode the stories of the Maypole of Merrymount, and of Miles Standish's struggle with the Indians at Wessagusset are also told. The second episode deals with the early religious dispute in Massachusetts known as the Antinomian controversy, the account of which is now for the first time written from a modern or agnostic point of view. A vivid picture is given of the theological, social and intellectual condition of New England in 1630-40. The third episode describes the slow growth and gradual development of a Massachusetts town from 1640 to 1890, and is practically a close study, from original sources, of New England town government, its origin, methods and results.

Adams, C: Kendall. Christopher Columbus, his life and his work. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. c. 12+257 p. por. D. (Makers of American ser.) cl., $1.

Presents in popular form the results of the latest researches in regard to the life and work of Columbus. While constant use has been made of the original authorities, effort has been made to interpret the conflicting statements with which these sources abound in the spirit of modern criticism. The principal authorities used have been the letters and the journal of Columbus, and the history of the admiral purporting to be by his son Fernando, the histories of the time by Las Casas, Bernaldez, Oviedo, Peter Martyr and Herrera, and the invaluable collection of documents by Navarrette.

Adams, Florence A. Fowle. Gesture and pantomimic action. N. Y., Edgar S. Werner, 1892. 222 p. il. 12°, net, $2.50.

Adams, Herbert B., and Wood, H: Columbus and his discovery of America. Balt., Md., The Johns Hopkins Press, 1892. c. 3-88 p. O. (Johns Hopkins Univ. studies.) 10th ser., nos. 10-11.) pap., 50 c.

Contents: Oration delivered by Prof. Adams at the Peabody Institute, October 10, 1892; Oration delivered by Prof. Wood in Baltimore, October 21, 1892; The first Jew in America, by Prof. M. Kayserling; Columbus in Oriental literature, by Dr. Cyrus Adler; Bibliographies of the discovery of America, and Public memorials of Columbus, by Charles Weathers Bump.

Adams, Myron. Creation of the Bible. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 5+313 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The author of "The continuous creation" has now written a volume in which he seeks to co-ordinate the results of the higher criticism into a systematic account of the evolution of the Christian Scriptures. Considering the Bible a book to be studied as any book would be studied, he examines the compiling work of Ezra, the scribe; the traditional and legendary elements of the Bible, its fiction and poetry; the nature and limitations of prophecy; the Greek and other outside influences that modified the development of Jewish and Christian sacred literature, and the philosophical and sociological doctrines emphasized by St. Paul and other New Testament writers.

Adams, Oscar Fay. The presumption of sex, and other papers. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. 149 p. D. cl., $1.

Contents: Introduction; The presumption of sex; The mannerless sex; The vulgar sex; The ruthless sex; The brutal sex; Our dreadful American manners. The majority of these papers appeared in the North American Review, where they caused much discussion and criticism from their sharp tone and caustic strictures upon the manners of American women. Mr. Adams answers his critics in the "introduction," and lays bare the imperfections of his own sex in two new papers, "The vulgar sex" and "The presumption of sex."

Adams, Rob. C. Travels in faith from tradition to reason. N. Y., Truthseeker Co., [1892.] c. '84. 3 + 238 p. D. (Truthseeker lib., no. 9.) pap., 25 c.

Published in 1884 by G. P. Putnam's Sons. See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., June 28, 1884, [648.]

Adams, W. H. Davenport. Warriors of the Crescent. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. [Authorized ed.] 2+317 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The history of glittering campaigns, fatalistic heroism and the pillage of the marvellous riches of India by the Sultans of Ghazni covers the years between A.D. 1000 and 1700. It is a little-known chapter of history, and its oriental magnificence and despotism savor of the "Arabian Nights." Here we read of the exploits of Mahmud, Timur the Tartar, and the Great Moguls, of the records of Shah Jahan, the true star of the faith, and Aurauyzit, the conqueror of the universe.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] Fighting for the right. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 4-363 p. il. D. (The blue and the gray ser., no. 5.) cl., $1.50.

Lieut. Christy Passford again serves his country, and under new conditions. After a sufficient stay in New York to recover completely from his wounds, he is ordered to the Chateaugay, which sails with sealed orders. A chase is first made for the Ionian, a suspicious vessel engaged in supplying the Confederates with machinery, and after her capture various other exciting races after blockade-runners take place. Christy also visits the Bahama Islands and does some detective business regarding suspected vessels.

Adams, W. T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] A millionaire at sixteen; or, the cruise of the Guardian-mother. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. 9+302 p. il. D. (All over the world ser., no. 2.) cl., $1.25.

A continuation of the adventures of Louis Belgrave, whose history was begun in "A missing million." The story is one of excitement and adventure, and involves a conspiracy, a revelation, a boy's ready action, a long cruise, and the purchase of the steam-yacht Guardian-Mother.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] Oliver Optic's annual [1892]: stories, poems and pictures for little men and women, by the best authors and artists. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1892.] c. '82-'88. unp. il. O. bds., $1.50.

Adams, W: T., ["Oliver Optic," pseud.] A young knight-errant; or, cruising in the West Indies. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 9+329 p. il. D. (All-over-the-world ser., no. 3.) cl., $1.25.

Though a completed story which may be read without reference to its predecessors, it is a continuation of the adventures of Louis Belgrave, who was a millionaire at sixteen, and the owner of the magnificent steam-yacht Guardian-Mother. Louis and Mrs. Belgrave and other old friends are on board the yacht, the party being reinforced by several others. The yacht makes her voyage among the Bahama Islands and circumnavigates Cuba, visiting the principal cities, etc. Louis is the hero of many adventures.

Addis, W. E., ed. The documents of the Hexateuch; tr. and arr. in chronological order with introduction and notes by W. E. Addis. Pt. 1, The oldest book of Hebrew history. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. 8°, cl., $3.

Addison, Jos. Criticisms on "Paradise lost;" ed. with introd. and notes, by Albert S. Cook. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 22+200 p. D. cl., $1.10.

The text is based upon the literal productions of Arber and Morley, and, allowing for the modernization of spelling and punctuation, is believed to be more correct than any published in this century. The index is unusually full, and will enable Addison's comments on any particular passage of "Paradise lost," as well as those of the ancient epics with which it is compared, to be found with the least possible trouble.

Hugh Thomson. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 5+110 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Addison, Jos. Selections from the Speetator; with an introd. and notes by K. Deighton. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 19+220 p. 12°, cl., 40 c.

Addison, Jos., and Steele, R: The Sir Roger de Coverley papers from The Speetator. N. Y., American Book Co., 1892. c. 148 p. (English classics for schools.) bds., 20 c.

Adee, D: Graham. The blue scarab. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1892. c. 6-348 p. D. (Library of choice fiction, no. 42.) pap., 50 c.

An exciting search for a lost jewel, made to imitate a scarabæus or Egyptian beetle, involves a character cast in which there is a strange variety of the honest man and knave, aristocrat and plebeian, with various representatives of Bohemianism. The mystery of the jewel, the several motives of those who participated in the mad hunt, and the chicanery of successive owners of the coveted pin, are revealed in the personal reminiscences of an ex-professional boxer. The scenes are well known New York localities.

Adler, Felix. The moral instruction of children. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 9+270 p. D. (International education ser., no. 21.) cl., $1.50.

Lectures delivered by Dr. Adler in the School of Applied Ethics during its first session in 1891 at Plymouth, Mass. A few of the lectures have been condensed, the others are published substantially as delivered. The rising tide of interest in moral education, and the demand of the age to separate church from state make the publication of this book, with its many helpful suggestions, timely and of unusual interest.

Aïdé, Hamilton. A voyage of discovery: a novel of American society. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 3+395 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The scene opens on the deck of the Teutonic the second day after leaving Liverpool. Here the chief actors are introduced—an English girl and her brother, the children of a famous Englishman, a Harvard professor, a cultured Boston woman, an audacious New Yorker, who has written novels and dwells in the "inner circle," and a rich blasé American, who is accused of being at Anglomaniac. They all play a part in the story—an interesting one of love and intrigue—and chiefly in illustrating special phases of American thought and character for the amusement of Miss Ballinger and her brother, who have come to the United States on a voyage of discovery.

Aitchison, Sir C: Lord Lawrence. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 216 p. 12°, (Rulers of India ser.) cl., 60 c.

Manuel Venegas, the "Child of the ball," is supposed to be the incarnate devil by his fellow-citizens. His father lost all his possessions to a usurer. Manuel fell in love with this man's daughter, but was driven from his Spanish home and found a fortune in the West Indies. After eight years he returned and found the girl married but still loving him. The exciting story of fêtes, processions, balls and religious ceremonies that end in bloodshed shows the natures of Manuel and Soledad to be totally uncontrolled, but not wholly evil.

Albee, J: Prose idyls. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 3+172 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A tasteful little volume, full of engaging fancies which might have been clothed in verse, but are presented in delicate prose. The variety and range of the subjects treated are indicated by the titles, some of which are as follows: White thoughts, The grammarian in love, The cracked bell, The bird sang, Reminiscence of Virgil, The madonna, The statue of my friend. The faith curer, The queen's handkerchief, Love-letters, The soul of things, The house door, The voice, The superfluous man, Brethren of the common lot. The family mirror, The pool, Pigmies, The devil's bargain.

Aldèmah, (pseud.) The queens: passages from the lives of Elizabeth, Queen of England, and Mary, Queen of Scotland. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., 1892. c. 3-205 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A drama covering the chief events in the lives of Mary and Elizabeth. It derives its peculiar interest from the fact that it is claimed to be the work of the "mind" of Shakespeare, which now lives in the brain of the writer. It is the first of a series of volumes which will be published as the fruits of great writers of the past to illustrate a theory that minds are immortal as well as souls. Shakespeare's mind, we are told, still exists, and is capable of as great literary activity and of the production of original works as when it inhabited its first tenement.

Aldrich, Anna Morrison. The travels of three insects; il. by Mary A. Morrison. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1892. c. unp. sq. D. cl., $1.

Aldrich, Anne Reeve. Songs about life, love and death. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 8+133 p. S. cl., $1.25.

With a single exception this volume remains as Miss Aldrich had left it in her publisher's hands, just before her death last June. This exception is a poem, entitled "Death at daybreak," dictated during her illness when she was too weak to hold the pen, and not long before she herself died—at the age of twenty-six—just before dawn. The collection represents her maturer poems. Delicately bound in white, green and gold.

Aldrich, Mrs. Auretta Roys. Children, their models and critics. N. Y., Harper, 1893 [1892.] c. 6+158 p. S. cl., 75 c.

The author thinks that mothers, although as a rule wonderfully unselfish, still do not make their children's lives as happy and useful as they might be owing to their ignorance of their childish aspirations and heartaches. In eight short chapters she points out mothers' sins of omission and commission, and their far-reaching consequences. The kindergarten is advocated.

Aldrich, Wilbur. Farming corporations. N. Y., W. Aldrich & Co., 120 Broadway, 1892. c. 11+255 p. D. cl., $1.

A project is outlined in this volume of a strictly business character, which is designed to improve the condition of the farmer. The author says his aim throughout is "to show farmers and other producers how to organize themselves successfully after the example of the successful; how themselves to manage the wealth created by their own labor; and how to retain the proceeds of their exertions long enough to make their own bargain for the comforts they wish to get in exchange, and to determine upon the distribution of the surplus."

His stepfatber has been serving a term of ten years in prison when the story opens, and shortly appears on the scene to the great distress of Harry and his mother. In spitc of opposition and disappointments the young boatuan's life is a success.

Alger, W: Rounseville. The sources of consolation iu human life. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 10+437 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Mr. Alger says he has four reasons for offering a new work in a field apparently already filled. His own personal experience of trial and sorrow has been deep and varied, and, he thinks, exceptional. His reflection on that experience, owing to a studious and meditative lot apart from the material struggle of society, has also, as he believes, been uncommonly earnest and patient. Iu consequence of these facts he feels he has something to say which is fitted to be of use to the different classes of sufferers always abounding in the world. He hopes to communicate his message in a winsome and effective way, free from the perfunctory quality and mawkish traits so prominent in most books dedicated to this subject.

Personal recollections incidental to the War of the Rebellion are given in chronological order, with description of soldier life in camp, bivouac and battlefield. The author, who enlisted at fourteen years of age, accounts for that fact, and gives a detailed and humorous account of his equipping for the United States Cavalry, and claims that his was not an individual experience. The reminiscences end 25 years after the war with a description of a regimental reunion.

Marietta Ambrosi is an Italian who has made her home in America for many years. Her material is drawn from her own experience, her little work presenting the true story of the child-life of an Italian girl. It takes up the simple details of the home, the little games and plays which Marietta was always improvising; the various kinds of work in which children assist in Italy, such as helping to raise and care for silkworms, selling cocoons, making card-cases, portfolios, etc.; the fête days, the religious ceremonies, and other features of the life of a peasant child in sunny Italy.

An attempt to reconstruct the village and manorial organization and life in England at the beginning of the eleventh century. The study is based largely on the well-known documents Rectitudines Singularum Personarum and Gerefa, the latter of which has never before been used for historical purposes. In addition, all Anglo-Saxon literature has been put under contribution, that the study might be as complete as possible. Such reconstruction has more than a merely antiquarian interest, for it relates to an important period of English economic history. It shows the complete isolation of local life, the pre-eminence of agriculture and the secondary importance of craft and artisan work.

This book was first published in 1862. The author was born at Danbury, Conn., in 1817, educated at Williams College, admitted to the bar, afterwards became Congregational minister, and in 1868, having adopted the Irvingite doctrines, he became pastor of the Catholic Apostolic Church at Hartford, Conn. Seventy-seven new authorities have been added to the former list of authors consulted, and the work has been accurately brought up to date in its descriptions of the Holy Land and other points on which Biblical students of the past thirty years have poured the light of knowledge. The present work differs from the original in putting the longer discussions into small type, which gains space and enables the average reader to pass them by unless interested to carry his investigations further.

Annual American catalogue, 1891: being the full titles, with descriptive notes, of all books recorded in the Publishers' Weekly, 1891, with author, title, and subject index, publishers' annual lists, and directory of publishers. [Second supplement to the American Catalogue, 1884–90.] N. Y., Office of the Publishers' Weekly, 1892. c. 18+212+144 p. O. hf. leath., $3.50.

During 1891 the "Weekly Record" was kept in type, and this catalogue has therefore been corrected more accurately than was possible with the processes tried in former years. In 1886 the lists were cut up, pasted and photographed on plates for printing. In 1887 and 1888 each separate title was electrotyped and nailed on blocks for printing. In 1889 and 1890 the pasting was tried again, but was abandoned because it was found that the catalogue was always belated by the uncertainty of weather during the manufacture of plates. The index, giving titles under authors, titles and subjects, and referring to the number of P. W. in which the book was entered, is a valuable part of the catalogue.

The author is Professor of Botany in the New Jersey State Normal School. The ground covered is that of the wild and cultivated trees found east of the Rocky Mountains and north of the southern boundary of Virginia and Missouri. The illustrations are taken from original drawings from nature by the author, and the size of the illustration as compared with the specimen is indicated by fractions. A conservative course has been adopted in nomenclature. Scientific names are marked to indicate pronunciation.

The name of "Robert Appleton" is said to hide the identity of a false Count who was exposed and expelled from Boston society. In revenge he has written a far from flattering or charitable description of the manners, customs, virtues and vices of the Back Bay society. The central figure represents an unfaithful wife, whose various lovers are graphically portrayed, and whose false and silly views of life and love are given considerable space.

An English country house, where a merry party of guests is assembled, is the scene in which the "conquering heroine," in the guise of a charming Irish girl, appears. She breaks up several promising flirtations, and causes general unhappiness by her witching ways before she makes her final choice and dismisses her unlucky victims.

Lady Patricia Gifford was the daughter of an impecunious Irish peer, who married an Englishman 20 years her senior, with a view to improving her condition. The death of her husband soon after their marriage leaves Lady Patty in possession of a life's income, and a daughter's future to provide for. She does this according to her lights, which are those of a very frivolous society woman. Helene, who has notions of her own, revolts, and the developments are unexpected.

English country life with its tennis parties, dances, musical evenings and long walks is pictured with skill and humor. The heroine comes of a family in which there have been clergymen of high degree for generations. Her love-story does not run smooth. The tale hinges on the English law that makes a child legitimate if parents are legally married just before its birth. Most innocently the leading characters suffer from unforeseen complications.

"The O'Connor"—old and broken down in fortune—and his three lovely daughters are the characters. How the girls all find eligible suitors, and also discover a box full of gold long buried by a revengeful ancestor, is told with much humor and cleverness.

Nine papers on the various armies of the world that have been for some time a feature of Harper's Magazine; each paper is written by a prominent military man of the country whose army is described: The army of the United States being by Brig.-Gen. Wesley Merritt; that of Great Britain by General Viscount Wolseley; The German army by Lieut.-Col. Exner; The French army by Gen. Lewal; The Russian army by "A Russian General;" The Austro-Hungarian army by Gen. Baron von Kuhn; The Italian army by Col. G. Goirau; The Mexican army by Thomas A. Janvier. The papers embrace a comprehensive exposition of the armies of the United States, Europe and Mexico, their organization, discipline, equipment and comparative efficiency, and the cost of their maintenance.

Armour, J: M. Mercy; its place in the divine government. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, 1892. c. '91. 244 p. O. cl., $1.25.

The third volume of the author presenting his views on the government of God. The first was "Atonement and law," the second "Divine method of life." In this concluding volume he shows that mercy is the highest inherent attribute of God; that it is in itself the highest form of law; and that mercy unites with and controls the sovereignty of God in the entire economy of redemption.

Abel Long, the American nobleman, is a rough mountaineer of Kentucky who spends his life in doing kind acts, especially to overburdened women. The story tells of the finding of gold among the mountains, the devastations of the bears among the sheep, the inroads of the revenue collectors among the whiskey stills, and the sorrows, dangers and simple pleasures of the inhabitants. The nobleman's life is sacrificed to his ideals of virtue and unselfishness.

Mary Cary starts out for Folly Hill in quest of a four-leaf clover in company with her old friend, Mr. Greenbeard. They find the plant, which gains them entrance into Fairyland. In these realms Miss Mary is the heroine in a series of wonderful incidents, which later prove to be only the dreams of a sleeping child. Indignantly refuting this fact, she calls on her old friend to continue the story of their adventures, and the result is a fanciful tale, in which many facts of natural history are strangely mixed with the fairies.

Elfie was a dissatisfied and sceptical little girl who asked many questions relative to the moon, to Mother Goose and the many other personages of the nursery rhymes. A grown-up artist friend tells her that all these people live in the "Realm of Fancy," and that they cannot be seen or visited unless with the aid of a good fairy named "E-ma-ji-na-shun." The fairy is called up for Elfie's benefit, and with him she visits his realms and witnesses a number of queer and ridiculous things.

"Lady Susan" is a posthumous novel, permission to print it having been given by Jane Austen's aunt, Lady Knatchbull, in whose possession was the autograph copy. It is written in the form of letters, and is supposed to be an early production. "The Watsons" was left by its author a fragment without a name. It is also printed for the first time. The memoir by her nephew includes the cancelled chapter of "Persuasion," and a short specimen of her childish stories.

This book first went on record in the P. W. "Weekly Record" of December 2, 1876. In fifteen years fifteen thousand copies have been sold and the book has been found well adapted to promote the rapid reading of large portions of the Iliad and Odyssey. The present revision is by a Professor of the University of California. An attempt to distinguish more clearly between the real and implied meanings of words, and a more concise and simple treatment of the prepositions, particles and conjunctions are the chief changes in this latest edition of a practical text-book.

Azarias, Brother, [pseud. for P. F. Mullany.] Phases of thought and criticism. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 5+273 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A large portion of this volume has already appeared in print in pamphlets and in the pages of the American Catholic Quarterly Review. The first seven chapters analyze thought and criticism, the author insisting upon individuality and fearless search for truth. The three next chapters analyze "The Imitation of Christ," "The Divina Commedia" and "In Memoriam" on the lines of thought laid down in the first seven. The conclusion dwells upon the strong religious feeling of the present day, which the author thinks stronger than Rationalism and Agnosticism. A good index makes this collection of thoughts on mental, moral and physical duty practically available.

Baby John; by the author of "Miss Toosey's mission." Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 3–114 p. S. cl., 50 c.

Bacheller, Irving. The master of silence: a romance. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. c. 3–176 p. D. (Fiction, fact and fancy ser.) cl., 75 c.

Rayel Lane, the hero of this strange romance, lives for eighteen years shut up in an isolated house in the northern part of New York State, his only companions being his father, a deaf-mute and a tame lion. He has never been taught to speak, with the exception of a few words of Sanscrit, and has a strange power of reading other men's minds. Add to this the fact that he has never seen a woman, and some conception may be formed of the strange part he plays in the world after his father's death. An English cousin, escaping a conspiracy against his life, finds Rayel in his retreat, teaches him language and takes him to New York City. Love for the same woman tests the characters of both men.

Bible verses are the texts for ten papers, entitled Before the world was; A child; Ministering; Crucified; Risen; Ascended; Coming again; In glory. These outline the characteristics of Jesus Christ in the varied stages of his existence on earth. The purpose is to bring out by both precept and example the lessons of Christ's life.

Baker, W: S., comp. Itinerary of General Washington, from June 15, 1775, to December 23, 1783. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. 3+334 p. por. O. cl., $2.50.

Extensive research and judgment in selection are exhibited in the compilation of this book, the work of Mr. Baker, whose contributions to Washingtoniana are well known. His sources of information are the letters of Washington, published and unpublished, "orderly" books and contemporaneous diaries and newspapers. The material brought together is a concise record of the prominent events in our War for Independence, covering the period from Washington's appointment as Commander-in-Chief of the Continental forces, June 15, 1775, to the surrender of his commission, Dec. 23, 1783.

The hope of producing a book helpful to the great brotherhood of teachers inspired this volume. During four decades these chapters have been given as lessons to many classes of teachers. The practical results in a thousand schools have been observed with intense interest. From year to year, in the light of experience and study and criticism, these lessons have been remodelled. They are now submitted in the form which seems to the author best calculated to aid teachers in preparing themselves for their great work.—Preface.

Balestier, Josephine. Life and Sylvia: a Christmas journey; il. by Margaret Wendell Huntingdon. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 6–58 p. D. bds., 50 c.

Actuated by discontent at her Uncle Will's evasive answer to her query, "What is ''Sperince?'" precocious little Sylvia Delamere determines to find out for herself. Overhearing a caller reading to her mother of the experience that could be gained in Mulberry Street, New York, she starts out to find in that quarter "Life," who, her uncle had told her, gave experience. The strange consequences of this trip are told in the story.

Balestier, Wolcott. The average woman; with a preface by H: James. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 5–260 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The opening story, called "Reffey," and first published in the Century, tells of the rivalry of two girls for the love of a Denver railroad conductor, of a western wedding, and the final revengeful act of the bride. Included with this are two other stories, entitled "A common story" and "Captain, my captain," all describing the "average woman."

Ballantine, W: G. Ezekiel: a literary study of his prophecy. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1892.] c. 32 p. S. pap., 15 c.

Ezekiel was the prophet of Judah's renaissance as Jeremiah was the prophet of her decline and fall. He specially emphasizes five themes: God's majesty, Israel's apostasy and chastisement, The judgments to come on heathen nations, Israel's restoration, and The final consummation of the kingdom of peace. His place among the sacred writers "is like that of Bach among musicians, or of Chaucer among poets."

Ballantine, W: G. Jeremiah: a character study. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1892.] c. 32 p. S. pap., 15 c.

The President of Oberlin College considers Jeremiah the most misunderstood of all the great men of history. He shows that neither Moses, nor Joshua, nor Samuel, nor Elijah, nor Paul was ever subjected to a tithe of what Jeremiah endured. He was an ardent patriot, whose clearly appointed duty it was to discourage national hopes and counsel submission to a foreign foe. His unselfish grief made him one of the grandest characters of history.

A book on South America and its adjacent islands is specially timely. Mr. Ballou gives quite a picture of Chili geographically, politically and socially. Like all his other books, it rouses in the reader's mind a great wish to travel, and thoroughly posts him on what he ought to see should he find his way clear to follow in Mr. Ballou's steps.

Eighteen short stories.

Balzac, Honoré de. Albert Savarus; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 3+301 p. D. hf. rus., $1.50.

Besides "Albert Savarus" contains two other stories, "Paz" and "Madame Firmiani." "Albert Savarus" is a story of social conditions in provincial France a half-century ago. The hero's one aim in life is to marry a woman he loves, who is far above him in rank. All the work he accomplishes tends to raise him. His ambition has carried him to the point he has been working for, when an impish girl cruelly destroys his happiness and life. "Paz" depicts the best Parisian Polish society of Balzac's time. "Mme. Firmiani" is a short story in Balzac's best vein.

Balzac, Honoré de. The Chouans: Brittany in 1799: tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1893 [1892.] c. 4+383 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

"The Chouans" was the name applied to the royalist insurgents in the west of France at the time of the Revolution. This story opens in Brittany in 1799, where the civil war that had been brought to a close three years previously has again been opened. The plot has for its central figure the Marquis de Montauran sent by the First Consul to consult with the Chouan leaders. He was betrayed to death by a woman who loved him.

Balzac, Honoré de. The country doctor: a novel; from the French, by Mrs. F: M. Dey.

Balzac, Honoré de. Pierrette. [Also,] The Vicar of Tours; tr. by Katharine Prescott Wormeley. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 4+337 p. D. hf. mor., $1.50.

Pierrette, the tenderly loved little grand-daughter of a ruined Vendée lumber merchant, is forced to accept the charity of rich cousins. The story of her miserable life, which ends in a startling tragedy, is told with Balzac's genius for detail at its very best. "The Vicar of Tours" illustrates the perpetual struggle going on between the individual and the social system. Balzac asks and answers the question, "Will the brotherhood of man prove to be only a sublime error?"

Presents in outline the history of surveys, routes and transportation from the aboriginal and pastoral era of the Pacific coast, when here and there an Indian trail or rough wagon-road relieved the solitude of wilderness primeval, until, in 1890, fine overland railroads bore to and fro their twenty millions of passengers and their thirty million tons of freight. This phase of the growth of the commonwealth has been in the hands of Charles Crocker, George H. Sisson, Josiah Failing, Henry Failing, James Steel, Donald Mackay, Adolph G. Russ, Joseph P. Hale, George H. Bonebrake, Albert Miller, Joseph Emeric, Orville D. Baldwin, Chauncey H. Phillips, Jerome B. Wheeler, etc.

Banks, Mrs. G. Linnæus. Miss Pringle's pearls; il. by Frank Dadd. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1892.] 4+280 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A story of English country home life. Miss Phillis Penelope Pringle is a quaint, noble little old maid, with an eccentric pride in her alliterative name, which she regards as symbolizing the "precious pearls" of "prudence, patience and piety." She plays an important part in the lives of her young relatives, and her despised "pearls" prove of value to their possessors. The dénouement is unexpected and reveals little Miss Pringle in an entirely new light.

Banks, L: Albert, D.D. The revival quiver. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. 9+254 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Chapters, telling how successful revivals have been planned and what methods have been used; also giving practical hints how to reach, win, and save the people. The main part of the work consists of topics, texts and outlines of one hundred and ten sermons. The suggestive outlines of four watch-night sermons are also given.

Barbour, L. G., D.D. The end of time: a poem of the future. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 3+191 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The main story of the poem centres around a city in which is gathered the remnant of the Christians. The remainder of the believers in Christ have been killed in a religious war which has been waged by the opponents of Christianity, and now the remnant is besieged and the enemy seems likely to conquer. At this extremity, however, angelic help appears, the city is saved, time ends, eternity begins.

Baring-Gould, Sabine. In the roar of the sea. N. Y., National Book Co., [1892.] c. '91. 2–407 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

A tale of the Cornish coast in the days of the Georges, in which smuggling and wreckage, encounters between the government force and the smugglers, and hair-breadth escapes and thrilling situations form a large part of the story. There is, however, a love-tale with an unconventional heroine—Judith Trevisa—who is the central figure in numerous daring escapades.

Baring-Gould, Sabine. Margery of Quether, and other stories. N. Y., Lovell, Gestefeld & Co., [1892.] c. 4–286 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50c.

Although the time of the first story is the nineteenth century, it is evidently founded on an old superstition. George Rosedhu, of Foggaton, Lamerton Parish, Devonshire, tells of matrimonial intentions in which Margery Palmer, of Quether, was the centre of attraction until an eventful Christmas Eve, on which a meeting with another Margery transforms him strangely, and results in an exciting experience in which both "Margerys" are important figures. Included with this are four other short stories called "Tom A' Tudlams;" "At the Y;" "Major Cornelius;" "Wanted a reader."

Barr, Mrs. Amelia E. Love for an hour is love forever. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. c. '91. 3+306 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A charming case of love at first sight between Francesca Atherton and Lancelot Leigh is interrupted by class hostility, for the daughter of Squire Atherton must not marry the son of a cotton-spinner. Even when this objection is overborne and the lovers are formally engaged, circumstances attendant on the Manchester cotton famine of 1861–65 change the current of their lives, and the lovers are parted with the shadow of a crime between them. After long waiting and hope deferred, circumstances are explained, Francesca seeks her lover in Mexico, and all ends happily. A minor love-drama is also woven in the story.

Barr, Mrs. Amelia E. Michael and Theodora: a Russian story. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] c. 2–168 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

Michael and Theodora, children of Prince and Princess Bazaroff, were forced to live with their Uncle Sergius, who had been instrumental in securing their parents' exile from Russia. While the children were experiencing some of the heartless treatment of this cruel relative, chance threw into Michael's hands a document which proved that the Bazaroffs were unjustly banished. Michael and Theodora together obtain their parents' pardon, and the Czar restores their estate.

Barr, Mrs. Amelia E. The preacher's daughter: a domestic romance. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] c. 3+297 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Life in a small Yorkshire spinning village forty years ago is well described. John Denby, a wealthy mill-owner, marries "the preacher's daughter," pretty, selfish, unreasonable Salome, who is soon as discontented in her new and luxurious home as in the bare quarters of a Wesleyan minister. Her love for a scapegrace brother leads her into temptations which she cannot resist, but her husband's patient love finally wins the way to her heart. The "cotton famine" of 1860–64, with its attendant sufferings, is painted in detail.

Two people—a young man and a young woman—who meet on a European steamer outward bound, and become mutually interested, are the chief characters in a clever love-tale. A bewitching blonde is on hand with an unsuccessful attempt to make mischief. Besides the title-story there are twelve other sketches, the scenes of which are placed upon steamers making voyages between America and England. Mr. Robert Barr is a Canadian.

Barrows, S: J. The evolution of the Afric-American. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 315–345 p. D. (Evolution ser., no. 28.) pap., 10 c.

The editor of the Christian Register views the ethnological, climatic and economic aspects of the race problem. He gives a mass of facts. He believes the two races will eventually get on perfectly well together, whether they are blended in one person or race, or separated into two. He believes education can alone work out the present difficulties, and that the intelligent and refined men of both races will agree together. There was some discussion of the lecture before the Brooklyn Ethical Association, and its substance is shortly stated.

There are but sixteen or seventeen thousand of these aboriginal inhabitants of Japan alive to-day. The first record of them is found in a Japanese book dated A.D. 712. Their present home is Yezo and the Kurile Islands and Saghalien, which now belongs to Russia. Ainu means "man." They are a filthy and degraded-looking race, but at heart a kind and sympathetic people. The author has been a missionary among them, and here describes their manners, customs, their religion, special superstitions, etc.

Bates, Fanny D., ["Beulah," pseud.] Tatters: a novel. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. 5+311 p. por. D. (Good company ser., no. 17.) pap., 50 c.
Tatters is first seen as a ragged, elfish child in the Whitechapel district, London, by a stranger on a slumming expedition. Through his investigation is revealed a strange and romantic story in which an English lord, the daughter of an exiled Austrian prince, Arthur Raglan, and Lucy Mawbery are the chief actors. Tatters, while in the Lunley Court tenement and Queen's Rest, is subject to spiritual visitation and dreams.

The tragedy of a public executioner, the stigma of his abhorred trade branded upon his son, and the results to father and child of their contact with an impetuous physician—these elements are woven into a strong story, well told, in which is made a lucid plea for more rational treatment of crime and criminals than modern law affords. Scene and actors are Spanish, and there is abundant local color.

Beard, Dan. Moonblight, and "Six feet of romance;" il. by the author. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. c. 8–221 p. D. cl., $1.
A mining town of Pennsylvania is the scene. While an owner of the mines is sojourning in the American House, a passing interest in the library of the former occupant of his room leads him to read an illuminated missal, entitled "Dreams and moonblight." According to the writer, those affected by this complaint are unable to distinguish dreams from realities. To rid himself of impressions induced by reading this book he takes up a second work, which impels him to wish to see things as they are. The wish is realized. What he sees enables him to contrast the conditions of an American miner's life with his own, and to devise a scheme that involves social reform, progressive action, and the interests both of capitalists and workmen. There is included an imaginative story in which six feet and an old foot-stove are important factors.

P'tit homme was the sobriquet of Charles Leflot, page in the service of Count Goutran de Platere. This lad is called upon to testify as to the murderer of his master. On his evidence and that of Mathilde de Cloziers is dependent a man's guilt and a woman's honor. The issues of the trial of the Baron de Cloziers are sensational and surprising.

The story opens in Rome after the fall of the Casa Bortenyi. Andrée, an artist, is hastily summoned to the death-bed of a young sculptor, who beseeches him to convey the news of his death to the beloved daughter of a Hamburg banker. In fulfilling this commission the artist loses his heart, and there follows a romance of contradictions and unexpected action.

Berry, J. L. Linked with fate. Chic., H. J. Smith & Co., 1892. c. 12–228 p. il. D. (Silver ser., v. 2, no. 3.) pap., 25 c.

At a juncture in his lifewhere he expected great happiness Dudley Warren was the victim of an accident that made his past a blank. He identifies himself as another man, whose name he takes. Unconsciously he reproduces some of the scenes he has lived in, and this is the means by which fate brings about a reunion and an unlooked-for event.

Besant, Walter. The ivory gate: a novel. Library ed. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4+359 p. D. cl., $1.25.

An apparently unaccountable and inexplicable forgery is the incident from which the story is evolved. Edward Dering, a rich solicitor of London, in looking over his check-books finds that a check has been drawn for £720, seemingly in his own handwriting, to Edmund Gray. Who Edmund Gray is and who drew the check are the questions which the story finally answers. As only two people besides Dering have access to the safe the suspicion is narrowed to a few characters—one of whom is almost ruined in his life and career by the circumstantial evidence which is gathered around him. A study is made of a strange abnormal mental condition in the chief character, who lives a dual life, being in his dreams a Socialist, while in his true character a close, hard business man.

Besant, Walter. London. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 11+509 p. il. O. cl., $3.

"In the following chapters," Mr. Besant says in his preface, "it has been my endeavor to present pictures of the city of London — instantaneous photographs showing the streets, the buildings and the citizens at work and at play. . . . The history of London has been undertaken by many writers. The presentment of the city and the people from age to age has never yet, I believe, been attempted." The text is admirably supplemented by more than a hundred illustrations of architectural remains, buildings, bridges, street scenes, works of art, etc.

Verbena Camellia Stephanotis was the name the cemetery gardener of West Finchley was desirous of conferring on his only daughter, heroine of the first of a collection of stories, now first published in book form. "The doubt of Dives, a recital of a strange metamorphose" is the second story of the collection. Following this are "The demoniac," based on the harrowing experience of a man who suffered from an hereditary vice; and "The doll's house and—after," which is an answer to Hendrik Ibsen's "Doll's house."

Bible. Old Testament. Genesis printed in colors, showing the original sources from which it is supposed to have been compiled; with introd. by Edwin Cone Bissell, Hartford, Ct. Belknap & Warfield, 1892. c. 59 p. O. cl., $1.25.

A unique and practical method has been adopted in this work to show the positions of higher critics as it respects Genesis. By means of ink of different colors, of which not less than seven kinds are used, not only are the three principal sources from which Genesis is supposed to have been compiled independently displayed, but, in some cases, the alleged source of these sources. Also, passages where the analysis is still in question, and even the part in minutest detail which the ancient editor is conjectured to have had in the work. The particular form of analysis presented is that found in the German work of Kautzsch and Socin; but it is held to be fairly representative of current views.

Substantially a condensation of the text of the author's "Harmony of the Gospels," published in 1852.

Bible. New Testament. The resultant Greek Testament: exhibiting the text in which the majority of modern editors are agreed, and containing the readings of Stephens (1550), Lachmann, Tregelles, Tischendorf and others, Westcott and Hort and the Revision committee; by R: Francis Weymouth: with an introd. by the Rev. J: Ja. Stewart Perowne, Bishop of Worcester. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1892. 23+643 p. D. cl., $3.

The main object of this edition of the Greek Testament is to enable the student to tell at a glance the different readings in the leading editions of the Testament. The editor has produced a text in which (roughly speaking) the majority of the authorities named agree. At the same time he has not merely counted names, but has weighed the reasons which may have influenced an editor in adopting any particular reading.

Bien, H. M., (Rabbi.) Ben-Beor: a story of the Anti-Messiah, in two divisions: a companion romance to Sue's "Wandering Jew." Balt., Md., Press of I: Friedenwald Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 7+528 p. D. cl., subs., $2.

Through the mysterious personage and action of Baalam Ben-Beor, a historical novel covering a cycle of over two thousand years is told. Pt. 1, "The lunar intaghos," is introductory; in it the Anti-Messiah is seen as a disturber of the inhabitants of the moon. Pt. 2 is descriptive, and brings out historical and religious episodes, such as the attack of the Taimud, the Reformation, etc. In the downfall of the conspirator the position of the Jews in the ideal millennium is shown.

Bierbower, Austin. Was Christ crucified? N. Y., The Truthseeker Co., 1892. c. 24 p. D. (Truthseeker lib., no. 15.) pap., 10 c.

The author argues the Jews were a subject people who were especially deprived of jurisdiction over capital offences and could not have crucified Christ. He also claims the Romans would not have inflicted capital punishment for heresy to a foreign religion which the Romans themselves did not accept.

Bierce, Ambrose. Tales of soldiers and civilians. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. '91. 4–300 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Ten short stories about soldiers and nine about civilians. Many of them are highly dramatic and several introduce the supernatural. The author says the chief publishing houses of the country refused to publish the book, which "owes itself to Mr. L. G. Steele, a merchant of San Francisco."

Bierce, Ambrose, and Danziger, Gustav Adolph. The monk and the hangman's daughter; il. by Theo. Hampe. N. Y. and Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., 1892. c. '91. 4–166 p. D. (Ariel lib., no. 23.) pap., 50 c.

The story rests upon a narrative contained in an old manuscript originally belonging to the Franciscan monastery at Berchtesgaden, in Bavaria, on the borders of Switzerland. This is an adaptation from a German version of the manuscript made by Herr Richard Voss, of Heidelberg. The tale is told by a young priest, who lived in 1680. The hangman's beautiful daughter was killed by him to save her from peril his jealousy made him fear for her. There are several weird scenes described, which take place in the lonely mountains in the dead of night.

It was the custom of Ruth Burton and an invalid friend to while away some of the tedious hours of the former's invalidism by committing certain verses to memory and repeating them to each other on fitting occasions. One of these tells of a fellowship of hearts, which is always ours to keep and cultivate. This verse is the motto of a story which concludes with a quaint romance. The scene is Warren, a country town.

Webster & Co., 1892. c. 3–179 p. D. (Fiction, fact and fancy ser.) cl., 75 c.

Reminiscences and interesting anecdotes of the emperor's childhood, school-days and the first years of his reign. Mr. Bigelow writes in flattering terms of his old playmate. These papers are followed by others on his army; the Germans in Russia; a Polish point of view; the Russian censor; the Roumanian peasant; Russian priests in Roumania; Crossing the Russian frontier on foot; War and famine, and A commercial forecast.

Bigelow, Poultney. Paddles and politics down the Danube; il. by the author. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. c. 4–253 p. D. (Fiction, fact and fancy ser.) cl., 75 c.

Description of a cruise made by Mr. Bigelow in an American sailing canoe the whole length of the Danube during the summer of 1891. Danubian politics are discussed in the light of information gained at first hand, and the people of the countries which border on this great highway are pictured with pen and pencil.

Into the tragic legend of Atlantis the writer has woven the Grecian myth of Deucalian and Pyrrha. Hellen, their son, from whom the Hellenes sprang, is represented as a captive in Atlantis, where his experiences lead to the fulfilment of a prophecy foretelling the destruction of Atlantis as a judgment upon the cruelty and wickedness of her people.

The "matters already settled" covered by the title are: Samuel Richardson, Edward Gibbon, William Cowper, George Borrow, Cardinal Newman, Matthew Arnold, William Hazlitt, The letters of Charles Lamb, Authors in court, Nationality, The Reformation and Sainte-Beuve. The first two papers are printed for the first time; the others have appeared in Macmillan's, the Reflector, Scribner's Magazine and the Speaker.

Bishop, Emily M. Americanized Delsarte culture. Wash., D. C., published by the author [Emily M. Bishop], 1892. c. 3–202+6 p. sq. S. cl., $1.

By Americanized Delsarte culture is meant the Delsarte art of expression broadened so that it may be of general benefit to all. The Delsarte expression exercises have been proved to be health agencies as well as helps to art, and from this standpoint they can be used even by those not musically or dramatically gifted. The little book treats of health and grace, how we stand, poise, of relaxation, respiration, walking, sitting, insomnia, nervousness, etc. It embodies the "whys and hows and wherefores" of the author's methods of practical instruction.

The point of view is, "The Sabbath was made for man." It is a rest day, given to man at his creation, recognized in the Fourth Commandment, and lifted by the teachings and example of Christ to a higher position than ever before—essential to the physical as well as the spiritual well-being of man. The most original and valuable chapter, probably, is the one on "The wide prevalence of the seven-day Week."

The misfortunes of Jacob Kron, the base-born son of a peasant and a Swedish noble, and incidents in the life of the eldest scion of the aristocratic Count Sterjnekrantz, with the action of other men of distinctively different types of manhood and social caste, serve the purpose of showing that men are but the playthings of fate. The scene is Sweden.

On August 29, 1815, Anna Ella Carroll was born at Kingston, Maryland. Her early life was passed chiefly in her father's excellent library, and her education was to him a constant delight. Many letters of Miss Carroll are given, which show how early she interested herself in politics, and how accurately posted she was on all the leading questions of her day. She was the daughter of Governor Carroll, and from the breaking out of the Rebellion was loyally devoted to the northern cause. Her writings gained the attention of Lincoln. The author claims Miss Carroll is entitled to government recognition of her great services in planning military movements. She also says documents testifying to this have been wilfully suppressed in the government catalogue.

In his latest satirical review the humorist says that England and France have in common the characteristic of self-satisfaction, but individual ways of making the trait apparent. The Frenchman, he thinks, insinuates in his conversation assumed national superiorities; the Englishman takes his for granted, believes everybody else does, and makes this evident in exasperating silence. John Bull, he contends, conceals, when possible, vice in the garb of virtue; while Jean Crapeaud gives to his virtue the semblance of vice. Other distinctive features of both nations are brought out in a series of comparisons that deal with the financial, political, social, domestic and individual life of both countries.

This little book owes its origin to Dr. Max Nordau's "Conventional lies of our civilization," and he has supplied a preface. A wager is made in a Boston hotel that no one in good society can spend a single day without telling one or more lies. To prove this dialogues are given from the daily lives of physicians, merchants, bankers, professors, lawyers, politicians, editors, preachers, etc. The final chapter inaugurates a new crusade, of which the cross shall bear the motto, 'Veritas."

Round shoulders, curvature of the spine, difficulty of respiration, distortion of the upper part of the body, and other physical deformities are traced by the author to the use—while the body is yet unformed and susceptible to all external influences—of desks and seats in school and at home that are not properly adjusted to the height and size of the pupil. In every school pupils are classified by intelligence, not by stature, and the same seats and desks are provided for the entire class. The evils of this system are clearly stated.

In this, the latest addition to the already long list of Mrs. Bolton's "Famous" books, full and entertaining sketches are given of Queen Louise of Prussia, who was not only beautiful in person and in character, but was the inspirer of German unity; Madame Récamier, who stands forth as the best type of social elegance and dignity; Susannah Wesley, whose inspiration did so much toward establishing the world-wide work of Methodism; Harriet Martineau, whose career is an encouragement to all struggling women; Jenny Lind, the "Swedish Nightingale;" Dorothea Dix, whose reform of the treatment of the insane was almost a miracle; the three noble wives of the missionary Judson, and finally of Miss Amelia B. Edwards, who proved that a woman can win glory in a field usually arrogated wholly by men.

The writer of "Through the Heart of Asia" left Paris in July, 1889, with Prince Henry of Orleans and Father Dedeken, to explore a section of country which, by its inaccessibility, has long discouraged foreign interference—the encroachments of the surveyor, the trader, the missionary and the soldier. The report is a history of the fearful cold and misery of a mid-winter journey across several thousand miles of mountainous deserts, over fifteen thousand feet in height.

The red-earth country is Devonshire, the scene of the story. Asenath was called by her husband Asenath of the Ford because she was conveyed across a ford and left in the grounds of Westaway Hall. The mystery surrounding this incident, with some surprising revelations, are dramatically told by the heroine.

A belated train is responsible for an interchange of words between Kate O'Brien and Tom Rivers. The sudden arrival of the girl's father, however, brings his conversation to an abrupt close, and Kate prepares to go home after hearing that her father is a delinquent taxpayer, and that until he makes good his deficiencies the bailiff will take possession of his house. In due time Fletcher arrives and proves himself quite a model bailiff. He is compelled, however, to send a substitute because of the sickness of his daughter. This substitute's methods involve some humorous incidents and a love-story.

A contribution to the history and solution of the problem of the elevation of the American colored people. The author was one of the first teachers who heard the call for volunteers for service, and was stationed at Old Fort Plantation, Beaufort, S. C. The people were of the lower order of plantation negroes. The author gives in this book the results of nearly thirty years' work among the people, and her experience throws great light on the conditions of labor and social life that have caused anxiety to the friends of the race.

Intended for young people who want to "make something," and have neither instructors nor elaborate tools. The author gives clear and simple directions for the construction of many useful things. Some of the chapter headings are: How to make a hat-rail; How to make a box and fit it; How to make a set of shelves; Outdoor buildings and structures; Indoor work; How to bind books and music; How to make models; Working in metals; How to make simple apparatus for chemical experiments; How to copy a medal or a cast; How to make some useful electrical appliances; A glossary of technical terms and an index to illustrations are appended.

Bowne, Borden P. The principles of ethics. N. Y., Harper, 1892. 15+309 p. O. cl., $1.75.

Designed to be not so much a detailed discussion of specific duties and virtues as an introduction to fundamental moral ideas and principles. While demonstrating the necessity of uniting the intuitive and the experience school of ethics in order to reach any working system, the author seeks to show that the aim of conduct is not abstract virtue, but fulness and richness of life. Author is Professor of Philosophy in Boston University.

Aims to combine the excellences of Euclid with those of the best modern writers, especially of Legeudre, Rouché and Comberousse. It is desired to effect two objects: (1) to teach geometric truths; (2) to discipline and invigorate the mind to train it to habits of clear and consecutive reasoning. Many of the demonstrations are those of Euclid, with minor changes frequently introduced, but the arrangement is quite different. The first edition appeared in July, 1890.

Ten short stories of Norwegian boy-life, its school feuds, secret societies, hunting expeditions, scrapes and merry-makings. Three of the tales: The wonder child, Bonnyboy, and The child of luck, were first printed in Harper's Young People. The others are: The battle of the rafts; Biceps Grimlund's Christmas vacation; The nixy's strain; The sons of the vikings; Paul Jespersen's masquerade; Lady Clare; The bear that had a bank account.

Boyesen, Hjalmar Hjorth. Essays on German literature. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 4+359 p. D. cl., $1.50.

They consist of six essays on Goethe's life and works; an essay on Schiller; three on the German novel, namely, "The evolution of the German novel," "Studies of the German novel," and "Carmen Sylva:" and three on the romantic school in Germany, viz.: "Social aspects of the German romantic school," "Novalis and the blue flower," and "Literary aspects of the romantic school."

Boyesen, Hjalmar Hjorth. The golden calf: a novel. Meadville, Pa., Flood & Vincent, The Chautauqua Century Press, 1892. c. 230 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The moral deterioration of a young fellow with high ideals which are gradually crushed by sordid aspirations for wealth to be gained at any price, is the groundwork of the story. The country boy who leaves his New England home whole souled and honest is drawn into the whirl of New York life, where he forgets his village sweetheart, marries an unlovely woman and develops into a brilliant, wealthy, corrupt politician. Mr. Boyesen wishes to describe the "American worship of the golden calf" and to expose the workings of "political machinery."

Brace, Maria Porter, [Mrs. Kimball.] A textbook of elocution. Bost., Leach, Shewell & Sanborn, [1892.] c. '92. 2-84 p. S. cl., 40 c.

Aims to set forth, upon a scientific basis, the laws of sound as applied to articulate speech. Claims to do away with superfluous and fanciful terms, and reduce the subject to its essential principles. Each one of the topics, Pitch, Force, Quality and Time, is treated from a threefold point of view, i.e., the physiological, the physical and the psychological. A few well-tried exercises for practice are offered under each topic.

Brackett, Anna C. The technique of rest. N. Y., Harper, 1892. 4+178 p. S. cl., 75 c.

An article called the "Technique of rest," published in Harper's Magazine, June, 1891, called forth the request that more be written on the subject. Hence a book in which the author purposes to help weary womankind through her own experience and actual observations. Rest is regarded as a necessity of humanity, and is viewed conditionally in the light of requirements with its accessories, and in its active and passive forms.

Bradbury, W: F. The academic geometry. Pt. 1, Plane geometry. Bost., Thompson, Brown & Co., [1892.] c. 16+220 p. D. (Bradbury's Eaton's mathematical ser.) hf. leath., 75 c.

This work is designed for high schools and academies, and is especially adapted to meet the present requirements for admission to the leading colleges and scientific schools. In addition to the treatment of the subject by the demonstration of the usual theorems, there are at the close of each separate book, and at the end of the work a large number of exercises for original demonstration, and numerous practical problems throughout the book designed to test the pupil's comprehension of the geometric principles.

Braddon, Miss M. E., [now Mrs. J: Maxwell.] The Venetians: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 3+442 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The Venetians are a pretty lace-maker and her aunt. In a quarrel caused by jealousy, a young Englishman kills another Englishman, who has promised to marry the younger woman. The homicide escapes from the crowd in the vulgar little Venetian tavern. The scene is then changed to England, where, after a time, the repentant man marries a woman who idolizes him. The lace-makers come to London and the younger woman becomes a prima-donna. Circumstantial evidence arouses the fond young wife's jealousy, and the plot deals with her methods of discovering her husband's former relations with the Venetians, which lead to a startling discovery. The end is sad, and comes about at Venice again.

Bradford, Amory H., D.D. Old wine: new bottles; some elemental doctrines in modern form. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, 1892. c. 84 p. D. leatherette, 35 c.

Four discourses on "The living God;" "The Holy Trinity;" "What is left of the Bible;" "The immortal life." The sermons were delivered during Lent and on Easter Sunday, 1892, and the topics selected as being essential—or, as Dr. Bradford phrases it, elemental—in Christianity.

Bradford, T: Lindsley, M.D. Homœopathic bibliography of the United States from 1825-1891, inclusive. Pt. 1, Alphabetical list of homœopathic books and pamphlets, books against homœopathy; magazines; directories, list of homœopathic publishers; libraries, previous American homœopathic bibliography. Pt. 2, Condensed histories, data, and bibliography of the homœopathic societies, colleges, hospitals, asylums, homes, sanitariums, asylums for the insane, dispensaries, pharmacies, life insurance, legislation now or at any time existent in the United States. Phil., Boericke & Tafel, 1892. c. 2-596 p. il. O. cl., net, $3.50; hf. mor., $4.50.

The difficulty heretofore of obtaining reliable facts of the early history of homœopathy has induced this work, which is an endeavor to give a permanent record of the books and institutions, past and present, of that school. In this, information up to January, 1892, is included, with a few instances of later information. The bibliography proper includes all books and pamphlets, with reprints from magazines issued in pamphlet form by resident physicians of the United States, whether on the subject of medicine or not; books and pamphlets on the subject written by laymen; and titles of the writings of foreign homœopathic physicians where the book bears an American imprint. Where possible the titles are literally given, and there is an index. It is claimed that this volume is as complete a collection of data regarding the progress of homœopathy in America as it is possible to make.

A novel of the Haggard type. Lexington White, American, sails from New York in the Polar King, bound to discover the North Pole. He unwittingly descends through a passage in the ice, and finally arrives in the Kingdom of Atvatabar, on an unknown continent. Here he witnesses some phenomena of physical science, notably an aërial voyage, with other wonders of art and nature supposed to have occurred in the interior of the earth. There is an additional interest in viewing in a new and strange light the achievements of occultism and the results of orthodox science. Theories of philosophy, love, marriage, art, etc., are ventilated.

The "telescope plant" was a remarkable vegetable, bearing crystal lenses of incredible power, through which messages were transmitted from the earth to the planet Mars. Wrecked at sea, the narrator of the tale was cast ashore on the island of Roxana, isolated from the rest of the world by impassable cliffs. The Roxanians were in constant communication with the inhabitants of Mars—beings ten feet high, devoid of speech, possessing twenty fingers, twenty toes and a proboscis, and dwelling in a state of blissful social democracy. After several unpleasant experiences and the assimilation of much information, the writer escapes from Roxana and returns to Chicago to cultivate a telescope plant.

Brandt, Rev. J: L. Marriage and the home. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1892. c. 3+262 p. por. D. (Pastime ser., no. 72.) pap., 25 c.

The author claims that matrimony is a divinely appointed institution, and aims to bring young people of both sexes to a consideration and investigation of the subject. In a number of brief sketches he views it religiously, socially and politically, and supports his argument by introducing the testimony of those who have made his subject a special study.

This great Roman Catholic American patriot was born in the north of Ireland in 1797. His family migrated to America in consequence of the troubles between the Catholics and Protestants in their section of Ireland. He became a priest in Philadelphia, was attached to the cathedral in New York in 1838 and soon became a great power among the citizens of New York City. He laid the corner-stone of the cathedral at Fiftieth Street in 1858 and devoted all his energies to raising funds for that great building enterprise. He was very popular, and his funeral on January 7, 1864, is one of the remembered events in the history of New York City.

Braun, Herman A. Andersonville: an object lesson on protection; a critical sketch. Milwaukee, Wis., C. D. Fahsel Pub. Co., 1892. c. 164 p. sq. S. pap., 50 c.

Some of the alleged horrors of Andersonville are considered in their relation to the personal action of Captain Henry Wirz, keeper of the Andersonville Prison, who is critically reviewed in the light of the many charges against him, and a summarized account given of the general management of this prison, which includes facts about the food question, mortality of the prisoners, and a description of the hospital, etc. The author states that this book is based on the personal observations of an eighteen months' stay in the prison, and a subsequent study of the subject. An evident effort to prove Wirz a victim to enforced conditions and misapprehension.

Browning, Rob. Robert Browning's prose life of Strafford; with an introd. by C. H. Firth, and forewords by F. J. Furnivall. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1892. 76+319 p. D. cl., $2. [Ed. limited to 500 copies.]

When John Forster was writing the "Life of Strafford" to complete a volume of Lives of eminent statesmen he fell ill, and the work was done for him by Robert Browning. It appeared in 1836 under the name of Forster, but competent critics have since decided that the great bulk of the book was Browning's. The present reprint is due to Dana Estes. Both Smith & Elder, Browning's publishers, and the Longmans, who published the original edition in 1836, declined to undertake the work. Mr. Estes, who is chairman of the Boston Browning Society, offered to share the expense of the work with any other publisher Mr. Furnivall could find. The Browning Society of England agreed to take his offer. The book has been revised and brought up to date by recognized authorities on the time it covers. A new appendix gives the chief fresh letters and documents about Strafford.

toral. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. '91. 324 p. D. (Lovell's illustrated ser., no. 13.) pap., 50 c.

Also published by the same house under the story's original title of "Come live with me, and be my love." A picturesque tale of English pastoral life, with two heroes and two heroines, whose love affairs for a time do not run very smoothly. Catharine and Bridget Thorpe are two sisters, of most opposite characters, who both love the same man. Catharine or "Squire Kate"—a woman of strong character, as vehement in her love as in her hate—is loved hopelessly by her overseer, Geoffrey Doone. The tragic element is furnished in a suspected attempt of one sister to poison the other.

Buckley, Arabella B., [Mrs. Fisher.] Mora teachings of science. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 6+122 p. D. cl., 75 c.

The six chapters forming this volume were written in 1890 for The Chautauquan, but only five appeared in its pages. The headings are: Scientific aspect of the universe and its laws; Bearing of the theory of natural selection upon the question of morality; The argument from plant life; Dawnings of morality in animal life; Self-regarding arguments for moral conduct; True morality, its origin and its bearing upon the question of immortality.

Buckley, J. M. Faith-healing, Christian science and kindred phenomena. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. '87–'92. 7+308 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Dreams, somnambulism, presentiments, spiritualism, apparitions, astrology, animal magnetism, witchcraft, mindcure, etc., are among the subjects treated. Dr. Buckley, who is the editor of the New York Christian Advocate, takes an eminently practical view of the psychological questions discussed, and has been to abundant pains to verify the many curious anecdotes with which the book abounds.

Buckley, J. M. A hereditary consumptive's successful battle for life. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 3–99 p. D. cl., 50 c.; pap., 30 c.

Consists of articles which appeared originally in the Christian Advocate, with some additional matter which the writer deems important. The principles underlying it are that pure air is an essential of life and the absence of it is death, and there is a purpose to advise consumptives how to combat disease. These papers are entitled: The case; The victory; A plan of battle; Cautions and confirmations; Climate and consumption; How Dr. Bowditch cured himself of consumption.

Buckley, J. M., D.D. Ingersoll under the microscope: Col. R. G. Ingersoll's reckless misstatements exposed, and his mental and moral characteristics analyzed. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 36 p. S. pap., 6 c.

The editor of the Christian Advocate refutes the statements made by Ingersoll in the N. Y. Evening Telegram in 1891, under the title "Colonel Ingersoll preaches a Christmas sermon." He follows this with a short treatise on the character and talents of Ingersoll, and gives some opinions held by noted men relative to him.

These poems, written in leisure hours during the past and previous years, were already in proof at the time of the author's death, and he was occupied during the last few weeks of his life in revising them. While each of the poems is complete in itself, they are so arranged as to form a connected whole, and are meant to be read consecutively. The author's intention was to represent progressive stages of feeling, and in accordance with this design he divided the book into four parts, each with its corresponding motto prefixed.

Bumpus, Hermon C. A laboratory course in invertebrate zoölogy. Providence, R. I., Preston & Rounds, 1892. c. 6+135 p. D. cl., net, $1.20.

For students who are pursuing a course of laboratory work in invertebrate zoölogy. An effort has been made to direct the work, without at the same time actually telling the student all that there is to be learned from the specimen. In the appendix a few words have been given regarding laboratory methods, etc.

An interminable list of authors have written upon this disease since the great epidemic of the fifteenth century. These authors Dr. Buret has read in chronological order. He began his researches in 1887. His object is to prove that this disease is as old as man. He sustains his thesis by quotations from all the classics of antiquity. The translator is Professor in the St. Louis College of Physicians and Surgeons.

Burnett, Mrs. Frances Hodgson. Giovanni and the other: children who have made stories. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 7+193 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

A little Italian boy with a beautiful voice, who comforted Mrs. Burnett when she mourned for her dead son at San Remo, is the hero of the first story. It is slightly autobiographical, introducing the writer and her tender reminiscences of her lost boy. "The boy who became a Socialist" is a pleasant sketch of "Geof," her second son. The other stories deal with children she has met all over the world—princes and peasants—and are full of a delightful humor.

Burnett, J. Compton, M.D. The new cure of consumption by its own virus; illustrated by numerous cases. 2d ed. rev. and enl. Phil., Boericke & Tafel, 1892. c. '91. 187 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Dr. Burnett claims that the homœopaths have used Koch's cure for consumption for the past five years. He claims the remedy must not be administered by injections, "it must be given in high, higher and highest potencies, and the doses must be far apart." The first edition of this book appeared before Dr. Koch had explained his discovery to scientists.

Burt, B. C. A history of modern philosophy, (from the Renaissance to the present.) Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 2 v., 2-368; 2-321 p. O., cl., $4.
The general character of this work is best expressed by the author in his introduction, as follows: "Modern philosophy, as distinguished from mediæval philosophy, is occupied with the immanent and concrete, rather than the transcendent and abstract; with the natural and the human, rather than the supernatural and the superhuman. As distinguished from ancient philosophy, it is occupied with the subject, rather than with the object; with thought, rather than with being." The work is divided into three periods, which are subdivided into groups of authors. A brief biography of each author is given, followed by a list of his principal works and a summary of his philosophy and of his relation to the history of modern thought. The content of his philosophic system and his influence upon succeeding thinkers are then briefly stated, together with the author's own comments and criticisms.

Burt, Mary E. Story of the German Iliad: a school reader for the sixth and seventh grades. N. Y., Effingham Maynard & Co., 1892. c. 2-119 p. il. D. cl., 50 c.
The story of the Nibelungen Lied rendered in simple English prose.

Burton, Mina E. Ruling the planets: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. 360 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 717.) pap., 50 c.
A young English banking clerk, out on a short holiday, is suddenly seized by a physician and implored to represent for a few days a patient who had just died, the object being to secure his money to his family in proper legal form, which would require at least a week. The complications arising out of his great likeness to the dead man in body, and his strong points of difference in many mental and moral characteristics, make a most readable story. The chief actors come to the conclusion that even with the best motives it is best to leave ruling the planets to a higher skill.

A brief history of the criminal court, which introduces the first police justice and some of his successors, and reproduces scenes of actual occurrence.

Butler, B: F. Autobiography and personal reminiscences of Major-General Benj. F. Butler : a review of his legal, political and military career; il., with engravings and photogravures. Bost., A. M. Thayer & Co., 1892. c. 5-1154 p. por. O., cl. subs., $3.75.
Considering his temperament and his well-known history, Gen. Butler has exercised moderation in writing his long-delayed book. Born in 1818, his autobiography covers a most important period in the political, industrial, religious and educational history of the United States. He defines his political status as "democratic politics in government and personal aristocracy." Originality and a certain ruthlessness of speech show themselves in every page. He handles men without gloves, sparing least of all his own State and the men who ruled it. Never was a man so reviled by his own side, partly owing to his strong individuality and unconciliatory manners and acts, and largely because of professional jealousy. He was not a Republican and not a graduate of West Point. The time put in at New Orleans takes up a large part of the volume. Butler had a strong sense of justice, and was always courageously on the side of the weak. Although seventy-four years of age, Gen. Butler hopes to read and refute the comments he knows his book will call out.

Butler, Maude M. Waiting and serving ; or, the Major's little sentinel. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1892. 5-139 p. S. cl., 60 c.
When Charlie Essingham met with the accident which deprived him of all hope of ever being a soldier, Major Essingham, his uncle, comforted him with the text, "They also serve who only staud aud wait." Charlie's rendering of it has interest as a story and as a moral lesson.

Butler, Nicholas Murray. The place of Comenius in the history of education. Syracuse, N. Y., C: W. Bardeen, 1892. c. 4-20 p. S. (School-room classics, no. 14.) pap., 20 c.

Butler, W:, D.D. Mexico in transition from the power of political Romanism to civil and religious liberty. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 13+325 p. por. il. O. cl., $2.
In 1851 the writer first began to take interest in the events which his book describes. During the singing of Bishop Heber's missionary hymn, "From Greenland's icy mountains," the thought came to him that the words must come true, and the Evangelical religion spread even through priest-governed Mexico. After more than forty years he here reviews the great public events that have since transpired in Northern, Central and South America, all tending to bring about the result of religions and civil liberty.

Butterworth, Hezekiah. In the boyhood of Lincoln: a tale of the Tunker school-master and the times of Black Hawk. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 7+266p. il. O. cl., $1.50.
Abraham Lincoln has become the typical character of American institutions, and it is the purpose of this book, which is a true picture in a framework of fiction, to show how that character was formed. As in the "Log school-house on the Columbia," by the same author, the adventures of a pioneer school-master are made to represent the early history of a newly settled country. It gives many of the Indian romances and cabin tales of the early settlers of Illinois, and pictures vividly Lincoln's own early hardships and manly struggles.

Butterworth, Hezekiah. Little Arthur's history of Rome from the Golden age to Constantine. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1892.] 8+256 p. map, il. D. cl., $1.25.

Aims to prepare the young reader for an interest and zest in his classical studies. The author has quoted freely the most picturesque stories of Virgil, Livy, Suetonius, and has sought to illustrate notable events by the vivid words of the Roman orators. The book is illustrated with over 100 full-page cuts and vignettes.

Butterworth, Hezekiah. Zigzag journeys on the Mississippi from Chicago to the islands of the discovery. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1892.] c. 9–319 p. il. O. cl., $2; bds., $1.50.

The present "Zigzag" book has a special aim, as had the previous volumes of the series, to prepare its readers to discuss the meaning of the Great World's Fair of 1893, and the historical progress that the enterprise represents and illustrates. Hence it is a book of stories associated for the most part with the Columbian discovery, with Chicago and the Mississippi Valley.

Byars, W: Vincent. The tempting of the king: a study of the law. In 3 pts. Pt. 1, Bathsheba; pt. 2, Uriah; pt. 3, Nathan. St. Louis, Mo., C. W. Alban & Co., [1892.] 2+53 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The story here told in blank verse, with lyrics interspersed, is that of the temptation of David by the beauty of Bathsheba, the murder of Uriah, and the curse of Nathan. "Beauty," "Duty," "Law," are the keynotes; but the contrasts between duty and the failure of idealism, when the ideal is worshipped as an idol, are made in a series of pictures which are left to preach whatever evangel the author has to proclaim.

Byington, Edwin Hallock. Open-air preaching: a practical manual for pastors, evangelists and other Christian workers. Hartford, Ct., Hartford Theological Seminary, 1892. 104 p. il. O., cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

A treatise on the history, the necessity and the methods of open-air preaching as a part of Christian work in both city and country. A résumé is given of the open-air preaching from the earliest Christian age to the present time. The writer is assistant minister of the Church of the Pilgrims, Brooklyn, N. Y. Dr. A. F. Schauffler furnishes an introduction.

Bynner, Edwin Lassetter. Zachary Phips. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c 2+512 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Zachary Phips, a Boston boy, runs away from home, goes through the Aaron Burr Expedition, the War of 1812, and the Seminole War, and becomes connected with the American legation at London. Admirable use is made of historical events and situations; there is even more adventure than story of the ordinary type, and a humorous element adds very greatly to the interest.

Caine, Hall. Cap'n Davy's honeymoon: a Manx yarn. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 207 p. D. cl., $1.

The wild coast of the Isle of Man is the scene. A Manx sailor leaves his home and makes a fortune in Peru. After ten years he returns and marries the girl who has waited for him and who had become superficially refined and educated during those years of separation. The sailor's rough manners irritate her; they quarrel and separate. The ingenious means by which another pair of lovers bring them together make quite a laughable tale.

Caine, Hall. The last confession. [Also] The blind mother. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1892.] c. 3–177 p. D. cl., $1.

"The last confession" is made by a London physician who, in the confessional, seeks assurance of forgiveness for a murder which he considers justifiable. The purpose of the writer is to show that it may be right to set aside at utmost need the letter of the sixth commandment. "The blind mother" is a pathetic little tale of a young mother's shame and suffering.

Calmettes, Fernand. A fisher-girl of France; from the French; il. by the author. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1892.] c. 4+286 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

Elise Hénin, a native of a little French fishing hamlet on the English Channel, is the fisher-girl. She is nineteen when the story opens, and with her twelve-year-old brother ships on board the sloop Bon-Pêcheur for the herring fishery. Strong as a boy, an expert sailor, tender-hearted and forgiving, she has many rough experiences. She is parted from her brother, the cruise is unsuccessful and the rude villagers think Elise the cause. Her dog Barbet is her only friend, until at last the clouds lighten and Elise gains the happiness she has so bravely earned.

Calmire. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. c. 4+742 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Fleuvemont, a rich country seat just outside of New York City, is the home of Muriel Calmire and his uncle. Muriel suffers greatly from undigested and unassimilated information on religious and social conditions. His opinions and conceptions of life are chiefly spoken to his young cousin, Nina Wahring, a healthy, lovable, common-sense girl, full of desire to understand the impulsive, poetic, unbalanced young reformer. Under her influence he finally passes from chaos into Kosmos, the two divisions of a very serious novel.

Begins and ends in Australia. A story of a woman's devotion and self-saerifiee, and a man's selfishness and and changeableness. Christmas in England and Christmas in the interior of Australia are described. An ocean voyage by sailing vessel from England to Australia, lasting the better part of three months introduces many passengers to each other and marks their characters indelibly on the reader's mind.

Cameron, Mrs. H. Lovett. A daughter's heart. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. '91. 251 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels, no. 135.) pap., 50 c.

At his mother's request Sir Jasper Keith seeks a wife in the family of the Meyricks of Raybourne. He is accepted by the older daughter, a beautiful but rather stupid blond, who is marrying him for his position and fortune; but he afterwards falls seriously in love with the younger daughter who, though not a beauty, is bright and attractive. The complications which arise, and the mother's attempts to crush the younger girl's romance and to give to the elder one all the good things of life, make the story.

Cameron, Mrs. H. Lovett. A loyal lover. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1892] c. 294 p. D. (Broadway ser., no. 8.) pap., 50 c.

The scene is Deverill Place, Southshire, England, where Sir Francis Deverill is patiently awaiting the arrival of his orphaned granddaughter; immediately after her arrival Hermoine confides to her grandfather that she has engaged to marry an actor, and at the same time declares her intention of fulfilling her promise. The interest centres in the course of the actor, and the final revelations of the novel.

Sir Lionel Denison on his deathbed makes his son Eric promise that he will never do anything contrary to his step-mother's wishes. Eric makes his steward's daughter love him and deserts her. His after life is strongly influenced by this episode of his youth. The sister of his ill-fated love plays a noble part throughout the story.

Campbell, Douglas. The Puritan in Holland, England and America: an introduction to American history. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 2 v., 49+509; 20+588 p. O. cl., $5.

"My principal design has been to show the nature of the influences which shaped the character of the Puritans of Holland and England when the early settlers of America left their homes, to trace the origin of the ideas and institutions which these settlers brought with them across the ocean, and to explain the mode in which they have worked into our present constitutional system. In following out this scheme an introductory chapter points out the present differences between England and the United States—differences of the most marked character, extending to almost every subject except that of language. The subsequent chapters relate to the history of Holland and England, their comparative civilization when America was settled, the institutions which each country had developed, the growth of their Puritanism and the influence exerted upon England and America by the Dutch Republic."—Preface.

Sir Godfrey is autocrat in his household. He is really fond of his daughter and her two daughters, but he interferes with all their hopes, wishes and amusements. The novel is a study in married and engaged couples. An old English hall is the home of Sir Godfrey. His granddaughter Gerda is imaginative and self-asserting, and she often clashes with his old-fashioned and arbitrary commands. This author always brings out the possibilities and duties of family life.

Carlén, Emilie Flygare. One year: a tale of wedlock; from the Swedish. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1892. c. 274 p. il. D. (The fair lib., no. 3.) pap., 25 c.

Mrs. Carlén, the famous Swedish novelist, was born in 1807. "One year of wedlock," also published as "Twelve months of matrimony," is among her earliest and best known works.

Carlyle, T: The French revolution: a history. N. Y., Ward, Lock, Bowden & Co., 1892. 624 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.50; pap., 50 c.

Carlyle, T: Lectures on the history of literature, delivered April to July, 1838, now printed for the first time; ed. with preface and notes by J. Reay Greene. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 11+283 p. D. cl., $1.

Twelve lectures. One of the lecturer's hearers, the late Thomas Chisholm Anstey, barrister-at-law, and subsequently member of Parliament for Youghal, took complete notes of the course, with the exception of the ninth lecture. Mr. Anstey had copies of these reports made by a few friends, and three of these have been compared. The whole course of literature is covered from Homer to Goethe. The lectures treat less of literature than of the causes of literature, its course and its significance. The omitted lecture dealt with French literature. Prof. Greene has made abundant annotations.

Carlyle, T: The last words of Thomas Carlyle. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 6+383 p. por. O. cl., $1.75.

The two manuscripts included in this volume were left among Carlyle's papers at his death. One of them, "Wotton Reinfred," is Carlyle's only essay in fiction; it is largely autobiographical, inasmuch as it represents the earlier period of Carlyle's literary development, having been written directly after his marriage: under a thin disguise it is also supposed to offer portraits and reminiscences of Irving, Thackeray and Coleridge. The other, "Excursion (Futile enough) to Paris," offers a vivid picture of Carlyle's personality. It is the unreserved daily record of a journey in company with the Brownings, when Carlyle paid a visit to Lord Ashburton.

Carradine, B., D.D. Church entertainments: twenty objections. Syracuse, N. Y., A. W. Hall, 1892. c. 2+96 p. S. cl., 50 c.; pap., 30 c.

The church entertainment is considered from twenty points. The first of these is an aversion to converting the church into a money-making institution, which the author believes a perversion and desecration of the house of God; and so all of his objections are enumerated and defined, and arguments against them are briefly stated.

Carrier, A: S. The Hebrew verb: a series of tabular studies. Chic., Max Stern & Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 2+33 p. O. bds., 50 c.

In this supplemental and introductory manual the design is to make verbal construction comprehensive by tracing the inflection of different classes of verbs. An originality is claimed for the treatment of derivatives and arrangement of matter.

Carryl, C: E. The admiral's caravan; il. by Reginald B. Birch. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. '91, '92. 4–140 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The scene of the story is laid in Dreamland, the principal characters being a little girl and a wooden admiral and his companions. Dorothy witnesses a great many queer scenes and meets many odd characters in Dreamland, her adventures being something like those of Davy in "Davy and the goblin," by the same author.

Carter, Franklin. Mark Hopkins. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 11+365 p. D. (American religious leaders.) cl., $1.25.

Mark Hopkins, born in 1802, belonged among the later religious leaders of New England. There is a lack of material for a complete estimate of him as a man. His biographer was his pupil, and is now his successor as President of Williams College, which position Dr. Hopkins held for thirty-six years. For thirty years also he was President of the American Board of Commissioners for Foreign Missions. A chronologieal table of tne principal dates in Dr. Hopkins' life opens the volume, and a list of ninety of his published writings concludes it.

Cartwright, Julia. Sacharissa: some account of Dorothy, Countess of Sunderland, her family and friends, 1617–1684; with por. after Van Dyke. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. 8°, cl., $3.75.

Carus, Paul. Homilies of science. Chic., The Open Court Pub. Co., 1892. 9+317 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Editorial articles gathered from The Open Court. "The principle," it is claimed, "that pervades them is to preach an ethics that is based upon truth and upon truth alone." They are grouped under the following headings: Religion and religious growth; Progress and religious life; God and world; The soul and the laws of soul life; Death and immortality; Free thought, doubt and unfaith; Ethics and practical life; Society and politics.

Carus, Paul. Truth in fiction: twelve tales with a moral. Chic., The Open Court Publishing Co., 1893 [1892.] c. 5+111 p. O. cl., $1.

Contents: The chief's daughter; After the distribution of the type; The clock or the watches; The mysterious beetle; The highest trump in argument; The philosoper's martyrdom; The convention of the animals; The people by the sea; The dross is discarded but nothing is lost; Charity; Capital and labor; Ben-Midrash, the gardeuer of Galilee.

Case, Mary Emily. The love of the world: a book of religious meditation. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. 4–92 p. S. cl., $1.

The author is Professor of Latin and Greek at Wells College. This is a little book of religious meditations, issued somewhat in the style of Thomas à Kempis' "Imitation of Christ." Its liberal Christianity is sure to appeal to a large number of people. It is daintily bound in pearl-gray cloth covers, with cover design in gold.

Castlemon, Harry, [pseud. for C: A. Fosdick.] Marcy the refugee: il. by G: C. White. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1892.] c. 3+432 p. D. (Castlemon's war ser.) cl., $1.25.

This story takes up once more the history of the exploits and adventures of the daring young Union hero Marcy Gray, the North Corolina boy, who tried so hard and so unsuccessfully to be "true to his colors." The larger part of the story takes place at the Gray plantation, where Marcy and his mother are attacked by masked robbers who think they have money hidden. Also includes the coming of the Burnside expedition to Roanoke Island.

Caswell, Mrs. Harriet S. Our life among the Iroquois Indians. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1892.] c. 11+321 p. por. il. D cl., $1.50.

Mrs. Caswell belongs to a family well known in missionary circles, and speaks from an experience of many years among the Iroquois Indians in Western New York. Although these Indians, the descendants of the well-known Six Nations, live on reservations near Buffalo, they are far removed from the direct influences of civilization. In the story much is seen of the devotion of missionaries to the Indian cause, and the customs, traditions and folk-lore of a once powerful people are often set forth in the words of an Indian convert or interpreter.

Catalogue of an exhibition of illuminated and painted manuscripts, together with a few early printed books with illuminations; [Also,] some examples of Persian manuscripts; with plates in fac-simile and an introductory essay. N. Y., The Grolier Club, 1892. c. 28+64 p. il. O. cl., $5.

Don Finimondone was an old massaro or peasant in a small settlement, who won this sobriquet because of a constant habit of predicting evil. The story tells of some of the effects of his predictions in regard to the Carnival and a wedding. In addition to this the book contains A Calabrian Penelope; The story of Cirillo; The tree of the bride; A trumpet call; Princess Humming Bird. The latter is patrician in setting, while the others depict the life of the Italian peasantry.

Cheap money experiments in past and present times; reprinted with slight revision from "Topics of the time," in the Century Magazine, March, 1891, to January, 1892. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. '91, '92. 4–46 p. D. pap.,5 c.

This series of articles begins with a plain exposition of the imperative need on the part of the people of this country of a clear conviction that no money except the best is worth having, and that "cheap money," in any and all forms, is a delusion from which all people should pray to be delivered. This is followed by a historical survey of the more notable of the many experiments which have been made in various countries and times to improve the condition of states and nations by making money cheap and plentiful.

Cheap-money experiments, in past and present times; reprinted with slight revision from Topics of the Time in the Century Magazine. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. '91, '92. 3–122 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Consists of a number of papers on various cheap-money plans, which originally appeared in the Century Magazine, and are now reprinted, with revisions. Contains chapters on "The Argentine cheap-money paradise," "Mississippi crop-moving currency," "Alabama's thousand-dollar-a-day blunder," "The 'per-capita' delusion," "The sub-treasury cheap-money plan," etc.

Cheney, Ednah D. Life of Christian Daniel Rauch, of Berlin, Germany, sculptor; drawn from German authorities. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 9+331 p. il. por. O. cl., $3.

Christian Daniel Rauch was a world-renowned sculptor born in Germany, not far from Cassel, Jan. 2, 1777; he died in 1857. He is best known by his statue of Frederick the Great at Berlin, and the monuments of King William and Queen Louise, at Charlottenberg; he was also the sculptor of the "Victories" of the Walhalla, the monument to Albrecht Dürer, and many other beautiful works. Mrs. Cheney acknowledges herself deeply indebted for the greater part of her material to Dr. Egger's voluminous work on Rauch published in Germany. Besides an account of Rauch's life and works, there is a chapter giving the details of Queen Louise's life, chapters on German art, Rauch's school and influence on modern art, etc.

Cheney, J: Vance. The golden guess: essays on poetry and the poets. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. '91. 5+292 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Mr. Cheney, in this series of essays, shows what are the essentials of true poetry, as determined by those whose literary pre-eminence gives authority to their opinions upon the subject: and, after having established the standard, he proceeds to test the productions of some of our leading poets by it. The following are the titles of the essays: "The old notion of poetry," "Who are the great poets?" "Matthew Arnold, the English critic," "What about Browning?" "Hawthorne," "Tennyson and his critics," "Six minutes with Swinburne," "Music, or the tone poetry." Mr. Cheney is the author of "Thistle-drift" and other volumes of poems, and is the librarian of the San Francisco Public Library.

Cheney, Simeon Pease. Wood-notes wild: notations of bird music; col. and arr., with appendix, notes, bibliography and general index, by J: Vance Cheney. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. '91. 12+261 p. por. D. cl., $2.

Simeon Pease Cheney was a music-teacher for many years, and, being an ardent lover of nature, devoted much time to the observation of the music of the birds in different parts of the United States. This observation convinced Mr. Cheney that all music in nature, animate and inanimate, is worthy of study and imitation; that it gives out charming tones, and forms pleasing melodic strains, using all the intervals of the major and minor scales, in perfection of intonation and finish of execution. The author supports this statement by giving the songs of many birds in musical notation on the staff. Shortly after writing these papers Mr. Cheney passed away, and the work has been edited by his son, John Vance Cheney, librarian of the public library, San Francisco, who has added an appendix, notes and bibliography of much value, and a complete index.

Chilton, E. The history of a failure, and other tales. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 3+205 p. S. cl., $1.

Professor Postlethwaite believed it criminal for people possessing hereditary ailments to marry. In accordance with these views he selected a wife. His experiment in marriage seemed to be a success until the birth of their son Emerson, whose sickly constitution caused the Professor to constantly refer to the lad as a human failure; his final deductions, however, are a surprise, and end a rather pathetic story, which has a moral. In addition the book contains: The story of Rose; The brothers; A yellow rose; The lady's coin; Mrs. Mompesson.

Dr. Christlieb was born in 1833 and died in 1889. For twenty-one years he occupied the chair of Pastoral Theology in the University of Bonn, and was one of its ablest professors. By his death the Protestant Church of Germany has lost one of its foremost preachers, the cause of Christian truth one of its most scholarly defenders and Christian missions throughout the world one of their most enthusiastic advocates. Dr. Christlieb was an ecclesiastical statesman with a keen sense of both the merits and defects of the German, English and American church systems. He was an eloquent preacher. Nineteen of his sermons are given in this volume, translated from manuscript and arranged according to the church year.

Church, Rev. Alfred J. Pictures from Roman life and story. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 4+344 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The doomed line of the Cæsars furnishes the central figures to these historical pictures; the lives and times of these emperors, their triumphs, tragedies and excesses are presented in a popular manner for general reading. Horace, Seneca, Mæcenus and other contemporaries are brought before the reader.

The Greeks had three schools of comedy—the old, the middle, the new. The old was the comedy of politics, and took the form of extravaganza or farce. There are nine specimens of it here given, all taken from Aristophanes. The new comedy was the comedy of manners, as seen in the translations of Plautus and Terence. Mr. Church is specially happy in making old classics speak to modern youth. Illustrated with terra-cotta figures on a black background.

Churchill, W: A princess of Fiji. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. c. 4-351 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author writes from personal knowledge of the Fiji of fifty years ago, "a Fiji so barbarous that the very name was long a synonym for all that is debased and cruel." He tells the story of a young sailor, who touches at Fiji on a trading cruise in 1840, escapes the massacre of his companions and endeavors to civilize the islanders. He loves and marries the "princess of Fiji" and for a time is happy. But all his hopes are wrecked, his plans of advancement are crushed under superstition and savagery, and the marsacre of his wife and child is the closing scene of his tragic experience.

Clarétie, Jules. Hypnotism. Chic., F. T. Neely, [1892.] 2-248 p. D (Neely's lib. of choice literature, v. 1, no. 6.) pap., 50 c.

M. Clarétie states that this story of hypnotic suggestion is the result of experiments and observations made by him within and without the prison of the Salpétrière, Paris. It deals with his belief that crime may be committed by one who is the unconscious instrument of another's will, and shows how, by a counter-hypnotic influence, the subject may be forced to reveal the details of the primitive suggestion. Published in 1885 in French under the title of "Jean Mornas."

Dwight is a small Illinois prairie town, 74 miles southwest of Chicago, where Dr. Keeley has established his reformatory for drunkards, and where he uses his bichloride of gold treatment. The formulæ of this remedy the doctor does not give, explaining that "the cure is the result of a system, and cannot be accomplished by the administration of a sovereign remedy. It involves the intelligent use of powerful drugs and an exact knowledge of the pathological conditions of drunkenness and their results." The author describes the daily life at Dwight, where he was cured of his infirmity.

N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 421 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The assistant editor of the Christian Advocate has not written a treatise on Christian evidences, but a plea for the true religion of Christ, which, correctly understood and intelligently practised, would do away with a secular and religious world, for "men would serve God as truly and do His will as acceptably, and glorify his name as certainly in business and political life as in the holy exercises of the sanctuary."

Clark, W: Walt Whitman. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 131 p. por. S. (Dilettante lib., no. 10.) cl., 90 c.

Although some critical considerations are introduced, the work is an exposition rather than a criticism of Walt Whitman's works. With it is a sketch of him that is in no sense a biography, but merely an attempt to portray his personality, and set forth the varied influences of his life, his relations to and message for America, his art, his belief about the nature of democracy, and his ultimate spiritual creed. The book is in five distinctive sections.

The introduction depicts the meeting of two friends, one of whom entrusts to the other a manuscript which is to remain unopened for six years. At the appointed time the packet is unsealed and proves to be a fantastic autobiographical narrative, abounding in mysticism and metaphysics. The hero studies among the "adepts" of India, is enabled at will to transport himself to the planet Mars, which he finds in every way superior to this workaday world, and, finally, by an earthly death enters into a life of happiness among "the greater glories of the higher plane."

Clemens, W: M. Mark Twain—his life and work: a biographical sketch. San Francisco, Cal., The Clemens Pub. Co., 1892. c. '91. 4–211 p. S. (Pacific lib., no. 1.) pap., 50 c.

The career of Mark Twain is a romance. He was a bold, reckless boy, a poor printer, an adventurer, a wanderer. He then became a wit, a scholar, a public speaker, a man of family and a millionaire. In this volume the humor of Mark Twain is not analyzed. The interesting facts of his life are given and some of his best-known works described. Originally published in The Library and Studio.

With Mr. Cleveland's consent, Mr. George F. Parker has gathered into this volume a representative collection of the speeches, public papers and letters of the ex-President. It presents his opinions on so great a variety of topics and with such fulness that by means of it the reader will be enabled to learn exactly what he thinks on all the vital questions of the day. The matter has been classified under twenty-five chapter headings, and a carefully prepared index further facilitates reference.

Clifford, Mrs. W. K. Aunt Anne: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 2+335 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Aunt Anne is almost seventy when she appears at the house of her nephew and his sweet young wife. She is old-fashioned, extravagant, tender-hearted and penniless, but has prospects of inheriting a large fortune from her cousin, an ex-Lord Mayor of London. A selfish, lazy man under thirty, knowing of her prospects, marries her. She adores him, and slaves and borrows for him. Mrs. Clifford is the author of "Love-letters of a worldly woman."

Clifford, Mrs. W. K. The last touches, and other stories. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. c. 4+269 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novel ser.) cl., $1.

Contents: The last touches: An interlude; On the way to the sea; A sorry love-affair; A ridiculous tragedy; A sad comedy; Thomas (told by May's mother); The last scene of the play; Wooden Tony, an anyhow story. By the author of "Aunt Anne."

Clifford, Mrs. W. K. Love-letters of a worldly woman. N. Y., Harper, 1892. 3+278 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Three stories are told through three series of letters respectively entitled "A modern correspondence," "Love-letters of a worldly woman" and "On the wane, a sentimental correspondence." They all relate to love, and are imbued with a charming cynicism and betray a most graceful power of satire. Mrs. Clifford is the author of "Mrs. Keith's crime."

Coffin, C: Carleton. Abraham Lincoln. N. Y., Harper, 1893 [1892.] c. 10+542 p. por. il. O. cl., $3.

With the aid of innumerable pictures and from a vast amount of material Mr. Coffin has constructed a life of Abraham Lincoln specially adapted for young readers. To the great accumulation that has already been written of the greatest of our Presidents, Mr. Coffin adds his own experience. He made Mr. Lincoln's acquaintance the night following his nomination as candidate for the Presidency, and met him often afterwards in exciting periods of the war. He says "this volume is to be regarded as a sketch of the life and times of Abraham Lincoln rather than as a biography. His intellectual and moral qualities will be seen far better in the historic narration than by any analysis that might be given."

Coffin, G: M. Silver from 1849 to 1892. Wash., D. C., McGill & Wallace, 1107 E street, northwest, 1892. c. 47 p. D. pap., 50 c.

An outline sketch of the history of silver since the year 1849. The facts and figures have been obtained from official documents, and the author has aimed to give an impartial statement.

Colbeck, Alfred. The fall of the Staincliffes: prize tale on gambling. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1892. 199 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The scene is English; the story is founded on the rapid decline, socially and morally, of John and Herbert Staincliffe, who were victims to different forms of one social vice. There is a side interest in the romance of Lizzie Staincliffe and Tom Cresswell.

Colbeck, Alfred. The fall of the Staincliffes. New cheaper ed. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1892. 200 p. 12°, cl., 75 c.; pap., 25 c.

Colbert, E. Humanity in its origin and early growth. Chic., The Open Court Pub. Co., 1892 c. 2+409 p. D. cl., $1.50.

In this scientific study of the development of humanity, the author follows the progress of mankind from its evolution from the lower organisms through the primeval period and stone age to early civilization and government, endeavoring "to trace out a few of the salient points in the early unfolding of man and his thought, principally in those ages which preceded the writing of history." The subject is lucidly handled and there are interesting chapters on the sciences and superstitions of the ancient races. Full index.

Coleridge, Christabel R. Amethyst: the story of a beauty. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 344 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 91.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A story of to-day of English fashionable life. "Amethyst" is a lovely girl, whose charming ways win her many admirers; her virtues shine out brightly amidst the shortcomings of her father's—Lord Haredale's—family. The weakness and folly of Lady Haredale's character represents a society woman of the period, who goes to the verge of wrong in pursuit of pleasure.

States the most favorable conditions for developing the egg into a "business hen"—that is, a profitable rather than a pleasure fowl. Incubation, care of chicks, treatment of diseases, selection and breeding, feeding and housing, are all discussed in a clear and simple manner, and two of the most successful egg-farms in the country are described in detail. The editor is managing editor of the Rural New Yorker.

Collins, Mabel. Morial the Mahatma. N. Y., Lovell, Gestefeld & Co., [1892.] c. '92. 270 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

Morial the Mahatma is supposed to be the chief of the seers, magicians and theosophists, and has his dwelling-place in the highest mountains of Thibet. He appears in spirit to a young English painter, who, following the call, leaves his country and the girl he is to marry and sets out for Thibet. The story describes the dangers of his journey and the life of the girl he leaves in England, who is also worked upon by a designing guardian ostensibly under the occult influences. The climax is dramatic.

Collins, Mabel. Suggestion. N. Y., Lovell, Gestefeld & Co., [1892.] c. 2–276 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Margery Hawthorne confides to her diary that she is engaged to Rex Heriot and is the happiest girl in the pretty English county in which her father is the rich and honored squire. Rex's brother Oliver, falling out with his father, accepts the position of steward on the squire's estates. He is possessed of mesmeric power and gains ascendancy over Margery. At his "suggestion" she harbors many doubts and fears and does many peculiar deeds. His power over her is finally exorcised in a fearful way.

Pinocchio, a wooden puppet, who grows to be a real boy, when he repents his evil ways and becomes a loving and obedient son, points a moral for naughty boys, with quaint Italian humor. Pinocchio's adventures after he runs away from home lead him into many strange scenes, in which fairies figure, and also insects and animals who can talk. Pinocchio's own transformations are very funny.

Colomb, Mme. C. Hermine's triumphs; il. by H. Vogel. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 326 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Hermine is left at the age of two years and a half on the hands of a kind sea captain, who takes her to her great-uncle in Marseilles at the request of her father, who has died on the voyage home from tropic lands. The child is badly received, and the kind "Papa-Captain" takes her into his own family and shares his poverty and love between her and his other children. After eight years the old merchant in Marseilles repents and takes the child to his house. She is the means of bringing about the good fortunes of "Papa Captain's" family. By the author of "Colette." A good picture of home-life in southern France.

Colombia. The mining laws of the Republic of Colombia; with a short explanation of their application and official forms for notices, denouncements and applications for title: tr. and ed. by C: Bullman. N. Y., Scientific Pub. Co., 1892. c. 7+107 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The present mining laws of Colombia had their origin in the old Spanish mining laws, which were in force more than 300 years ago. These laws have never before been translated into English. This book is intended for those of the English-speaking race who desire to invest in this important state of South America, and for those actively engaged at the mines. The translator is an engineer of considerable practical experience in the mines of Colombia.

Colter, Mrs. J. J. A gentle benefactress. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1892.] c. 6–329 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Angela Marlowe is the "gentle benefactress." Left an orphan and the possessor of great wealth, even as a child she finds her delight in "making folks happy." As she blossoms into womanhood she extends the scope of her work, visiting the slums, taking ragged little waifs to the peaceful country, and in many cases developing genius which otherwise would have lain dormant. Her happy marriage concludes the story.

Coltman, Rob., jr., M.D. The Chinese, their present and future: medical, political and social. Phil., F. A. Davis Co., 1891. c. '91. 8+212 p. il. O. cl., net, $1.75.

On April 8, 1885, the writer received his commission as a medical missionary physician and proceeded with his wife and infant son to the station of Chinanfu, the capital city of the province of Shantung in North China. Dr. Coltman applied for this position to have the means of studying the details of the home and social life of the Chinese. This book is full of information on the work of the missionaries, the diseases of the Chinese, especially leprosy, the needs of China and the opportunity for European and American business enterprise within its immense territory, as yet, by reason of superstition, untraversed by more than one short line of railroad. Illustrated with photographs taken by the writer.

Conklin, Mrs. Nathl., [formerly Jennie M. Drinkwater.] Dorothy's Islands. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] c. 3–435 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Dorothy's islands were near the mouth of the Kennebec River, and her home was a lighthouse. Here she conceived a fanciful idea about discovering islands even more to her liking than the one on which she lived. The story tells also some incidents of Dorothy's grown-up life, notably the disposition she made of her fortune.

Conklin, Mrs. Nathl., [formerly Jennie M. Drinkwater.] My lady. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] c. '91. 446 p. D. cl., $1.25.

When Alpha Chisane's thoughts reverted to an almost forgotten incident of his boyhood, he called Deborah Durie "My Lady." The story tells of Deborah's helpfulness, of its fruitful results, and of Chisane's mission. In the heart-histories and daily life of these noble characters there is a moral.

While Count de Bruinsteen, of Brussels, was suffering from a protracted spell of illness he was cajoled by his servant into marrying her; after two years a daughter was born of this union, who died, however, soon after her birth, and her mother, in order to gain possession of the count's wealth, substituted another child whom she had stolen; the consequences of this act affect the heroine of a rather romantic story, in which Catharine, a trustworthy servant, plays quite a part. The book contains another story, entitled "The Sorcerer," which tells of a hermit's wonderful cure of the Count Van Iserstein.

In his preface Mr. Conway says of Paine: "No man was more intimately acquainted with the inside history of the revolutionary movement, or so competent to record it. He was the only Girondist who survived the French Revolution who was able to tell their secret history. His personal acquaintance included nearly every great or famous man of his time in England, America, France." Further, in speaking of the mass of material he was obliged to digest, he remarks: "But the interest that led me to the subject has increased at every step; the story has abounded in thrilling episodes and dramatic surprises; and I have proceeded with a growing conviction that the simple facts, dispassionately told, would prove of importance far wider than Paine's personality, and find welcome with all students of history."

Intended for class use in academies and similar institutions, and for use where the Stoneyhurst series of English manuals of Catholic philosophy is too voluminous.

Corbin, Caroline F. A woman's philosophy of love. Bost.; Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 7–302 p. D. cl., $1.50.

"A woman's philosophy of love" is the outcome of thirty-five years of thought, study and experience, and is not a book for babes or for persons of a darkened or prurient mind. The author believes that there is a large class of cultivated and thoughtful people who see in the relations between men and women the elementary principle of all civil order, the keynote of all social progress; and who will welcome a thoughtful and dispassionate discussion of some of those vexed questions of right and priority which are forcing themselves into every field of thought and labor."—Publishers' note.

Corelli, Marie. Ardath: the story of a dead self. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] 7–565 p. D. (Belmore ser., no. 9.) pap., 50 c.

The story is founded upon four lines from the book of Esdras, in the Apocrypha, and it teaches that our present natures are but the reflex of ourselves as we were in a pre-existent state, and that according to our own will our lives are for good or for evil. A vision upon the "field which is called Ardath," stretching beyond the ruins of Babylon, reveals to the poet and sceptic, who is the hero of the tale, his dead self as it lived and sinned five thousand years before Christ. Through the stern lesson of this vision he realizes the immortal power of the soul, and by casting away selfish and earthly desires attains lasting happiness.

Corelli, Marie. A romance of two worlds. New ed. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] 7–370 p. D. (Belmore ser., no. 8.) pap., 50 c.

The heroine comes under the influence of Heliobas, who teaches her that in spite of the doctrines of agnostics and materialists, there is a perpetual passionate craving in the souls of many for that inward peace and absolute content which can only be obtained by a perfect faith in God and the life eternal. The visionary romance admits the mysteries of life, death, eternity and all the wonders of the universe to be simply the natural and scientific outcome of a ring of everlasting electric heat and light.

Corelli, Marie. The soul of Lilith. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 4+356 p. D. (Lovell's copyright ser.) cl., $1.25.

El-Rûmi inherited from his father, Nadir Zaranos, a collections of valuable works on mystical lore of the Orient. Through this he gains insight to secrets of alchemy and physical magnetism; these are his agents in an experiment in which he tries to solve the problem of life and death. El-Rûmi's plan, however, is not successful until he recognizes his medium in a dead child; then he prevents bodily decay, arrests the flight of the soul and subjugates it to his purposes of learning the dominant power of spirit over matter. The interest is in the supernatural results of the Oriental, which are obtained mostly in London.

Corelli, Marie. Thelma: a Norwegian princess. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] 4–485 p. D. (Belmore ser., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

While Sir Philip Errington is cruising on the Norwegian coast he meets and loves Thelma Guldemar. After overcoming the prejudices of the girl's father, a stern old Norse giant, Sir Philip makes Thelma Lady Errington, in which role she is seen to great advantage, and as the heroine of a matrimonial misunderstanding that has both pathetic and pleasing results.

The first part, or Columbus section, of a poetical narrative of the history of America, which—with other matter chiefly picturing America as it is—embraces descriptive accounts of the four voyages of Columbus to the New World. The history of the other early voyages, together with the stories in detail of the discovery of the Pacific, the conquest of Mexico, etc., will be published in a future volume. The author is proprietor of the Daily Investigator.

Corson, Hiram. Primer of English verse: chiefly in its æsthetic and organic character. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 4+232 p. D. cl., $1.10.

Essentials of poetry, such as rhythm, metre, stanza, rhyme, assonance, alliteration, melody and harmony, are shown in unison and as components of English verse, and their effects and relations to that subject are defined and analyzed. Varieties of verse and methods of well-known authors are introduced.

With this novel of domestic life at the Hague the publishers begin a series of fiction, written by a number of young writers who have repudiated the rather sleepy Dutch authorship of the last forty years and formed a new school of which the peculiar quality is known among them as sensitivism. Louis Couperus was born in 1863. He has made teaching his profession, but now devotes most of his time to literature. Eline Vere is a thoroughly uncontrolled nature whose surroundings bring out her worst faults. Her emotions lead her finally to do a very uncalled-for act.

Couperus, L: Footsteps of fate; from the Dutch, by Clara Bell; with introd. by Edmund Gosse. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 14+272 p. D. (Holland fiction ser.) cl., $1.

Returning from America, where he has been farm hand, supernumerary at a theatre, etc., Robert Westhover works his passage and reaches London in rags. He hunts up an old school-mate who is living a rich bachelor's life. This friend takes him in and keeps him for two years in idleness and luxury. How Robert rewards him and in the end meets his own ghastly fate is told with power and unflinching realism.

Cowan, J. F. The mother of the king's children: a story of church blessings through Christian endeavor. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., 1892. c. 2–433 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is Benton, a small country town. The majority of the characters are sensible, wide-awake young folks, who take hold of church problems in the town of Benton, and by active methods and spiritual purpose solve them. A story which aims to show by the individual service of Neil Morgan and Amy Marshall the necessity of common sense, and the essentials of humanity in religion.

Cowan, J. F. The pony-expressman. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1892.] c. '91. 368 p. il. D. cl., $1.50

Norman McNally is a bright, manly boy, with an ambition to study and practise law. The death of his father makes it necessary for him to earn money, and the various original schemes which he adopts are very interesting. In the course of time he establishes an express business between his town and the neighboring city. The annoyances he suffers from an envious former schoolmate, and his share in clearing the good name of a minister whose zeal has caused a plot to be formed against him, are the most striking incidents of the story.

The Senate of the United States has passed a free coinage measure, and now prominent men and influential journals are advocating the policy of free coinage or unlimited silver purchase. The writer thinks sound finance demands a repeal of the law, and that the war against silver theories must be continued until the strong common sense of the American people shall see the ludicrousness of their workings. Some of the chapters have already appeared in Lippincott's Magazine and in The Engineering and Mining Journal.

Cox, Maria McIntosh. Jack Brereton's three months' service; il. by Mente. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1892.] c. 4-274 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Jack's father was a soldier, one of the men who went into the army purely from a sense of duty and from love of country, leaving his little family to the care and protection of his oldest son. How the boy who had been duly sworn into home service suddenly became a man in his prudent forethought and his tender consideration of the delicate little mother and the young children, how he worked for them, watched with them for tidings of the soldier father—in short, how Jack Brereton proved himself a hero is all told in this simple, unstudied, yet intensely realistic story.

Sets forth in a very humorous vein the travels and adventures of a Dutchman unfamiliar with the ways of a great city. His first visit brings about many mishaps, which, in spite of guide-books and directories, cause him much trouble and perplexity.

Cox, Palmer. How Columbus found America; in pen and pencil by Palmer Cox. N. Y., The Art Printing Establishment, 28 Bond st., 1892. c. '77. 64 p. D. pap., 25 c.

Coxe, Arthur Cleveland, (Bp.) Christian ballads. New ed., enl. N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '87. 12+240 p. D. cl., $1.

Religious verses, first published in book form in America in 1840. The aim of the collection is to show the beauty of holiness as exemplified in the ritual of the Anglican church. Many of them have individual purpose. Among these are Dreamland, which conveys a reproof for those who neglect the Church and her offices, and thus cause her to be misrepresented; and Chronicles, which is a history of apostolic commission in England from the first century to the Restoration. Distinctive features of verses are explained in notes.

In verses which supplement "The Christian ballads" there is an effort to bring out the spiritual significance of a time especially observed in the Anglican church.

Cracker, Francis B., and Wheeler, Schuyler S. The practical management of dynamos and motors. N. Y., D. Van Nostrand Co., 1892. c. 6+32 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The contents of this volume appeared as a series of articles in the Electrical Engineer between Sept., 1891, and May, 1892. Its object is to give simple directions for the practical use and management of dynamos and motors. The authors have taken special care to arrange the material so that the different subjects are treated separately and in the proper order, and the headings are printed in heavy type to facilitate ready reference to any subdivision.

In this edition the improvements are largely in the fuller showing the author is now able to make of Sabbath observance in our own land, having crossed the Continent six times in these seven years as a Sabbath reforming lecturer and organizer. The book aims chiefly at practical results, the suppression of Sunday work and Sunday dissipation, of Sunday mails, Sunday trains, Sunday newspapers, Sunday saloons; but it also discusses the religious and scientific aspects of the subject.

Craig, Mrs. Alethe Lowber, comp. Women of the world; with a search-light of epigram. Balt., Md., [Cushings & Co.,] 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 2–191 p. sq. S. cl., $1.

A collection of the names of notable women, arranged chronologically, beginning with Cleopatra, A.D. 69, and ending with Mademoiselle Titiens, 1854. A quotation from some author of repute describing the character of the woman is given with each name. The author wishes to get up another volume of this kind to be published in 1893, and offers prizes for the largest number of names and quotations. The index is a naïve production, many of the celebrities being hidden under the common entry of Madame, Mademoiselle, Princess, etc.

Essays which, their author claims, were written under the influence of a modern revival of old views that regard art not only in its relation to use and materials, but also in its connection with common life and social conditions, and in its attitude to the handicrafts. In these papers, a few of which have been printed in various art papers, Mr. Crane presents the claims that appeal to him as a clue for further study and personal deductions. They are entitled: The claims of decorative art; The architecture of art; Figurative art: Sculpture, from a decorator's point of view; Painting at the present day, from a decorator's point of view; On the structure and evolution; Art and laborer; Art and handicraft; The prospects of art under socialism; On the teaching of art; Design in relation to use and material; The importance of the applied arts, and their relation to common life; Art and commercialism; Art and social democracy; Imitation and expression in art; Art and industry.

"Don Orsino" is a sequel to "Saracinesca" and "Saut' Ilario" and represents in its chief character, from whom the novel takes its name, the young Roman of the transition period, who wants work and a career, being in strong contrast to the two former generations of his noble family. Rome of the very present, with its recent financial crisis, is vividly described. All the incidents illustrate the unusual character of Don Orsino, who is a most attractive young man with an interesting and unhappy love affair.

Crawford, F. Marion. The three fates. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. c. '91. 4+241 p. D. cl., $1.

New York City is the scene. George Winton Wood, who occupies the centre of interest throughout, was born rich and independent, but before his boyhood is past his father is ruined financially by an unprincipled relative. George was designed for a business life by his father, but he hates business, and early drifts into literature, first as a writer of reviews and finally as a writer of novels, which bring him fame. "The three fates" are three women whom he loves, or who love him, and who each exercises a strong influence on his career. The relative who had robbed his father makes unexpected reparation to the son.

Credo and Credulity: an exposition of the "Apostles creed," by A believer. N. Y., C: T. Dillingham, [1892.] 5+290 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The anonymous author states that Gladstone, Cardinal Manning and Archdeacon Farrar in England, and Dr. Talmage, Prof. Fisher, Judge Black and Dr. Field in America, all "in turn attacked Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, the American agnostic, and the agnostic routed them one and all." A study of the Apostle's Creed is given as "an antidote to the poison of agnosticism on the one hand and of a dead orthodoxy" on the other.

"Dolly" Carwithen marries a sergeant's daughter while on duty in India. She leaves him a little daughter, Juliet, whom he puts to school and after paying for liberally quite forgets. Later, handsome, well-born, impecunious "Dolly" marries a rich money-changer's daughter and again quite forgets to mention his first matrimonial venture. Juliet grows up in India, has a fine singing voice, and at last finds her lawful position in society owing to "a family likeness."

Crommelin, May. For the sake of the family. N. Y., Hovendon Co., [1892.] c. '91. 314 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The story opens on a steamer bound for South Africa, and introduces two young people who are thrown into close companionship. Then the ship is wrecked, the passengers return to land, and by a series of blunders the lovers are separated. The rest of the action takes place at a quiet English village, where Rachel again meets her old lover, and is saved by him from the consequences of a rash step she had taken "for the sake of the family."

Crompton, Frances E. Master Bartlemy; or, the Thankful Heart. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1892. 6–173 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.

Master Bartelmy was a poor peasant boy, who attained some fame as a wood carver, and who died in his early manhood, after endowing his house for the poor. The scene is in Forest Morton; Miss Nancy is the quaint little heroine of a story, which tells of her impressions about the dead artist and Squire Throgmorton's reasons for a re-endowment of the Thankful Heart. By the author of "Friday's child."

Crosby, Oscar T., and Bell, L: The electric railway in theory and practice. N. Y., W. J. Johnston Co., 1892. c. 400 p. 8°, cl., $2.50.

Describes and illustrates the best methods of installing and operating plants for electric railways, with figures in detail for outlay. Many of the data are of value for other electric practice than that of railways. The receipts and expenditures of the West End Co., of Boston, which has both horse and electric service, are presented in a comparative table. Mr. Crosby, in 1890, conducted experiments at Laurel, Md., with electric motors at speeds as high as 115 miles an hour. He states his conclusions as to the availability of the electric motor as a rival to the steam locomotive. A book for the investor, the station superintendent, the reader desirous of ascertaining the latest achievements in electric traction.

Crozier, A. A. A dictionary of botanical terms. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1892. c. 5+202 p. O. cl., $2.40.

The scope of this dictionary is nearly the same as that of its predecessors, except that it is broader on the side of agriculture and horticulture, as it aims to include all technical terms applied to plants both by botanists and others. As it is now nearly twenty years since an English dictionary of botanical terms was published, the development of botany during that time has brought into use many new terms and led to the abandonment of some of those that were formerly employed. These obsolete terms, as a general thing, have been omitted, excepting a few which occur in standard botanical literature.

As the original edition of this work was written for "juvenile Britons," there were many expressions and some allusions in it which would be inappropriate and occasionally unintelligible to children on this side of the ocean. For these reasons Mr. Rolfe, at the request of prominent educators who recognized the merits of the work, made the present revised edition, bringing the last chapter down to date. May be used as a text-book for young pupils, or as supplementary reading either in school or at home.

Curtis, G: W: James Russell Lowell: an address. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 2–64 p. por. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

This address was delivered at the Brooklyn Institute on the 22d of Feb., 1892. It is highly eulogistic of Lowell as a man and as a writer, and is adorned by a number of interesting portraits.

Curtis, G: W: Prue and I; il. by Albert E: Sterner. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 14+272 p. O. silk, $3.50. Edition de luxe, [limited to 250 copies,] vellum, $15.

The illustrations of this new edition of one of Curtis' most popular productions are one hundred in number, including a photogravure frontispiece in tint. Mr. Sterner has caught the spirit of this prose idyl very happily and has interwoven his designs with the text in graceful and often original style. The introduction is a fac-simile reproduction of the author's manuscript.

Curtiss, Alice Eddy. Neighbors in Barton Square. Bost., Congregational S. S. & Pub. Soc., [1892.] c. 3+346 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The heroine is a dressmaker, lovable and loving. She is burdened with abundance of comparatively unprofitable work, the care of an almost imbecile aunt and of a headstrong young sister. Her earnest but somewhat tactless endeavors to protect the latter only urge the young girl to contract a foolish marriage, which not long after results in her death. A truly self-sacrificing life it is pictured in the little dressmaker.

Cushing, Paul. The blacksmith of Voe: a novel. N. Y., Harper, [1892.] 3+300 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new series, no. 720.) pap., 50 c.

The story opens with a quarrel between two brothers about a young woman, in which one is supposed to be killed. But Abel Boden is nursed back to life, and leaves his native village for many years—his brother Luke living under the harrowing belief that he is a murderer. Abel leaves a boy behind him, and Luke has a daughter. After twenty years, when the story is resumed, this boy and girl love each other, and are meeting with strong opposition from Luke Boden. Abel Boden has returned home, having made a fortune in America, and is unrecognized by his friends. He is the "blacksmith of Voe," and the hidden agent of many of the story's events.

"The 'Gospels,' which seem to say nothing about the Church, except for two or three allusions, really bear witness to the fact, that all through our Lord's ministry the Church occupied a large space in his thoughts and teachings. The 'Acts of the Apostles,' which to some seems to be merely a collection of anecdotes of missionary work, is the history and foundation of the growth of the Church. It is to show this existence of the Church in the 'Gospels,' and bring out this history of Church organization in the Acts, and to illustrate further the history of the Church from the Epistles and the Revelation, that this series of 'Notes of lessons' has been prepared."—Introductory note.

A little skye-terrior named "Chim" is the hero; he is the property of a poor and beautiful girl, who lived and taught music not far from Washington. The story shows very ingeniously that "Chim" is his mistress' "mascot." He is several times stolen and passes into the hands of various persons; all his adventures tend finally to the benefit of his real mistress, and he is in the end the unconscious instrument of restoring to her a large fortune.

Dale, Darley. The little doctor; or, the magic of nature; il. by Alex. Monro. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1892.] 3+209 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The scene is Sweden; Hans Dahl, the young son of a noted physician of Ostköping, is so thoroughly imbued with a desire to learn magic that he fraternizes with Singar, a Gypsy lad, who undertakes to teach him with the proviso that Hans signs a contract binding himself for a year's service to the Gypsy; the issues of this compact are both good and evil, and they convey a moral.

Dale, Darley. Reuben Foreman, the village blacksmith: a novel; il. by Warren B. Davis. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1892.] c. 2+444 p. D. (The Ledger lib., no. 72.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Reuben Foreman is the leader of the Baptist chapel in the little English village of Woodford. His daughter marries the son of an Episcopalian clergyman, who, under his wife's rule, has become very "high church." The clergyman's daughter loves a Roman Catholic, and the nearer her father approaches the outward forms of the Roman Church in his own service, the more bitterly he opposes his daughter's marriage with a Romanist. How differences about unimportant points of religion can stir up a community is cleverly worked out in this story.

Evidence for and against the statements of the poem Whittier created in honor of the brave Barbara is given and weighed The poem is quoted with the questioned facts printed in italics The last chapter is the paper read at Amesbury on Sept. 10 in honor of Whittier. Photographs of Barbara and of her house, which was taken down in 1868, are given.

Dallas, G: Mifflin. Diary of George Mifflin Dallas while United States minister to Russia, 1837 to 1839, and to England, 1856 to 1861; ed. by Susan Dallas. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. 443 p. por. O. cl., $2.

Concerning this important work, Hon. M. Russell Thayer says: "All lovers of literature, and especially all students of history, will, I am sure, hail with pleasure the publication of Mr. Dallas' diaries of the events of his daily life at the courts of Russia and Great Britain. . . . His pure and honorable life, and his agreeable and courtly manners, made him always a favorite at the courts to which he was accredited, and often, no doubt, put him in possession of secrets of state which would not have been entrusted to a less popular minister. Hence the diaries are full of interesting facts, while the occasional gossip of courtly circles adds much that is interesting as well as amusing to the reader. These records of the daily experiences and observations at foreign courts of one so quick of apprehension, so versatile, and so competent to impart to them an attractive form in their relation, are records which we could ill afford to lose."

The book is the result of several years' miscellaneous reading of the pamphlets and histories of that period which lies between 1688 and 1815. A history of the rise and progress of the Radical Party in England is given, showing how the English colonies in America were founded, established and lost; how France freed herself from a corrupt ministry and a profligate church, and how these events were the quickening influence in English political life. A short biographical account of the period under review intended for those whose time for reading is limited. The author is a London clergyman ministering among the poor, and the needs of young men desiring to learn are specially considered.

The hero, Paul Astier, a French Academician, is about to end his life by throwing himself in the Seine, when his purpose is arrested in trying to save a young woman from the death he tried to believe he courted. This incident puts a new and interesting construction on a story of love, and the questionable action of a man eager for political honors, and is a means of demonstrating a point made in the novel, that every man is rewarded according to his works, be they vicious or virtuous.

With the evident motive of showing divorce as a failure, that it at most gives temporal relief, sometimes mistaken, in the first moments of release, for happiness, and that it does not effectually dissolve marriage, the author creates his characters. Regis de Fagan, dramatist, recognizes that his wife and self are incompatible. They agree on a plan by which they can obtain divorce. In the consequences of this act "Rose and Ninette," a Wagnerian devotee, and the ex-wife have prominent parts. The hero's characteristics are in some respects those of Balzac's "Père Goriot."

Davidson, T: Aristotle and ancient educational ideals. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 8+256 p. D. (Great educators' ser.) cl., net, $1.

By tracing briefly the whole history of Greek education up to Aristotle and down from Aristotle, the author has been able to show "the past, which conditioned his theories, and the future, which was conditioned by them;" only thus, he says, it seemed to him could his teachings be seen in their proper light. His method has enabled him to show the close connection that existed at all times between Greek education and Greek social and political life, and to present the one as the reflection of the other. At the heads of the different chapters, in English mostly, are placed such quotations as seemed to express, in the most striking way, the spirit of the different periods and theories of Greek education. The opening volume of a new series which aims to give concise, comprehensive accounts of the leading movements in educational thought, grouped about the great historic figures that have influenced them.

This work was prepared for the printer before Koch's treatment had been announced. The author hopes much from it, but insists that the prevention of consumption must be accomplished as before: sufferers must obey the same hygienic laws, and these he has specially laid down. Dr. Davis holds many important positions in Chicago medical societies.

Stories and studies: "At the station" is a picture of North Carolina life; "Tirar of Soult" is a study of a Louisiana plantation and other Southern scenes and Southern people; the scene of "Walhalla" is laid in the mountains of Tennessee and North Carolina; "Anne" is another Southern study; "The doctor's wife," "Across the gulf," "Mademoiselle Joan," "The Yares of the Black Mountains" and a few other stories complete the first collection made by Mrs. Davis of her shorter contributions to fiction.

Van Bibber, one of New York's "four hundred," and a favorite creation of the author, is the hero of more than half of these fifteen stories. In "Her first appearance," where he rescues a lovely little girl from the degrading possibilities of a stage life, Van Bibber is serious and pathetic. "Van Bibber at the races," "Van Bibber's man-servant," "The hungry man fed," "An experiment in economy," etc., are full of humor, as are the majority of the stories, though occasionally, as in the first and last stories, "An unfinished story," the writer is on the verge of a tragedy. The scenes are mostly New York City, time and events being strongly in touch with the present.

Dawe, W. Carlton. Mount Desolation: an Australian romance. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1892. 8–317 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Mount Desolation is a grim mountain about 30 miles from the railroad to Sidney. The station of Koorabyn is the scene. Tom Standford, superintendent, who has won the love of his master's daughter, is unexpectedly discharged because of this and the interposition of a wealthy suitor. Tom determines that his sweetheart shall not sacrifice herself, and acts at once on the determination. He succeeds in preventing her from becoming Martin Winthrop's wife, but brings about a tragedy, in which he and Joe Devine are the heroes.

Charles Sumner's place in American history, and especially in the anti-slavery movement, is too well known to need explanation. His exceptional culture, his purity of character, his moral and physical courage and fine physique, made him a picturesque figure at all times, whether on the lecture platform, as a Senator at Washington, or at home in his much-loved Boston. The author of this biography writes of him as one well versed and thoroughly in sympathy with her subject. Her story carries the reader through the exciting days in the Senate before and after the war, and also includes the interesting details of Sumner's private life.

Day, Oscar F. G. The devil's gold: the story of a forgotten race. Chic., Morrill, Higgins & Co., [1892.] c. 4–309 p. il. D. (Idylwild ser., v. 1, no. 21.) pap., 50 c.

In 1856 Harold Ritchie met with a disappointment in love which caused him to readily accept his Uncle John's invitation to join him in California. Immediately after the arrival of himself and a friend in that country he gets into a quarrel with a desperado which results in the death of the latter and the finding of a glass flask that had inscribed on its surface directions to the region which held the "Devil's gold." Acting on the message of the flask Harold and his companion started for this unknown country, where they have a series of startling adventures in which the people of Nahaeco (the walled country) figure extensively.

Large colored pictures and texts in large type illustrate a day on the Thames.

Days (The) of Queen Mary; or, annals of her reign; containing particulars of the restoration of Romanism and the sufferings of the martyrs during that period. New ed. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1892.] 4–383 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.

Dean, Mrs. Andrew, [pseud. for Mrs. Alfred Sidgwick.] A splendid cousin. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 2+188 p. nar. D. (The unknown lib., no. 18.) cl., 50 c.

The heroine is an unpractical, selfish and ambitious English girl, who, chiefly by a charm of manner, succeeds in making all who come in contact with her believe that she is an ideal character and a musical prodigy. By these assumed traits she succeeds in almost overwhelming a womanly little cousin, whose part in a pathetic story is decidedly interesting.

Dear; by the author of "Miss Toosey's mission." Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 4–312 p. il. S. cl., $1.

The peaceful little place of Kingscombe, an English village, is the scene, the story changing from the minister's house to the Kingscombe Manor. "Dear" and "Clive" are the minister's children, two beautiful, neglected but loving and lonely little ones. The father is absent-minded, impracticable and wholly unworldly, his heart and mind constantly seeking the young wife, lately buried. "Dear's" youth and strange love-story are full of pathos, and "Clive's" life at Cambridge very realistic. The minister's character is strongly portrayed.

Cortlandt Laster, a mature married man and American of wealth, sojourning in Paris, is enamored of Zelia Van Cleet, a beautiful Southern girl. He finally makes it worth Mrs. Van Cleet's while to remove with her daughter to New York. This step results in a social scandal which involves the millionaire and Zelia. The former, to extricate himself, concocts a scheme in which are seen not only his dastardly act, but some well-known weakness and vices of modern society, a just retribution and a tragedy. The story opens in a fashionable New York gambling house.

Deland, Mrs. Margaret. The story of a child. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 3+226 p. D. cl., $1.

The story of the childhood of a lonely, sensitive, imaginative nature is artistically told. Little orphaned Ellen Dale lives with her grandmother in Old Chester, a beautiful corner of northwestern Pennsylvania. She is educated according to the system prevailing in that section without any regard to her peculiar individuality. The sufferings of the child from uncontrolled imagination and a hungry little heart are made vividly real to the reader. Ellen finally runs away, and her return home brings about the climax of a little romance that runs through the tale as a connecting thread.

Delitzsch, Franz, D.D. Biblical commentary on the prophecies of Isaiah; authorized tr. from the 3d ed., by Rev. Ja. Denney. In 2 v. V. 2. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., [1892.] 5+496 p. O. cl., $2.50.

This volume completes a work which is practically an exhaustive, reverent and profound study of the Messianic prophet, whose prophecies are considered among the first of the sacred books.

Dickens, Mary Angela. Cross currents: a novel. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 3+340 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 99.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A careful character-study of a young girl who possesses great dramatic genius, and who is tempted for a short time to sacrifice her career to her love for a fine, manly, but unintellectual young fellow who has asked her to be his wife, and at the same time expressed his wish that she will give up the stage. The background is taken from London fashionable and theatrical life. Artists and actors play their part, the strongest influence in Selma Malet's life coming from John Tyrrell, a famous English society actor, evidently drawn from life. The writer is the granddaughter of Charles Dickens.

Dickey, J. M., comp. Christopher Columbus and his monument Columbia. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co,, 1892. c. 3-397 p. il. maps, D. (Rialto ser., no. 48.) pap., 50 c.

The compiler states that upwards of six hundred writers have written of Columbus. This mass of material he has searched and made a concordance of choice tributes to the great Genoese, his grand discovery and his greatness of mind and purpose. It is illustrated with sculptures, scenes and portraits of the old world and the new.

Dod, S. Bayard. A Highland chronicle. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. c. 4+290 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

This story begins in the early part of the 18th century. It is a romantic tale of Scotland, dealing with love and war and the coming of the Pretender, "Prince Charlie," from France, and his defeat on Culloden Moor. A good picture of gypsy life is included.

Dodd, Mrs. Anna Bowman. In and out of three Normandy inns; il. by C. S. Reinhart and other artists. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 6+394 p. O. cl., $2.

The author of "Cathedral days," with a young companion, made an unconventional tour along the Normandy coast, their observations and adventures forming the substance of this attractive volume. The peasants of Normandy, their hard-working lives and industrious habits, were particularly objects of study. The historical associations of this little-known part of France are accurately given.

Dodd, Mrs. Anna Bowman. In and out of three Normandy inns: with an accompaniment of illustrations by C: S. Reinhart and others. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892] c. 6+394 p. O. vellum, $5.

In this holiday edition the text is printed in blue-black ink on extra heavy super-finished paper, while the twenty-four full-page illustrations are printed separately on imperial Japanese paper in tints of sepia, ultramarine, purple, dark green, terra-cotta and olive. The binding is of white vellum, illuminated in gold and color, and is preserved by a red slip cover in the Roman style.

An introduction explaining the origin of the book is included with fourteen papers, entitled What constitutes an ideal womanhood and how to attain it; Purity and modesty, two words of value; Married and single life; Family life; Hints as to education and books; How to cultivate good manners; Jealousy; what is it?; Practical matters; Influence of art upon life; Women as moral reformers; Glimpses into the business part of life; How can we help one another?; Definition of certain words; Club life, its power.

Dodge, Theodore Ayrault. Cæsar: a history of the art of war among the Romans down to the end of the Roman empire, with a detailed account of the campaigns of Caius Julius Cæsar: with 258 charts, maps, plans of battles and tactical manœuvres, cuts of armor, weapons and engines. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 16+789+3 p. por. il. O. (Great captains ser., no. 3.) cl., $5.

The basis of this book is, "Cæsar's Commentaries," the special flavor of which Colonel Dodge has retained by adhering closely to its narrative, and by frequent extracts. Maps of the theatre of Cæsar's campaigns and charts of his battlefields enable the reader to understand his movements and battles as readily as those of our Civil War. Colonel Dodge has visited all of Cæsar's battlefields, and made topographical sketches; he has followed the course of the Roman legions through Spain, France, Italy, Egypt, Northern Africa, Syria, and Greece. His criticisms are based on intimate acquaintance with the scenes, and on study of the ancient authorities and modern historians.

Dod's peerage, baronetage and knightage of Great Britain and Ireland, for 1892, incl. all the titled classes. 52d year. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 978 p. 12°, cl., $3.75.

Dollarocracy: an American novel; il. by Frank Ver Beck. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 211 p. D. (Broadway ser., no. 7.) pap., 50 c.

In developing the "floating" of a big railway scheme into commercial existence, and the political wire-pulling of a "rising" ex-senator, the author satirizes "peanut" politics, modern journalism, and the vulgarities of the "Dollarocracy." The collapse of his financial schemes and crushing political defeat force the ex-senator to realize that there are better things in life than a position in the "Dollarocracy." The action is chiefly in New York City.

Donaldson, A. L. A Millbrook romance, and other tales. N. Y., T: Whittaker, 1893 [1892.] c. 5-155 p. D. cl., 75 c.

Millbrook, in the heart of Dutchess County, is the scene of an aged hero's recital of a quaint love-story, which he relates to his willing listener because it resembles, excepting in one episode, Longfellow's Evangeline. Included with A romance of Millbrook is A sound from the past; The story of a picture; A reverie; A pair of gloves; The opal ring; A simple story.

Donelson, Katharine. Roger Latimer's mistake: a novel. Chic., Laird & Lee, [1892.] c. '91. 4-378 p. D. cl., $1.

The scenes are laid partly in Chicago and partly in Europe. It is a novel portraying the social life of today, with its mad race for wealth and social position.

Donnelly, Eleanor C. Poems: with introd. by Rev. D. I. McDermott. Phil., H. L. Kilner & Co., [1892.] 3-105+108 p. O. cl., $1.50.

These poems were formerly published in two volumes. They are now grouped together under one cover as "Sacred legends," "Poems of the civil war," "Miscellaneous poems," etc. Miss Donnelly has long been known in Phila. as a poet of more than ordinary gifts, whose contributions to the periodicals, especially of a Catholic tendency, have been always eagerly read.

Donnelly, Ignatius, ["Edmund Boisgilbert," pseud.] The golden bottle; or, the story of Ephraim Benezet of Kansas. N. Y. and St. Paul, Minn., D. D. Merrill Co., 1892. c. 313 p. D. cl., 50 c.

Ephraim Benezet is supposed to be a Kansas farmer ground down with mortgage and debt. His son has a dream in which he is directed to a golden bottle containing fluid that changes iron to gold. They become immensely wealthy, and use all the gold for the improvement of their fellow-men. The writer's object is to show that every wrong under which the human race is groaning can be cured by capital rightly used, hard work and a true fraternal spirit.

Doudney, Sarah. A child of the precinct; il. by Percy Tarrant. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co.. [1892.] 4+292 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The scene is an old London precinct in the Strand. Essie Britton is suddenly separated from her childish companions, forced to leave her home and live at Hillstone farm. After a lapse of years death causes another reverse, and she returns to her former London home. The story tells how the changes of people and surroundings affected Essie, of the return of her father, and how this latter incident led Osbert Revell to express sentiments which resulted in a broken engagement and the renewal of an early romance.

Doudney, Sarah. Through pain to peace: a novel. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1892.] c. 2-380 p. D. (Broadway ser., no. 14.) pap., 50 c.

English rural life and its conditions shape the destiny of a wild, imaginative child whose ideal is embodied in an old painting of "Douglas Douglas, tender and true." She lives with her grandmother, and, yielding to her influence, becomes engaged to the young squire of the village. Before it is too late she breaks with him, devotes herself to art, finds her ideal embodied in a young clergyman, and after a new break in her life devotes herself to others until she finds peace.

Dougall, Miss Lily. Beggars all: a novel. 6th ed. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 461 p. D. cl., $1.

By means of a dramatic plot the author enforces the lesson that all human beings have some affinity with goodness, and that no matter what their position in life, there is a point at which every human being becomes a beggar for sympathy, kindness, food or shelter. The story is a sustained psychological analysis, full of realistic detail and a spirit of broad humanity.

Douglas, Amanda M. Sherburne House. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1892.] c. 5+392 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The old, old story of the petted heir of an aristocratic Virginia family making a foolish match with an English dancing-girl, and the daughter by that marriage drifting back to the old homestead, where she proves a firebrand to all the peace and decorum of an ancient race. All ends well, and the book is full of lessons for those "standing with reluctant feet" between childhood and womanhood.

Doyle, A. Conan. Adventures of Sherlock Holmes. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 3+307 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Sherlock Holmes and the man who relates these adventures had roomed together before the marriage of the latter. Sherlock Holmes was deeply attracted by the study of crime, and occupied his immense faculties and extraordinary powers of observation in following out clues and clearing up mysteries which had been abandoned as hopeless by the official police. This volume tells of twelve different cases upon which he exercised his perfect reasoning and almost miraculous intuition.

Raffles Haw, by the discovery of a chemical secret, is able to transmute lead into gold and to command a magnificence of wealth which Monte Cristo might envy. He is eager to benefit humanity, to relieve misery—above all to be loved for himself only. One by one his illusions are dispelled, he sees the shallow avarice of those whose affection he had thought secure, and by his final act he casts down the hopes he had unwittingly raised, and keeps his secret intact forever. Two short stories follow: The redheaded league; The Boscombe Valley mystery.

The turbulent city of Alexandria during the visit of Caracalla, A.D. 214, is the scene of a story in which the fierce emperor plays a leading part. Melissa, the charming daughter of an old gem-cutter, seeks from Cæsar the pardon of her father and brother, and becomes the object of a delusion on the part of the half-mad Caracalla. He determines to raise her to his side as empress, but Melissa is already betrothed and shrinks with horror from the dangerous honor. She resolves to test Cæsar's love and abide by the result. Her action leads her from thorny paths to peace and happiness, but is a link in the chain of events which culminates in the fearful and historic massacre—Caracalla's bloody vengeance on the fair city of Alexandria. Galen, Philostratus and other historic characters are introduced, and the life of the people is painted with color and power. Published in the original under the title of "Per Aspera."

Edwards, Miss Matilda Betham. A North Country comedy. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. '91. 347 p. D. (Lippincott's copyright foreign novels.) cl., $1.25.

"An ingenious story of English life, in which the characters are depicted with genuine humor. The mishaps of two maiden ladies, no longer young, are skilfully portrayed, and the events which lead up to the betrothal of one of them to a widowed curate, and to their good fortune in being both placed far beyond the reach of want, are described in an artistic manner worthy of the fame of the author as a writer of agreeable and scholarly fiction."—Boston Saturday Evening Gazette.

Edwards, Miss Matilda Betham. The romance of a French parsonage. N. Y., Lovell, Gestefeld & Co., [1892.] c. '91. 2–315 p. D. cl., $1.25

In a Lutheran church of old Paris in 1889, a priest, not only a brilliant orator, a skilled dialectician, but also a consummate man of the world, one of the brightest ornaments of the sacerdotal ranks of Paris society, having seceded to Protestantism, was consecrated pastor. He is sent to a little parish on the southwest coast of France, where his parsonage adjoins a Carmelite convent. The regular ringing of the convent bell recalls the romance of his life. Arrangements are made by friends to have him marry a warm-hearted, rich, generous widow, who proves herself a very noble, unselfish woman when she finds her lover's happiness lies elsewhere. As a study of French character the book is very clever.

One hundred and thirty-eight micro-organisms are given in concise form. These are the most thoroughly studied and more important species. The Koch method is the basis of the anatomical description. In the physiological arrangement only important attributes are selected. The classification is arbitrary. An appendix summarizes fungi. The experimental analyses were made in Dr. Koch's laboratory. Since original issue improvements have been made, and they are embodied in text. This work is intended for student or advanced worker. Blanks are inserted for transcribing further discoveries.

Ellis, E: S. From the throttle to the president's chair: a story of American railway life. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1892. c. 5+375 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The greater part of the story occurs on railway trains. The characters are the engineer, the firemen, brakemen and so on. Among the incidents are a train "held up" by robbers, a "strike," a terrible accident in crossing a trestle-bridge, and the heroic act of the fireman. The chief character rises from the humblest position to be president of the road. A story for boys, teaching many good lessons.

Ellis, E: S. On the trail of the moose. Phil., Porter & Coates, [1892.] c. 4+353 p. il. D. (Wild-woods ser., no. 2.) cl., $1.25.

Nick Ribsam, the young Pennsylvanian of Dutch descent, who was one of the characters in "Through forest and fire," is found in this story to be in almost hopeless ill-health, brought about through his suffering in the flaming forest. Just as the doctor has ordered him a decided change of scene a letter is received from Herbert Watrous asking him to accompany him to his uncle's home in Maine for the winter. The boys, of course, go, and have a splendid time hunting moose and other game.

The "little worldling" is the orphan daughter of an artistic son who has been cast off by his straight-laced, puritanic mother. She has been around the world with artists and singers and the atmosphere she brings into her grandmother's house upsets the old lady. Nixie is a sweet, fresh girl of many gifts. A secret involving the honor of her grandmother's name almost wrecks Nixie's life, but in the end there are marriage-bells.

The 54th Massachusetts was one of the first black regiments put into the field during the late war. Its history is full of honor to the race. Its brave deeds at James Island, Fort Wagner, Charleston and Honey Hill have become historical. It was while leading a charge at the first place—Fort Wagner—that its commander, Col. Shaw, met his death. The author tells the history of the regiment in a simple, straightforward way.

Englishman (An) in Paris: notes and recollections. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 2 v., 13+332; 13+352 p. D. cl., $4.50.

The reminiscences of an Englishman who resided in Paris from the time of Louis Philippe to the downfall of the Commune. Though the work was published anonymously, the author is evidently a man of rank and importance in the social world, as he was admitted into the confidence of public men, diplomatists, ministers and even crowned heads. He was also on familiar terms with the great artists and authors of his time as well as the celebrities of the stage. Fresh and interesting details, taken from his own experience, are given of Napoleon III., Rachel, Dumas, Balzac, Louis Philippe, Lola Montez, Taglioni, Eugène Delacroix, the Princess Demidoff, Félicien David, Auber, Guizot, Lamartine, Béranger, Queen Victoria, the Empress Eugénie and others. The report started by the English papers that the late Sir R: Wallace was the author of the book is now authoritatively denied by the London Spectator.

The story is laid in Vienna and around the country-seat of the Dornachs. Irma Wolfsberg marries Hermann Dornach. After she has been unfaithful to him she learns to love him. Her husband and his child are drowned. Her lover's child lives and Irma's dearest friends after her confession are willing to receive her and make her son head of the house. But Irma feels her sin is "beyond atonement," and expiates it in solitude. A selfish, dissipated father is largely responsible for orphaned Irma's great sin.

The Erlkönig, or erl-king, is, according to modern German literature, a mythical character who carries children away to his own undiscovered dominions. While Norbert de Sangoolème was walking through the forest near Castle Altingen, he was surprised by a small child carrying a lantern, who declared herself the Erl Queen. This incident is the keynote of a novel which introduces two phases of society, some romantic episodes in the life of a countess and a young German cadet, and the minor incidents of the love-story of a German musician and his pupil.

A nobleman's young daughter acts as temporary goosehcrd while a little peasant runs to see her sick mother. She is sketched without being conscious of it by a young artist who calls her "Heiden-röslein," upon seeing that she is reading Goethe's pretty poem. Transported from her pretty country home to brilliant society circles, the wild rose remains sweet and pure and helpful. Her love-story is romantic.

Although the incentive in this review was competition for prizes in poetry and criticism, the author claims that he aspired to a wider audience than this purpose admitted. Heuce he made a careful and prolouged study of the subject. In these essays Landor is classed pre-eminently a humanist, who has taken marked departures from his school. His work and attributes are preseuted. In brief, he is viewed intellectually from a literary and critical standpoint.

This is the first volume of an extensive work of twenty volumes on the Old Testament, printed from imported plates obtained from the publishers in London, where the entire work has been issued after years of preparation. In this great commentary by various authors, is found a sermon outline or homiletic suggestion on every paragraph or verse of the Old Testament that can be turned to use in the preparation of a sermon. Abundant choice selections of illustration, etc., from many eminent sources other than the authors of the volumes, are also given. Except in some introductory, critical and explanatory notes preceding each chapter, no foreign words, such as Hebrew and Greek, are used.

Exquisite fool (An): a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 2+227 p. D. (Harper's Franklin sq. lib., new ser., no. 727.) pap., 50 c.

The title probably designates the hero, who has rather wasted his life in literary dreams and unprofitable retrospections. In London he meets a woman whom he knew as a girl fifteen years before. The story tells what happened in Baden-Baden at that time, and how the mother of his old acquaintance influenced his and her own life for good and ill. Helen Bouley, the mother, is a fine study in feminine character.

"The controlling thought in the mind of the author, the organic principle in the system of doctrine presented, is the recognition of the distinct and complete personality of God and a like personality in man, as set forth in the Scriptures. It has been his purpose to develop the system of truth in harmony with these two correlated facts, and thus reach a self-consistent and reasonable theology."—Preface.

A historical tale which depicts with great vividness the heartless worldliness that prevailed in the French court during the reign of Charles IX., when Catherine de Médicis really governed king and nation. The heroine of the story, Antoinette de Bourlemont, is a young girl who, though brought up under the direction and influence of Catherine, is of true, loving and loyal spirit. So innocent is she of any guile that she never understands the true character of her royal friend until her eyes are opened by the massacre of St. Bartholomew.

Falkenhorst, C. With Columbus in America: a novel; adapted by Elise L. Lathrop. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1892. c. 302 p. il. D. (Columbus lib.) cl., $1.25.

The well-known facts of the career of Columbus are connected by a slight thread of fiction. The story begins in Lisbon in 1473. There Columbus is supposed to have met his wife while making some copies of maps at her mother's house. The long story of his hopes and disappointments, his banishment from court, and his final acknowledgment as discoverer of a new continent and the honors bestowed upon him after death, are all worked into the novel.

forests of New Hampshire and Maine. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, 1892. c. 13+415 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

Narrates the adventures of a party of boys—from fifteen to eighteen years of age—who go up into the wilds of Maine and New Hampshire for a summer vacation. With the account of their fishing and hunting and the events of their camp life are given the history and legends of the various places of note they visit. The author is himself an ardent sportsman, and knows from experience of what he writes. Profusely illustrated.

Fawcett, Edgar. The adopted daughter. Chic., F. T. Neely, [1892.] c. 3–262 p. D. (Neely's lib. of choice literature, v. 1, no. 1.) pap., 50 c.

The "adopted daughter" is the child of a maid servant and an uneducated Irishman, who is adopted in infancy by a wealthy New York woman and reared as her daughter and heiress. Years later, when the real parents have become rich people—the father being a millionaire political "boss"—they insist on reclaiming their daughter. She is a beautiful, cultured, proud young girl, engaged to a rich New Yorker, when her parentage is revealed to her. The bravery with which she faces the situation determines her future happiness and assures the keeping of the secret of her birth. New York life is delineated with the author's accustomed insight.

Fawcett, Edgar. Women must weep: a novel. Chic., Laird & Lee, [1892.] c. 4+331 p. D. (Library of choice fiction, no. 38.) cl., $1; pap., 75 c.

The refrain of Kingsley's "Three Fishers" is the text on which the novel is based. The author seems to have a theory, that no matter how favorable the environments of marriage, women who take upon themselves its conditions must weep sooner or later. This is verified in the individual experiences of the three daughters of a New York druggist, whose heart histories take up most of a story in which several phases of New York society are represented. The reader is also given a passing glimpse of the present political outlook. Inherited drunkenness produces its inevitable results.

Influence having secured for Gil Vincent, a commission in the East India service, he is ordered to join his regiment in India. Besides the daring exploit with which Gil began his voyage, much incidental matter is introduced with a description of the English barracks and a revolt of a native regiment. In this latter Gil distinguishes himself by concocting a plan to recapture the lost guns of the English regiment. On his mode of carrying out his scheme the interest of a story of adventure depends.

The appointment of Hazel Thorne as teacher in the Plimpton school aroused the anger of the Misses Lambent. Miss Thorne's growing popularity, however, enabled her to combat their feeling, and Hazel would have been the victor had not circumstantial evidence wrought her undoing. The action of the school-mistress, in a crisis of her affairs is the most interesting part of a novel that pictures life in a little English village.

Fenn, G: Manville. The Rajah of Dah; il. by W. S. Stacey. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1892] 5–280 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Sixteen-year-old Ned Murray and his uncle, an ardent naturalist, start from the little trading-port of Dindong, near Singapore, on a collecting expedition up the Salan River into the interior of the Malay Peninsula. They enter the territory of the Rajah of Dah and find themselves virtually prisoners. Half a dozen other English people attached to the Rajah's staff are in a similar position. Their efforts to escape from this dangerous predicament make an interesting story, varied with accounts of crocodile fishing, tiger-hunts, etc.

"The lost lode" was a rich vein of ore known to exist in an abandoned Mexican mine. The desire to find this hidden wealth leads a young Mexican, the son of the former owner, to commit an act of treachery and violence, from the consequences of which he is saved by the prompt action of his betrothed. "Stella's discipline" is a short story of modern life showing the moral good effected by trials and troubles.

Fisher, G: Park, D.D. The colonial era. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 15+348 p. D. (American history ser.) cl., $1.25.

This work is the first of a series of four, which, although distinct in authorship, and each complete in itself, are designed to furnish in a brief but readable form a connected history of the United States from the discovery of the continent to the present time. The present volume, on the Colonial Period, carries the narrative down to the year 1756, the date of the declaration of war between England and France. It embraces, therefore, the beginnings of the decisive struggle of the two nations for dominion in America, or of what used to be called the "old French war."—Preface. The author is Professor of Ecclesiastical History in Yale University.

This work forms the beginning of Mr. Fiske's history of America, and is all written upon the original sources of information. It contains a comprehensive survey of aboriginal America in the light of the recent researches of Powell, Bandelier and others, including some account of ancient Mexico and Central America; an elaborate discussion of the accounts of pre-Columbian voyages; an account of the mediæval trade between Europe and Asia and its partial stoppage by the Turks; the attempts to find an "outside route to the Indies"—first by the Portuguese eastward, then by Columbus westward; discussions of many of the questions about Columbus raised by recent researches of Harrisse and others: an account of the discoveries of the Cabots and Vespuccius; the deeds of the Spaniards in the West Indies, Indian slavery, and the career of Las Casas; the explorations in North America by De Soto and Coronado; the Huguenots in Florida, etc.

The action of this story is supposed to take place in Chicago during the great International Exposition. The romance forms the skeleton only of arguments concerning the most important questions of the day. The labor problem especially is skilfully and impartially treated from both sides. The novel is dedicated to "Eight thousand millionaires of America, and will not have been written in vain if, through its perusal, one among them shall be led to so dispose of a portion of his fortune as to help the wage-workers of our land to help themselves."

Flagg, Jared B. The life and letters of Washington Allston; with reproductions from Allston's pictures. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 17+435 p. Q. cl., $5.

The subject of this memoir was an American painter of celebrity, born Nov. 5, 1779, at Waccamaw, S. C., who died at Cambridge, Mass., July 9, 1843. A few of his paintings are: "Saul and the witch of Endor," "The dead man restored to life," "St Peter liberated by the angel," etc. All his paintings have been preserved in the Boston Museum of Art, the National Portrait Gallery of London, the Philadelphia Academy of Fine Arts, and in private collections. In writing this work Mr. Flagg has had the benefit of the vast amount of material collected by Richard H. Dana, Sr., for his proposed life of Washington Allston; he was also assisted by Mr. Dana's daughter and Allston's niece.

Flower, W: H. The horse: a study in natural history. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. '91. 12+204 p. il. D. (Modern science ser., ed. by Sir J: Lubbock, no. 2.) cl., $1.

The second volume in the Modern science series endeavors to look at the horse as the animal appears in the light of the modern and now generally accepted doctrines of natural history, and in thus doing to teach what some of those doctrines are and to afford insight into the methods of nature applicable to a far wider range of study and of thought than that limited to any single species. It outlines the principal characteristics of the comparative anatomy of the horse and his near relations, the tapir and the rhinoceros, and also identifies a connection between the ancient ancestry of these animals. The author is Director of the British Natural History Museum.

A collection of prose writings selected from the works of the French authors, beginning with Xavier de Maistre, who was born in 1761, and ending with Jean Rameau, born in 1858, arranged by authors chronologically. Prof. Fontaine, who is also the author of "Les Poètes Français du XIXe Siècle," has been careful to make such selections as should be representative in character and still be free from anything of questionable morality.

Fontaine, Francis. The modern pariah: a story of the South. Atlanta, Ga., Francis Fontaine, [1892.] c. 231 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The heroine is adopted when a baby by Colonel and Mrs. Adams, of New Haven, Ct. She is the child of a woman who is supposed to be an octoroon and a slave. The story opens after the siege and capture of Atlanta, Ga., in 1864. Col. Adams, a Union officer, owes his life to the care of the octoroon, who had been his nurse, and he and his wife gladly adopt her child at her death. This child, brought up in ignorance of her parentage, courted and admired as the child of wealthy white people, becomes the "pariah," when accident reveals her true story.

A young man, the son of a western millionaire, who has received his education as a civil engineer in Europe, is suddenly called home and separated from his mother, with whom all his young life has been spent abroad, and from whom he has not received the most favorable opinion of his father. Near the Pacific slope he finds his home, and is soon initiated into the long-time feud that has existed between his father and his neighbor and at one time partner, a highly educated Englishman of scientific training. The original subject of quarrel had been the method of building works to irrigate "the chosen valley." The young hero's position as a disinterested party, his love for the daughter of his father's enemy, and his new insight into his father's character, are all full of interest.

The present conflict in European schools as to which is the best education for the people—a literary or a scientific one—the two parties being called the "humanists" and the "realists"—is the basis of the suggestions of this volume. Mr. Fouillée, who represents the more advanced thought on the side of the humanists, takes a more restricted view of the problem of education and heredity than Guyau, the educational questions which he discusses being from the national standpoint and not from that of the individual. The work is divided into five books: 1, Education and selection from the national point of view; 2, Scientific humanities from the national standpoint; 3, Classical humanities from the national standpoint; 4, A "modern" education from the national standpoint; 5, Philosophy, ethics and social science from the national standpoint.

The story opens in South Carolina. The heroine throws over her lover, who vows revenge, and allows her sister to die under a false accusation to gain the love of a man who does not care for her. Fearing discovery, she flies to New York City, and later appears in London society as the protégé of a wealthy American widow. Married to a lord and installed as "the new duchess" of Eversfield, vengeance finally overtakes her at the hands of her first lover.

Frederic, Haro'd. The new Exodus: a study of Israel in Russia. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. 4+301 p. por. O. cl., $2.50.

This excellent series of papers on the persecution of the Jews in Russia was first published in the New York Times, where they attracted considerable attention. The volume is dedicated "to the memory of George Jones, the founder of a great newspaper and the lifelong champion of good causes." The material for the papers was gathered by Harold Frederic himself in a long, painstaking journey through Russia, both within and outside the Pale. The titles of the chapters are: "Para Domoi!:" The Pariah community: The barbarian and his story; Beginnings of the Russo-Jewish question; "Under the second Haman;" "The golden age;" Ignatieff and the May laws; The Czar and his counsellors; The Holy Synod at work; The appointment of Serge; Holy Moscow's tragic Passover; Marfa Rostscha and the "Circulars;" The flight from Moscow; St. Petersburg, Odessa and Kieff; Israel in exile; Appendices.

Frederic, Harold. The return of the O'Mahony: a novel; il. by Warren B. Davis. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1892.] c. 5-334 p. D. (The choice ser., no. 71.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The story opens beside the campfires near Richmond, Va., in 1865, where a solicitor's clerk seeks Hugh O'Mahony, the unconscious heir to an Irish estate. In a sudden sortie the clerk is badly hurt, and Zeke Tisdale, a shrewd, brave, unscrupulous Yaukee, believing him dead, and knowing of the inheritance, takes the identification papers, becomes to all intents and purposes the O'Mahony, and "returns" to his ancestral home. The slangy, good-hearted, energetic Americau becomes the idol of his tenants, takes a hand in Fenianism, and is finally confronted by the true O'Mahony. The author makes the most of the "situation," and tells a story that is humorous, pathetic aud dramatic.

Frederick, J. M. H., comp. National party platforms of the United States, presidential candidates and electoral and popular votes. Akron, O., The Akron Print. and Pub. Co., 1892. 83 p. D. pap., 25 c.

Freeley, Mary Belle. Fair to look upon: il. by W. L. Dodge. Chic., Morrill, Higgins & Co., [1892.] c. 7–180 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The Old Testament stories of Eve, Hagar, Rebekah, Sarah, Lot's wife, and others are related in a familiar and rather irreverent style to prove an assertion made by a prospective bride to her intended husband that she "didn't believe a woman ever lived who ever obeyed any one." While she shows that her heroines were generally disobedient, she offers testimony that they were all "very fair to look upon." There are numerous illustrations printed in different colors.

Freeman, E: A. The story of Sicily. Phœnician, Greek and Roman. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 11+378 p. il. D. (Story of the nations ser., no. 34.) cl., $1.50.

Sicily has never been a nation with a language and a history of its own. It has belonged in succession to many nations, and has been the battlefield of almost all the nations around the Mediterranean Sea—hence its history is one of the longest and most unbroken histories in Europe. This volume is one of the last works Mr. Freeman was engaged upon before his death, and it was his first intention to write two volumes, the first ending where this does, with the end of the Roman dominion, the second to begin with the coming of the Saracens, and to end with the merging of Sicily into the new Italian Kingdom. But he did not live to carry out his plans.

French, H: W. Our boys in Ireland. N. Y., Worthington Co., [1892.] c. '91. 8+331 p. il. O. bds., $2.50.

An exceedingly entertaining account of travels in Ireland made by a party of bright American boys, whose sole object was to get acquainted with the people and view and enjoy the natural beauties of the country. The greater part of their journey was done in jaunting-cars, and there they met all sorts and conditions of men and experienced many adventures, some of them of a very amusing nature.

French, H: W. Through Aretics and Tropics around the world by a new path for a new purpose. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1892.] c. 318 p. il. O. cl., $1.50; bds., $1.

Accident reveals to two sturdy New England sailor-boys, seventeen years of age, a plot by which a young girl, a school-mate of theirs, and the daughter of a Russian refugee, is to be cheated out of an immense property, by a Captain Downing, with whom they had often sailed. They follow the captain from port to port to thwart his plot, until finally they make a tour through both Arctics and Tropics around the world.

In the title essay Mr. Froude unfolds a fresh page of history—the story of the Armada as narrated by the Spanish participators in the expedition. "Antonia Perez, an unsolved historical riddle," refers to the accuser of Philip the Second. "The life of Saint Teresa" exhibits the spiritual enthusiasm of the Spanish nation in its noblest form. "The Norway Fjords" and "Norway once more" are the records of two summer excursions into these delightful regions. "The Templar" completes the list of essays.

Fuller, H: B., ["Stanton Page," pseud.] The châtelaine of La Trinité. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. 4+176 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In "The Chevalier of Il Pensieri-Vani" the author brought his keen satire to bear upon music, painting, architecture, bibliography and diplomacy in Italy. Switzerland is now the scene, and the satire is levelled against would-be scientists, fin de siècle novelists, the opera-bouffe stage the shopping craze of the girl of the period, and various other features of present existence. The heroine is really Aurelia West, from Rochester, N. Y. The châtelaine furnishes a type of fresh ideal womanhood. Swiss types, inns, scenery, customs, etc., are woven into the study of human nature with artistic discretion. First appeared in the Century Magazine.

The fourth ecumenical council, held at Chalcedon, a city of Bithynia, opposite Constantinople, A.D. 451, decreed that distinct expression should be given to the doctrine of the inseparable union, without mutation or confusion, of two perfect and complete natures, divine and human, in the one person of Christ. A more popular treatment of the same subject handled by the author ten years ago in his "Index canonum." This lectureship was established as a memorial to Bishop Harris, of Michigan.

The story is laid in the region of the zinc mines of Socartes, Spain. A young man, born blind, receives his sight through a celebrated oculist. He finds that a poor girl who has been his constant guide and dearest friend is a dwarfed, pale, unsightly being. Marianela is so shocked by his disappointment that she falls a victim to acute meningitis and the ending is tragic. The descriptions of scenery and the study of human emotions show fine work.

Gardener, Helen H. Pray you, sir, whose daughter? Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1892. c. 10+183 p. D. (Arena library ser., v. 1, no. 6.) pap., 50 c.

An arraignment of the injustice of men who pass laws affecting women without allowing them representation. A girl college graduate who has held her own with the men with whom she has associated for four years, fights against holding the position of dependence in her father's household to which her mother has become resigned.

Gardener, Helen H. Pulpit, pew and cradle. N. Y., The Truthseeker Co., [1892.] c. 30 p. D. (Truthseeker lib., no. 16.) pap., 10 c.

"There are just two strong props under the church to-day—the sentiment of women and the ignorance of children. So long as the pulpit speaks to believing pews composed chiefly of mothers, the cradle will be rocked by ghosts." Helen Gardener tries to convince women that they especially have been ill-treated by Bible doctrines.

Ten short stories, or social studies, show heredity as the possible, though hidden force in peculiar and even vicious action. These are called: An echo from Shiloh; Old Safety Valve's last return; How Mary Alice was converted; A hall of heredity; "That reminds me of —;" His mother's boy; Mr. Walk-a-leg Adams "meets up with" a Tartar; Onyx and gold; In deep water; A prison puzzle. The keeper of Oswald Hinsdale in "A hall of heredity" accredits his prisoner with being "pushed by unseen hands;" thus he accounts for Oswald's inexplicable conduct.

Garland, Hamlin. Jason Edwards: an average man. Bost., Arena Pub. Co., 1892. c. '91. 6+213 p. D. (Arena lib., v. 1, no. 1.) pap., 50 c.

The present condition of the American laborer is shown, and his possible future forecast. The social progress of the mechanic and the proprietary rights of the farmer, with other questions of the labor cause, are considered. The story occurs mostly in a Boston tenement, and a hut on the Western prairies. The plot involves Jason Edwards' failure and the consequences to his family. The standpoint is that of a sympathizer and reformer.

Garland, Hamlin. A little Norsk: or, ol' Pap's Flaxen. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 5+157 p. S. bds., 50 c.

A story of every-day Western life, its hardships, anxieties and pleasures. Boomtown, Dakota, is the scene of the blizzard which leaves the "little Norsk" an orphan and leads to her adoption by the two rough men who take the child from her dead mother's arms. "Flaxen" they call her. She becomes the object of their hopes and plans, and the story of her development from childhood to happy womanhood is told with varying pathos and humor.

Garland, Hamlin. A member of the third house: a dramatic story. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., 1892. c. 4–239 p. D. (Ariel lib., no. 16.) pap., 50 c.

Through the concentrated action and selfish aims of the individual, corporations and their methods of controlling financial and political interests are ventilated, and the power of the press is shown. The characters are senators, lobbyists, ward politicians, a railroad magnate and his henchman, and Miss Helene Davis. The plot involves a scheme that relates to a railroad charter, the honor of noted politicians, several fortunes, the social success of one Brennan, the matrimonial fate of Helene Davis, a tragedy and an evident social purpose.

The hero and heroine are types of the new west; he, from the position of herdsman, rises to be a member of Congress; she is a public lecturer, at first identified with the Granger movement, then with the Farmers' Alliance. She is at all times the inspiration of the hero and his savior in the struggle with the corrupting influences of his political life. Politics are largely discussed throughout the story, as are also many phases of political economy.

Garner, R. L. The speech of monkeys. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. c. 8+217 p. por. D. cl., $1.

Mr. Garner divides his work into two parts. The first part is devoted to an account of his numerous experiments with monkeys in various parts of the world in his attempt to learn if certain sounds that they used did not represent what he calls "speech." The deductions he draws from his experiments are that we find in monkeys "the rudiments from which all the faculties possessed by man could easily develop, including thought, reason, speech and the moral and social traits of man." The second part defines what Mr. Garner means by "speech"—that is, he explains "the particular characteristics that mark the sounds made by monkeys as speech and distinguish them from mere automatic sounds."

A novel founded on an episode of love, which is strong enough to surmount social and religious differences and personal disapproval. The story reflects the varying phases of Hungarian national life, with the social, political and commercial conditions of modern Hungary. In adapting the novel from the German the translator has made, at the request of the publisher, such changes as she believes will make the book acceptable to American readers.

The destinies of two couples married in St. Margaret's Church, London, on the same morning, become strangely involved. The characters which, to all outward appearance, had been created for each other's understanding, concentrate their feeling on their opposites, and after fantastic and extravagant adventures, finally reach mental peace. One of the husbands drifts to India and comes under the spell of occult powers. The author has a dream that in time there will be a science formulated which he, for lack of a better word, calls "the mathematics of chance."

Gay, G: E. Business book-keeping; a manual of modern methods in recording business transactions. Single and double entry. High school ed. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 12+226 p. il. O. cl., 75 c.

A work designed as a course of study in book-keeping, in which the requirements of the public school are considered, as are also the needs of the counting-room. It is claimed for the methods of the book that they are those of the best accountants, and that the manner in which they are presented is the result of experience in teaching the subject.

Gaye, Selina. The great world's farm: some account of nature's crops and how they are grown; with a preface by G. S. Boulger. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893 [1892.] 9+365 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The title is taken from Drummond's "Tropical Africa." The writer states that nine-tenths of the world's fields are cultivated by those who labor without hands, the air, wind, frost, rain, snow, sun, glacier, river, earthquake, volcano, the worms, insects, birds, etc. Together these keep the world green, and would keep it green if there were not a man in it. It is then described what changes man has made on Nature's great farm. Full index.

Gennevraye, A. L'Ombra; from the French by B. M. Sherman. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. '91. 5–270 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A young Italian girl, wealthy and beautiful, and belonging to an aristocratic family, though herself an orphan, is possessed of a phenomenally lovely voice. Her maestro induces her to sing at La Scala in a new opera written by his friend, the prima donna having met with an accident. Partially disguised and under the name of "L'Ombra," she sings several times and wins a great success. An English Duke loses his heart to the great singer and many odd incidents occur before he learns her true name.

George, H: A perplexed philosopher; being an examination of Mr. Herbert Spencer's various utterances on the land question, with some incidental reference to his synthetic philosophy. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. c. 3+319 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Mr. George contrasts the views of Mr. Spencer with regard to land set forth in his first book, "Social statics," with the views presented in his recent volume, "Justice." Mr. George argues that the change of front brought out in the contrast betokens moral declension in the philosopher. Incidentally he attacks Mr. Spencer's agnostic philosophy from the standpoint of rational faith, and declares that the superstitions of science may be even more dangerous than those of religion. In no other of his writings has Mr. George so fully stated his case against compensating landowners, should the "single-tax" become law. Compensation, he avers, would but perpetuate in new form the wrong involved in a kind of property as indefensible as chattel slavery.

Two officers of an Austrian regiment stationed at Donnerstadt are about to fight a duel in what they call the "American" style, which means that two pellets shall be drawn for, the one drawing the black one being required to shoot himself. Géza Paloghy was young and life was very sweet to him, so when he found himself the drawer of the black pellet, he made a proposal to his opponent, Viktor Rüden, that his self-immolation should be postponed for ten years. When the ten years have elapsed the scene has changed to Hungary, and a beautiful woman, who has won the hearts of both men, gives a more serious aspect to a piece of youthful folly, which finally affects the fates of all three characters.

Gerard, Dorothea. A queen of curds and cream. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 2+426 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 94.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Glockenau, an Austrian mountain village and afterwards London are the scenes. In the first, Count Emil Eldringen dies, leaving his daughter Ulrica penniless and friendless. A marriage beneath his rank and a life of dissipation had so estranged the count's relatives that nothing was left to Ulrica but to work with her hands like a peasant. At Glockenau, after many vicissitudes, she earns a living for herself on a large dairy farm. Here an English cousin discovers her, a love-story of varied interests following. Ulrica believes herself the heir of a large fortune, and figures for a time as a fine lady in London.

Gerard, Morice. The Victoria cross; how it was won; how it was lost; how it came back again. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1892. 6–156 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

Robert Wheatcroft, gunner in the British navy, won by bravery a Victoria cross. After this had been awarded, he went back to England to nurse a wound he had received in an encounter with Zulus. On his arrival there he loses, through a second act of bravery, his cherished cross. In the dramatic scene which follows this latter incident, Emma Forster and Robert are seen to advantage, and a Victoria cross is regained.

Gestefeld, Ursula N. A modern catechism: for the use of those who are outgrowing their swaddling clothes. N. Y., Lovell, Gestefeld & Co., [1892.] 3-63 p. D. leatherette, 25 c.

Similar in style to the denominational catechism, but dissimilar in statement; will be considered "advanced and remarkable," or "advanced and heretical," according to the reader's point of view.

Gestefeld, Ursula N. The woman who dares. N. Y., Lovell, Gestefeld & Co., 1892. 3–358 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author is a "woman who dares" as well as her heroine. She writes with a purpose. She holds that women are responsible for their bondage to man, and specially points out to wives the duty of maintaining their individuality and asserting the rights of their womanhood in the marriage relation. She believes that a wife can influence her husband to control his physical as well as his moral passions, and bring them all into subjection to the high purpose to make of his life the very best his talents fit him for. Not suitable for the general novel-reader.

Giberne, Agnes. The Andersons: brother and sister. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1892.] c. 347 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The story opens in Brighton, where Felix Anderson declares his ability to succeed, and his determination to get on in life. This determination soon becomes a ruling passion to the lad, who fosters it to the exclusion of every other thought. As a consequence he loses sight of his sister's interest, and is suddenly awakened to this fact through a sad experience of the latter. In the events which follow this revelation Felix learns his moral obligations, and seems to fulfil his mission in fiction. The hero begins life as a bookseller's assistant.

Giberne, Agnes, comp. Beside the waters of comfort: thoughts from many minds. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1892.] 3+389 p. sq. S. cl., $1.25.

This collection of extracts was begun simply to meet the author's own needs in time of sorrow. She has endeavored to show how remarkably "at one" are the views of very many belonging to widely divergent schools of thought in various churches regarding the future condition of the dead, and the true consolation for those left mourning.

Giberne, Agnes. Won at last; or, Mrs. Briscoe's nephews. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] 4-256 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The scene is English. The story tells of the poverty of the Hazels, of Mamie Brown's unexpected and rather unwelcome appearance among them; the means she took to win the love of the family, especially that of the mother; how she repaid her benefactors; and, finally, why she became Mrs. Jack Hazel.

On March 31, 1847, Mr. William Hyde delivered an historical address at the dedication of the Town Hall in Ware, Mass. To this address the writer makes frequent reference. In 1847 no correct traditions existed touching the settlement of Ware, the documents and maps in the State archives were almost wholly without index and could be found only by patient and laborious process. Mr. Hyde succeeded in finding almost every one of the important documents which are now so carefully indexed.

Gilman, Stella, (pseud.) That Dakota girl. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 2-240 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"Ranch-to-rest-in," on the Dakota prairies, is the scene of a pretty love-story containing somewhat idealized descriptions of Western life and scenery. "That Dakota girl" is an attractive little person with an Eastern lover and a Western lover, and though one of the rivals must perforce lose the prize, the denouement is quite satisfactory.

Gilmore, Rev. G: W. Korea from its capital; with a chapter on missions. Phil., Presb. Bd. of Pub., [1892.] c. 2-328 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The narrative is confined to what a person may see and learn while sojourning in Korea. Much of the material appeared in letters contributed to the N. Y. Evening Post by the author, while in Korea. The work is in a more popular vein than those on the subject by Dr. Griffis, Percival Lowell and Rev. John Ross. Includes descriptions of the country, the government, the capital, the language, people, domestic life, religion, civilization, foreign relations, missionary work, etc.

Gilmore, Minnie. A son of Esau. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 6+353 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The son of Esau, Steele Harriman, sold his birthright of an honorable name and high ideals for success in speculations and association with pleasure-seekers of all kinds. The scene is a thriving Colorado town. His wife's faithful love and far-reaching sympathies finally right many of the wrongs he has committed. The pushing life in our western settlements is well drawn.

Gilmore, Minnie. The woman who stood between. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 4-155 p. D. cl., $1.

The hero Van Vost, is a pronounced anarchist at the age of thirty. His unsuccessful father, a theoretical German has made him swear all his life "to hate with an undying hatred, relentless as fate, strong as death, fierce as hell, the proud, the rich and the mighty." He meets a woman who is anxious to join his work but cannot agree to become his wife. His tragic end spoils his self-appointed scheme to right the wrongs of humanity. The story is told by the hero from the prison cell where he is awaiting capital punishment.

James Gilmour, missionary to Mongolia, was born near Glasgow, Scotland, June 12, 1843. In 1870 he went as missionary to China, and continued an active worker, both as physician and preacher, until May, 1891, when he died. His diaries and letters are full of interesting details, and this biography has been compiled from them by the author of "Norwegian pictures."

Before Denzil Quarrier met Lilian Allen he had strictly observed the requirements of society, because circumstance and impulse had favored such a condition. After their meeting, he thought he saw reasons why he should transgress the laws of both society and morality so put his plan into immediate action. While he lived quietly, the public did not concern itself with his individual life; but when he was brought into prominence, through politics, he realized by experience the necessity of social law.

Glave, E. J. In savage Africa; or, six years of adventure in Congo-land; with an introd. by H. M. Stanley; il. by the author, Bacher, Bridgman and others. N. Y., R. H. Russell & Son, [The De Witt Publishing House,] [1892.] c. 5–247 p. por. O. cl., $2.

Mr. Glave was a young Englishmen of eighteen, who in 1883 entered the service of the African International Association of Brussels, led by his longing for travel and exploration. His services were offered to Stanley when he started for the Congo, and the great explorer was so pleased with his enterprise and bravery that he made him at once chief of a new station that was to be built at Lukolela. Mr. Glave remained for six years in the heart of Africa, making many expeditions on his own responsibility, and living a life full of novelty and adventure. The volume is profusely illustrated.

La Forestier, the title by which this novel is known in French, is a picture of rustic life, of the kind made popular by the later works of George Sand. It is regarded as the first attempt at reaction against the literary methods of Zola and his followers. It never preaches, but it teaches through the representation of noble deeds done by noble beings. The author is the distinguished Procureur-General of France, well known for his prominence and devotion to public duty during the recent trial of the Anarchist Ravachol, and in the case of General Boulanger a few years ago.

A little girl rescued from the brutal proprietor of a travelling theatre—who willingly parts with her to a quixotic young man for fifty pounds—is the heroine of a long series of thrilling adventures. After a girlhood of peace and happiness with the mother of Gerald Daubney she attracts the attention of Daubney's uncle, Sir Rawdon, who persecutes her and instigates her supposed father to claim her again. She is several times abducted and most cruelly treated.

Gomme, G: Laurence. Ethnology in folklore. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 7+203 p. D. (Modern science ser., no. 4.) cl., $1.

That folklore contains ethnological elements might be expected, Mr. Gomme asserts, by all who have paid any attention to recent research. He has sought in this book to ascertain and set forth the principles upon which folklore may be classified, in six chapters, entitled, viz.: Survival and development: Ethnic elements in custom and ritual: The mythic influences of a conquered race; The localization of primitive belief; The ethnic genealogy of folklore; The continuation of races.

The two parts of this book, though divided in date of publication by an interval of nearly six years, were planned each for the other, and form together a consistent whole. In Pt. 1 the main stress is laid on the relations between Greek and English words, and the grammatical outline includes only the commonest and most regular declensions, and only the present indicative and infinitive of verbs. In Pt. 2 the leading idea is, in the words of Prof. Gildersleeve, "early contact with the language in mass." As regards vocabulary, both parts together contain, besides the proper names, about 865 Greek words.

The Marquise Le Moyne was a New York girl who had married a Frenchman. As her father and mother had separated when she was a child she only learns to know her father after her mother's death, when she returns to New York to aid in the settling of some money matters. She is then past thirty, rich, beautiful, and a widow with a little boy of eight years. The scene of the story is in an old country house, the home of the Marquise's father and brother. Here the Marquise has a sad love experience, which, though not unusual, is freshly and cleverly told.

Gordon, Rev. M. L., M.D. An American missionary in Japan. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 21+276 p. D. cl., $1.25.

In this manly and outspoken report on the possibilities of missionary work in Japan the information given is copious and at first hand. It is not a chronicle of the writer's individual deeds, "but an attempt to record what he has seen of the wonderful manner in which the religion of Christ is approaching the minds, hearts and lives of the Japanese people." It also outlines the way in which missionaries should prepare for, begin, and with the help of Japanese associates, to carry on successfully the work for which they are sent out. Introductory note by Dr. Griffis. Appendix containing Report of the Committee on a Christian College for Japan; Doshisha University Faculty of Instruction for 1891–92; Japanese Christian literature; Protestant missionary work in Japan for 1891; Creeds. Index.

Gordon, W. J. Englishman's Haven. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 5+288 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

"Englishman's Haven" was the first name by which Louisbourg was known. The siege and capture of this once formidable fortress, first by Americans and afterwards by the English, is the central motive of a romantic story. The boy-hero witnesses the scenes described, and has many exciting adventures among the Indians and French of Cape Breton.

A guide and help for the scholar, teacher and general reader in the history of our country. It offers suggestions for history reading, and gives topical lists of literature, telling where the books can be found and what each costs. The reference lists are divided for first, second and third years ; for a course in supplementary reading; for important anniversaries, etc. There is also a short list of the first books to buy.

Gore, C: The mission of the church: four lectures, delivered in June, 1892, in the Cathedral Church of St. Asaph. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. 12+123 p. D. cl., $1.

The Cathedral Church of St. Asaph, one of the smallest in Britain, stands in a little rural borough of North Wales. The writer is Principal of Pusey House, and two years ago was much criticised in connection with an article on "The Holy Spirit and inspiration," which appeared in "Lux Mundi." The separate titles of these lectures are: The mission of the church; Unity within the Church of England; The relation of the church to independent and hostile opinion, and The mission of the church in society. Copious notes define points of doctrine.

Goss, Warren Lee. Tom Clifton; or, western boys in Grant and Sherman's army, '61-'65. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1892.] c. 8+427 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Another story of the Civil War, and of a genuine boy, by the author of "Jed." Tom Clifton, the son of a Congregational minister living in Massachusetts, is the proverbial minister's son, his mischievousness and high spirits often leading him into trouble. His father's anti-slavery views make him unpopular, and just before the late war he moves to Minnesota with his family. Here Tom and his brother and a little Irish newsboy they pick up in New York see many novel phases of western life in a new country, and finally enter the army, being present at Shiloh, the siege of Corinth and capture of Vicksburg, at Atlanta and other great battles and engagements.

Gosse, Edmund. Gossip in a library. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [United States Book Co.,] 1891 [1892.] c. 10+337 p. D. il., $2.50.

Some years ago Mr. John Eliot Bowen, then editor of The Independent, suggested to the author to contribute to his paper a series of short studies on the history and contents of certain famous or curious books, the original editions of all of which should form part of his private library. Mr. Gosse did not find the task as simple as he supposed, and it has taken him five years to accomplish it. He has selected from his books some volumes which seem less known to modern readers than they should be, and has given brief retrospective reviews of them as though they were new discoveries. There are twenty-four books described. Full index.

Narcisse, an Italian gooseherd, is discovered by a great French sculptor and taught to sketch and model and carve. Although an expert mechanic Narcisse lacks inventive originality, and his master falls out with him on this account. Narcisse retires to a lonely hut and finally produces an original work. The story is laid in 1548, and love, jealousy, ignorance and superstition lie in wait for poor Narcisse and his secret. The descriptions of nature and family life in a little French Swiss village are skilfully finished. The end is artistic.

One of the best French veterinary text-books extant. Contains valuable information for the practitioner, the student, the horseman and the breeder. In the preparation of the work, the author's aim has been "to select from the science which treats of the rational improvement of domestic animals—the science of zoötechnics—that chapter which bears upon the consideration of the external forms and the characteristics of the horse in their connection with his mechanical aptitudes and his commercial value." This new edition has been the subject of a careful revision and of numerous alterations. Many new figures and a new plate have been added.

On a series of incidents, many of which are said to be actual occurrences, is founded a novel of historic interests and dramatic and realistic effects. The story occurs mostly in Paris. A masked woman and anonymous letters are the agencies of a plot against Julie de Marguerites. Some of the action of the Franco-Prussian War is introduced, notably the Siege of Strassbourg, the fighting before Metz and the bombardment of Paris. Bismarck is incidentally mentioned. The career of the heroine is said to be identical with that of one of the author's relatives, after whom he has named her.

Contents: The famous Christmas sermon, by Col. Robert G. Ingersoll, published in The Evening Telegram December 19, 1891, the indignant protests thereby evoked from ministers of various denominations, and Colonel Ingersoll's replies to same.

Green, Anna Katharine, [now Mrs. Rohlfs.] Cynthia Wakeham's money. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 4+336 p. il. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A telegram received by a New York lawyer, asking him to come without delay to Flatbush, L. I., to make the will of Cynthia Wakeham, starts a characteristic story by the author of "The Leavenworth case." The lawyer's search for the woman's heirs is rich in mysteries and horrors. The heroine is an exquisitely beautiful woman with a strange scar on her face, who almost falls a victim to the unreasoning hatred of her father and uncle.

Green, Mrs. Evelyn Everett. The church and the king: a tale of England in the days of Henry VIII. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1892. 6–599 p. il. D. cl., $1.75.

The hero of the story is Guy, second son of Sir Ralph Falconer, a Papist supposed to be prime mover in the religious revolt against Henry VIII. The attack against Wierwold Hall and the conspiracy of Lord Obaldistone, of the opposition party, with Lady Falconer, bring into prominence the religious and political movement of men who fought for and of those who opposed the establishment of the Protestant Episcopal Church as the Church of England.

Green, Mrs. Evelyn Everett. Dare Lorimer's heritage. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, 1892. 5+338 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Dare Lorimer, a second son, whose impetuous temper won for him the sobriquet Hotspur, and made him the victim in a series of family misunderstandings, is finally sent away from home. When he returns, after many years, his early escapades are forgotten, until Bryan, the eldest son, dies and Dare's parents suspect him of complicity in his brother's death. Their action involves a man's honor, a woman's love and the disposal of the Lorimer estate.

Green, Mrs. Evelyn Everett. The doctor's dozen. Phil., The American S. S. Union, 1892. 5–239 p. il. D. cl., 90 c.

A doctor in England dies, leaving a dozen children. With a reduced income they set about the problem of maintaining the common family life. They have to fight against the pride which made them feel disinclined to seek situations, but their good sense, energy and mutual helpfulness carry them through the hard places.

Green, Mrs. Evelyn Everett. In the wars of the roses: a story for the young. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1892. 7–256 p. il. D. cl., $1.

The chance resemblance of Prince Edward of Wales, son of Margaret of Anjou and Henry VI., to the son of a Staffordshire knight, leads to a case of mistaken identity, and causes Paul Bulkley to substitute himself for the heir-apparent to the English throne. On this incident of England's history is founded a story which deals with events that succeed the restoration of Henry VI., and introduces the struggle of the House of York and Lancaster with the succession of Edward IV.

Green, Mrs. Evelyn Everett. The Lord of Dynevor: a tale of the time of Edward the first. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1892. 7–260 p. il. D. cl., $1.

This story of the four sons of Res Vychan is historically true, though a pretty romance is woven into the facts and there are minor fictitious details. The scene is laid alternately in Wales and England during the period when the Welsh made their last struggle against English conquest. Wendot, the young Welsh lord of Dynevor, his turbulent brothers, the young Prince Alphonso, Gertrude Cherleton, and the royal princesses, Eleanor and Joanna, are all very natural young people, whose adventures friendships quarrels and tribulations are told with spirit and verisimilitude.

Green, J. R. A short history of the English people. [New] illustrated ed.; ed. by Mrs. J. R. Green and Miss Kate Norgate. V. 1. N. Y., Harper, 1893 [1892.] 26+468 p. por. Q. cl., $5.

It was a favorite wish with Mr. Green to see English history interpreted and illustrated by pictures which should tell us how men and things appeared to the lookers-on of their own day, and how contemporary observers aimed at representing them. His "Short history" was selected by his wife as especially adapted to this purpose. The pictures are from authentic sources, and illustrate the arts, industries, costumes, coins and domestic and ecclesiastical architecture of the period dealt with by the historian. In addition to these the work also contains an exhaustive series of portraits of eminent persons, besides several colored maps and colored reproductions from manuscripts, illuminated missals, etc.

Greene, Homer. The Riverpark rebellion. [Also] A tale of the tow-path; [il. by H. W. Peirce.] N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1892.] c. '89, '92. 274 p. D. cl., $1.

Riverpark Academy, the scene of the story, stands for the Riverview Military Academy at Poughkeepsie, N. Y., where the author long ago spent two years under the preceptorship of the late Colonel Otis Bisbee, who appears under the name of "Colonel Silsbee." The "rebellion" is a vivid scene from a boy's life at school, which may or may not be all true, although it has a background of fact. In "A tale of the tow-path" the Pennsylvania canal region is vividly described.

Greene, Sarah P. McLean. Vesty of the Basins: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4+271 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The author of "Cape Cod folks" takes for the scene of her story a small fishing village on the far "down east" coast of Maine. A pathetic story of love and self-sacrifice has pretty "Vesty" for its heroine. Many graphic and humorous character sketches of the "natives," with scenes from their lives, make an attractive frame for the story.

Greener, W. W. The breech-loader, and how to use it. N. Y., Forest and Stream Pub. Co., 1892. 6+288 p. il. D. bds., $1.

The book is not written for experts, nor for those who have special opportunities for the acquisition of the art of shooting. Has chapters on the following: The shot-gun; On the choice and fit of a gun: Of the shape and dimensions of gun-stocks; Handling the gun; The essentials of a gun; Of shooting generally; Of trap-shooting. It aims to induce all who can to participate in a manly sport by proving that it is an inexpensive recreation.

Marcelline Lemartray is left an orphan at eighteen. Her father's testament specially cautions her against marrying a sailor. She is put in charge of kind guardians who, however, are tempted from time to time to let the fortune of the heiress enrich their near friends and relatives. At last Marcelline's heart goes out to an officer in the Mediterranean Squadron, and a careful reading of her father's will justifies her in following its promptings.

Dr. Griffis, who by years of residence in Japan is exceptionally qualified to write of that country, has here given in compact form the history of Japan, so far as this can be readily understood by westerners, and an account of the change from Old Japan to New. He has told a number of interesting stories from the Japanese folk-lore, and has described many of the Japanese customs, making an excellent book to introduce Japan to American young people.

Griffith, Cecil, [Mrs. S. Beckett.] Corinthia Marazion: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., [1892.] 382 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels, no. 131.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Corinthia Marazion, adopted daughter and niece of Professor Lockyer, scientist, was besides his literary associate and the betrothed wife of his son. Recognizing that his term of life is limited, the professor uses means to bring a recreant lover to terms, and thus brings about unforeseen terminations, one of which is the marriage of a churchman to an agnostic. Through the life of an ill-assorted couple and a woman's varied experiences the moral is conveyed.

As Mr. Grinnell is notably one of the pioneer settlers of Iowa, in his record of life and passing events is seen the informal history of that State from its first decade to recent time, with its social and political conditions and progress; also the individual action of many celebrated men who were contemporaries, or who came under the personal observation of the author. Among these are the members of Lincoln's war cabinet, such as Chase, Stanton, Seward and others, with authors of the present day, such as W. W. Story, Bill Nye, Arthur Sherburne and Hardy. Grinnell's position in regard to emancipation is outlined.

The object of the list is to direct readers to a number of novels, easily accessible, which, in many cases, have been forgotten within a few years after publication. The compiler has tried to include only such works as are well-written, interesting and free from sensationalism, sentimentality and pretence. In a few instances books have been noticed on account of the reputation of their authors rather than their merits.

Grossmith, G: and Weedon. The diary of a nobody: il. by Weedon Grossmith. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1892.] 235 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The "nobody" is a London city clerk who records in his diary the every-day doings of his uneventful life. His wife and son, a few friends, servants and tradesmen make up his little world and his petty adventures, conjugal bickerings, holidays, "parties," badinage and practical joking are the chief episodes in a sketchy narrative of second-class London life. The chapters originally appeared serially in Punch.

Growoll, A. A bookseller's library, and how to use it. N. Y., Office of The Publishers' Weekly, 1891. c. 5–72 p. S. cl., $1.

A useful little hand-book for the booksellers and [illegible]

rian. The volume contains annotated lists of the principal American, English, German and French book-trade catalogues, trade and literary journals, leading library and auction catalogues, catalogues of dealers in second-hand books with mention of their specialties, etc. These lists are accompanied by concise and practical hints as to how they may best be used, and the volume thus forms a desirable manual, particularly for the young bookseller.

Gudeman, Alfred. Syllabus on the history of classical philology. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. 4+50 p. O. pap., 55 c.

This syllabus was originally prepared for a course of lectures on the history of classical philology, given at the Johns Hopkins University.

A collection of useful words, a list of comparatives and of superlatives, the principal irregular verbs, familiar expressions and phrases, dialogues, sentences, tables of money, weights and measures, Latin abbreviations, Roman calendar, celebrated sayings from the Roman writers, and Latin quotations in common use. Designed as an elementary text-book with view of promoting Latin speech in the class-room.

Guiney, Louise Imogen. Monsieur Henri: a footnote to French history. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 7+139 p. por. T. cl., $1.

This latest contribution to the history of the French revolution has all the charm of romance, and more, it aims to be the portrait of a man whose character vitalized an event, and is the tragic story of La Rochejaquelein and the army of La Vendée told again with the aid of materials recently brought to light and a careful comparison of many authorities.

Guinness, H. Grattan, D.D. The city of the seven hills: an illustrated poem. N. Y. and Chic. Fleming H. Revell Co., 1892. 302 p. 12°, cl., $1.

Gummere, Francis B. Germanic origins: a study in primitive culture. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 10+490 p. O. cl., $2.

A study of the sources of language, literature and institutions of the English-speaking race. Gives an account of the founders of that race while they still held their old home, their old faith, their old customs. The author has kept his text clear from cumbrous allusions, putting his material for wider study and his quotations from authorities in very complete notes. The Normans and Danes, the writer says, cannot be considered founders of England. It lies between the Celts whom Cæsar found in Britain and the Germanic invaders and conquerors who seized upon the island when the Roman had withdrawn. Their separate claims he makes clear. The author is Professor of English in Haverford College.

Guthrie, F. Anstey, ["F. Anstey."] Mr. Punch's model music-hall songs and dramas: collected, improved and rearranged from Punch. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 3-220 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Thirteen burlesque music-hall ditties, patriotic, idyllic, amatory, chivalrous, plaintive, etc., also a dozen short "dramas" parodying the conventional third-rate melodrama or tragedy. Mr. Punch recommends his little volume to music-hall managers who are obliged to conform to the "stringent supervision exercised by those active and intelligent guardians of middle-class morality, the London County Council."

Guthrie, F. Anstey, ["F. Anstey."] The talking horse. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. '91. 298 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Gustavus Pulvertoft's desire to excel in equestrianship, and thus please Miss Diana Chetwynd, leads him to mount on trial an animal procured of a neighboring jobmaster. His recital of what followed involves a question of sanity and a spirited dialogue which Mr. Pulvertoft avers took place between himself and Brutus, the horse, in which the latter has decidedly the advantage so far as wit is concerned. This initial story, which is both humorous and pathetic, is followed by The good little girl; A matter of taste; Don, the story of a greedy dog: Taken by surprise; Paleface and redskin; Shut out; Tommy's hero; A canine Ishmael; Marjory.

Guthrie, F. Anstey, ["F. Anstey."] The travelling companions: a story in scenes; reprinted from Punch; il. by J. Bernard Partridge. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 162 p. 4°, hf. cl., $1.75.

Guthrie, F. Anstey, ["F. Anstey."] Voces populi: [reprinted from Punch,] il. by J. Bernard Partridge. 2d ser. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 3+156 p. sq. O. hf. cl., $1.75.

The voces populi overheard at the British Museum, in an omnibus, on the ice, in a fog, on bank holidays, at the horse show, at a music hall, and in other haunts of the middle-class Londoners form these twenty-eight amusing dramatic scenes. Like the first series these photographic bits of London life originally appeared in Punch.

H., J. W. The story of the life of Mackay of Uganda: told for boys by his sister. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Sons, 1892. 6+338 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The story of one of the early missionaries to Africa. Mackay was a Scotchman who in 1876 started to Africa to carry out a long cherished plan to convert the heathen. His story is one of great personal heroism and moral courage. The sister of Alexander Mackay wrote this volume, and states in a preface that the whole of the matter is fresh and not found in the larger book, "Mackay of Uganda."

H., M., comp. Poetry of the gathered years. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 3-169 p. S. cl., $1.

Selections from many poets, chiefly American, bearing upon the coming on of age and voicing content and resignation. They are classified under the following headings: September, thirty-five; October, two score and ten: November, three score; December, seven times eleven. Delicately bound in white, with blue and gold decoration and lettering.

Habberton, J: A lucky lover. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] c. 2+306 p. D. cl., $1.25.

This story, although abounding in characters, incidents and humor, is a close study of the average young man of good character and intuitions, during the period in which he imagines himself in love. The scenes are laid in New York and North Carolina, the heroine being southern born.

Habberton, J: Well out of it; six days in the life of an ex-teacher. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1892.] c. 4-184 p. D. (Mayflower lib., no. 5.) pap., 30 c.

Reminiscences of a love affair, with the attendant worries of a public school teacher, induce Ruth Brown to take a needed vacation; she selects a place of sojourn which she believes entirely free of children, and as a result is the central figure in a romance in which a little girl is the mediator, and Frank Wayne the hero. The novel is told in six chapters, each chapter brings out some incident of a healthy love-story

Haggard. H. Rider. Nada the lily. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. c. '91. 15+295 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Africa, the scene of Mr. Haggard's earlier successes, is again made the background of a romance very much in the style of "She" and "Allan Quatermain," with the exception that the present story claims to be in its main facts a true one. It is a story of Zululand and of the great Zulu chief Chaka, who only died in 1828. He was a great military genius and a bad man, wading through seas of blood in the attainment of his desires. "Umslopogaas," known to Haggard's earlier readers, has the story of his youth told. He is the hero of Nada's pathetic love-story. The story is rich in wonderful and sensational details.

Hakes, H:, M.D. The discovery of America by Christopher Columbus. Columbian fair ed. Wilkesbarre, Pa., [printed for the author, H: Hakes, M.D., by] Rob. Bauer & Son, 1892. c. 132 p. sq. S. cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

Intended to give the mass of mankind in this hurrying age "a sufficiently full historical statement to elucidate the great event the world is preparing to commemorate."

Hale, E: Everett. East and West: a story of new-born Ohio. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 2+267 p. D. cl., $1.

The period of the story is a hundred years ago. The scenes are taken from the early settlement of Ohio. The heroine, Sarah Parris, is a pretty New England girl of Salem, who goes out to the reservation in the party of the Rev. Manasseh Cutler to teach school. Her experience offers a graphic picture of rough pioneer life in those days.

Hale, E: Everett. Story of Massachusetts, Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1892.] c. '91. 4–359 p. il. pors. maps, O. (Story of the states, no. 8.) cl., $1,50.

Mr. Hale has selected twenty occasions of critical interest in the history of Massachusetts, and to each of these he has given a chapter, showing the connection between these chapters whenever it seemed necessary. He begins with the probable discovery of its territory by the Northmen in the tenth century. The chapter devoted to the Civil War and the chapter which treats of the manufactures of the state are skilfully condensed. Gives chronological table of leading events, list of governors and full index.

Hale, E: Everett. Sybil Knox; or, home again: a story of to-day. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 3+321 p. D. cl., $1.

When the opportunity came for Sybil Knox to end a protracted stay in Rome, she gladly seized it, and for reasons of her own took second cabin passage in the Tropic; she has for a fellow-passenger Bertha Gerhard, in quest of a lost husband. The story tells how Mrs. Knox aided Bertha in the search, and of her impressions and experiences in her native New England village, Atherton; in these there is food for speculation, comparisons and social study.

Hale, E: Everett and Lucretia P. The new Harry and Lucy: a story of Boston in the summer of 1891. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 6+321 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Harry and Lucy were fictitious creations of Maria Edgeworth. The present Harry and Lucy, who have surnames identical with those of Thomas Day's "Sanford and Merton," resemble the originals of Miss Edgeworth's story in name, and in the fact of their correspondence being used as a means of showing the Boston of to-day. Notable features, with current action latest topics, recent fads and foibles of society, religion and the educational system are discussed in their individual letters. The relationship of the hero and heroine, however, differs from Miss Edgeworth's Harry and Lucy; hence a romantic conclusion.

Hale, G: W. Police and prison cyclopædia. Cambridge, Mass., printed for the author [G: W. Hale, Lawrence, Mass.,] at the Riverside Press, 1892. c. 6+273 p. O. cl., $2.50.

Pt. 1 gives definitions of crimes and criminal terms; explains the rights and duties of police officers; duties of patrolmen; explains citizenship and naturalization; extradition of persons accused of crime, giving list of countries with which the United States has extradition treaties, with forms in use at the State Department; jurisdiction of courts; the civil service, with illustrations of examination papers. Pt. 2 contains a large amount of information of the police departments of the different cities in the United States of 10,000 population and over. Pt. 3 relates to the prisons of the country. Pt. 4 treats of foreign police departments and prisons, and Pt. 5 miscellaneous matters, including factory inspectors of the United States and Canada, information as to marriage, a brief account of Pinkerton's agency, and other things.

Hall, Gertrude. Far from to-day. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 4–291 p. S. cl., $1.

The first of six short stories is entitled Tristiane, because it tells of that heroine's part in removing a king's ban, and restoring Magnus Magnussun his earthly goods. Five others are called Sylvanus: The sons of Philemon; Theodolind; Servirol; Shepherds.

Hall, H: Ethan Allen, the Robin Hood of Vermont. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 7+207 p. D. cl., $1.

Ethan Allen's cool audacity, the daring raids of his outlawed band of "Green Mountain Boys," his capture of Ticonderoga—all the eventful episodes of his career justly earn for him the title of the "Robin Hood of Vermont." The author's purpose throughout has been to present "a fuller life of Allen than has yet been written, and singling him from that cluster of sturdy patriots in the New Hampshire Grants, to make plain the vivid personality of a Vermont hero to the younger generations." The work was left unfinished in 1889 by the author's death, and has been completed by his daughter, Henrietta Hall Boardman.

Hanslick, E: The beautiful in music: a contribution to the revisal of musical aesthetics; tr. by Gustav Cohen. N. Y., Novello, Ewer & Co., 1891. 174 p. 12°, cl., $2.

"I take up the cudgels," says the writer, "against those aesthetic enthusiasts who, though presuming to teach the musician, in reality only dilate upon their tinkling opium dream. I am quite at one with those who hold that the ultimate worth of the beautiful must ever depend upon the immediate verdict of the feelings. But at the same time I firmly adhere to the conviction that all the customary appeals to our emotional faculty can never show the way to a single musical law."

Hardy, T: Tess of the D'Urbervilles: a pure woman faithfully presented. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. '91 4+421 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Happy, easy-going John Durbeyfield is informed by his pastor, an antiquarian, that he is a descendant of the D'Urbervilles. This information intoxicates his equally easy-going wife, and she decides to send Tess, their beautiful daughter, to hunt up their nearest titled relatives. This journey is the primary cause of all of Tess' misfortunes. One half suspects Mr. Hardy of a desire to argue out the justice of the comparative punishments meted to man and to woman, when they break the commandments of man. Mr. Hardy has taken a large canvas and filled it with sketches of great finish, but his plan seems to lack unity whether his work is viewed from an artistic or ethical standpoint. The life in a dairy district of rural England is made real in skilful word-painting. The High-Church party in England receives a rather malicious hit. The author has material for several stories in this book.

Virginia a century and a half ago has been chosen as the scene of a tragic love-story. The idolized daughter and heiress of Colonel Byrd was forced by her father to abandon the hope of marrying an English peer, because he was a Roman Catholic. Colonel Byrd's private secretary plays a most ignoble part in the house of his patron.

Written at the request of the National Mary Washington Memorial Association. A reverent tribute to the memory of a woman of marked characteristics, who should be better known and esteemed by her country-women, and also an interesting picture of life in Virginia in the early part of the eighteenth century. Mary Ball was born in 1706, married Augustine Washington in 1730 and died in 1789 In 1833 a monument was begun to her memory with much flourish, but has remained unfinished. The memorial association now see their way to finishing a suitable "sacred column."

The author practically acknowledges this volume to be a sketch of his own early life. The adventures of Joe Maxwell begin with his first departure from home to a distant plantation, where a weekly paper, The Countryman, was printed, and where he was to learn the trade of a printer. Tracking runaways, hunting coons and listening to new "Brer Rabbit" stories from the negroes are among Joe's many pleasures. Scenes from the war close the book.

In this volume Mr. Harris concludes the series of Uncle Remus' stories, which have won such wide popularity. Uncle Remus has become a classic character in American fiction and is accurately and delightfully representative of his race in the Southern States. His philosophy, his humor and his views of life are again seen at their best in these twenty-four short stories, sixteen songs and ballads and twenty-one sketches of home and friends. Twelve illustrations.

"Crow's Nest" is a beautiful southern home left motherless some years before the arrival of two young northern men in search of health and pleasure. The events of the summer of 1863, during the Civil War, influence the lives of all the characters. There are four "Belhaven Tales," entitled, When the century came in, told in letters dated 1803; Penelope's swains; Monsieur Alcibiade, and Gay's romance. Una and King David is, like all the others, a story of the old comfortable homes of Old Virginia just before the all-changing war of 1861-1865.

Harrison, Mrs. Constance Cary, [Mrs. Burton Harrison.] A daughter of the South, and shorter stories. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 3+281 p. D. cl., $1.

The first story was originally published in The Cosmopolitan Magazine. Its heroine is a young creole who loses fortune through the United States Rebellion 1861-65. In the romance of Bertha de Lagastine is seen the disappointment and aspirations of a young girl, the reward of an ex Federal soldier, some of the splendors of New Orleans plantation life before the Civil War, the action of the southern colony in France after that war, a few of the characters of the Second Empire, notably the Empress Eugenie and Napoleon. The supplementary stories are: A thorn in his cushion; Mr. Clendenning Piper; Jenny the débutante (first issued in Wide Awake); Wife's love; A harp unstrung; A suit decided.

"The second volume of the Epochs of American history aims to follow out the principles laid down for the 'Colonies,' the study of causes rather than of events, the development of the American nation out of scattered and inharmonious colonies, the throwing off of English control, the growth out of narrow political conditions, the struggle against foreign domination, and the extension of popular government are all parts of the uninterrupted process of the 'Formation of the Union."—Preface. So mighty a development can be treated only in its elements in this small volume. Much matter is thrown into graphic form in the maps; the suggestions for readers and teachers and the bibliographies at the heads of the chapters are meant to lead to more detailed accounts, both of events and of social and economic conditions.

Harte, Fs. Bret. A first family of Tasajara. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. '91. 2+301 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Tasajara valley, California, is the scene. Some Oakland capitalists proposing to run a railroad from that place to Tasajara Creek, send surveyors. These find themselves the guests of the storekeeper of Siddon. In course of conversation one of the prospectors gives Dan Harknit a hint about running a waterway from his place to the creek. The latter seeing great possibilities for himself and family, is tempted to retain a title and claims which fell into his hands through the apparent weakness and crowning vice of one Lige Curtis. This incident is the basis of a novel of unexpected termination, sensational events and typical characters.

The mysterious disappearance of a wealthy and respected banker, who has apparently committed forgery and deserted his family, is the groundwork of this story. Later the banker reappears with explanations that are accepted by his associates. His story is contested by a rugged mill-worker, who declares himself to be the missing man, and whose desperate claim is supported by the deserted wife. The question of identity and the mysterious attendant details are well worked out. Hypnotism is an important element in the story, and the writer states that "the strangest incidents are the true ones," as set forth in the records of the Societies for Psychical Research.

Hatton, Jos. The Princess Mazaroff: a romance of the day. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [United States Book Co., 1892.] c. '91. 357 p. D. cl., $1.

The Princess Mazaroff, suffering great provocation at the hands of her husband the Prince, quarrelled irrevocably with him and sought the protection of Richard Travers. Travers and the Princess lived harmoniously in Paris, until a strange adventure and a visit to England led Dick to see his liaison in all its hideous reality. When he attempts to escape from the thralls of the Russian, the result is dramatic in the extreme, involving the life of one woman, the fate of a second, the good name of one man, and the honor of a parson. The story ends in a rather every-day way in Yorkshire.

There is some dissatisfaction with the International Lessons because they do not provide a continuous study of the life of Christ, but always follow some one particular Gospel or Book of the Bible To meet this demand this book is prepared. The scheme of chronology followed is that of Andrews' "Life of our Lord." Stalker's division of the ministry of Christ into the year of obscurity, the year of public favor and the year of opposition is also followed. Beyond that the analysis is original.

English country life, with its hunting, driving, walking, visiting and flirting, forms the framework of a pure and cleverly told love-tale. Sybil Carew is the heroine. She lives at the Priory with her grandmother old Mrs. Rashleigh, but is neglected and disliked by her, as she is the offspring of a runaway match made by Mrs. Rashleigh's daughter with a gallant Irish officer. Sybil's isolated life develops her mind, and she becomes a writer of children's stories. The two romantic love-affairs in which she figures serve finely to illustrate her noble character.

Hector, Mrs. Annie F., ["Mrs. Alexander," pseud.] Mammon. N. Y., J: W. Lovell Co., [United States Book Co., 1892.] c. '91. 2–392 p. D. cl., $1.

The scene is London. The chief actors are Tracey and Brandon. The former simply worships money: the latter covets it as a means of procuring a cherished end. Their mutual love of one object leads these very dissimilar men to co-operate, and the result is a scheme that has issues which are made clear in a novel of good character scope.

Hector, Mrs. Annie F., ["Mrs. Alexander," pseud.] The snare of the fowler. N. Y,, Cassell Pub. Co, [1892.] c. 5+349 p. D. cl., $1.

A young girl who believes herself as poor as she is friendless almost falls a victim to the intrigues of an unprincipled woman, an aunt by marriage, who offers her a home, and endeavors to force her into a marriage with her handsome but worthless son. The secret of the aunt's desire to unite the young people is the knowledge she and her son alone possess of facts in the girl's history regarding her claim upon a large estate. The plot is long and has many surprises. The story does not often stray away from London, the characters being taken from fashionable and middle-class English life.

Hedd, Luke A., (pseud.) Philip Meyer's scheme: a story of trades unionism. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, [1892.] c. 2–144 p. D. (The sunnyside ser., no. 67.) pap., 25 c.

Philip Meyer's scheme is that every workman should belong to the union; that all the trades should be one organization, with the separate trades under special committees All members of the union should contribute a relative proportion of their earnings to a fund which would be rich enough to pay strikers full wages and enable labor to resist capital when it is unjustly treated. The writer thinks workingmen owe it to their own negligence and want of co-operation that so many grievances remain without redress. The time is the beginning of the next century.

Helen Brent, M.D.: a social study. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 3+196 p. nar. D. cl., 75 c.

Helen Brent, M.D., has advanced theories of a woman's needs and duties These conflict with the ideas of her suitor, Harold Seidmore, and as they are both indisposed to relinquish individual convictions, Helen decides that they are unfitted to marry: accordingly she pursues her calling, and Harold marries a society woman. In the developments of both their lives is seen the failures and successes of entirely diverse plans of life, and their separate conclusions of a social problem.

Hensel, Octavia. Imperia: a story from the Court of Austria. Buffalo, N. Y., C: Wells Moulton, 1892. c. 4–352 p. D. pap., 75 c.

The scene opens in Walderbridge, Castle Zadowa, Moldavia. Prince Velutini, who is on the eve of making a morganatic marriage, is apprehended and his design frustrated by Imperia Countess Fernandez. On her action is dependant a story of strong motives, love and intrigue, in which are seen the romantic history of an Austrian Prince and the indomitable purpose of a noble woman.

Henslow, Rev. G: The making of flowers. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., 1891 [1892.] 3–168 p. S. (Romance of science ser.) cl., $1.

The romance of science, the series to which this volume belongs, aims to show "that science has for the masses as great interest as, and more edification than, the romances of the day." The author's method of explaining the facts and phenomena of the flower-world is particularly graphic.

Henty, G. A. Beric the Briton: a story of the Roman invasion; il. by W. Parkinson. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 4–383 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The story of a young Briton during the reign of Nero. He takes a prominent part in the war against the Romans, is finally made a prisoner and carried to Rome, where he becomes a gladiator. The story is full of vivid pictures of savage Britain and cultured Roman life, of thrilling scenes in the arena and in the city during that interesting period, including a description of the burning of Rome.

Hepworth, G: The life beyond; this mortal must put on immortality. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., 1892. c. 3–116 p. D. cl., $1.

The author's object is to give good cheer to that large class of readers who feel the imperative need of a belief in "The life beyond" to enable them to bear the sorrows, disappointments and trials of this life with hopeful resignation. He has not attempted to array argument against argument, but to show, by reference to the homely experiences of every day, that immortality is a part of the Divine plan for the development and education of the soul.

Her mistake: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892. c. 10–360 p. D. pap., 50 c.

Flora Valmore met and loved George Null, but refused to listen to his suit because some of his characteristics offended her. After this episode she entered the Convent of Santa Maria as a sister; later she regrets this step and escapes. The incidents of her life from this period make a romantic and somewhat sensational story.

Herford, Brooke. A protestant poor friar: the life-story of Travers Madge. Bost., Damrell & Upham, [1892.] 6+192 p. S. flex. cl., 50 c.

Travers Madge was born 1823, and died 1866. At his death the writer was called upon to speak at a service held in his memory by friends and fellow-workers in his Manchester labors among the poor. This book is an elaboration of the discourse prepared for that occasion. Travers Madge was an outspoken man, broad in sympathy, with an abhorrence of sectarianism, a spirit simple, truthful and pure, who lived wholly to help his fellow-men.

Angel is a contraction of Angelica, the heroine's name. The novel is based on her sensational love-affair with the son of a desperado, and a ghastly incident of western life. The scene is on Angelica City, Colorado, and New York City.

Herndon, W: H., and Weik, Jesse W. Abraham Lincoln; the true story of a great life; with an introd. by Horace White. [New ed. rev. and enl.] N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. '88–'92. 2 v., 28+331; 7+348 p. pors. D. cl., $3.

This is probably the most intimate life of Lincoln ever written. The book, by Lincoln's law-partner, William H. Herndon, and his friend, Jesse W. Weik, shows us Lincoln the man. It is a true picture of his surroundings and influences and acts. It is not an attempt to construct a political history, with Lincoln often in the background, nor is it an effort to apotheosize the American who stands first in our history next to Washington. The writers knew Lincoln intimately, and their biography must take permanent rank as the best and most illuminating study of Lincoln's character and personality. First published in 1889 by Belford, Clarke & Co.

The present volume, with the exception of the introductory chapter, is a direct translation of a German work, the editor assuming no higher responsibility than that of making the text fully intelligible to English readers. To that end brief notes have been added, and an obscure phrase here and there modified. The author of course speaks with authority on his subject, as "Skat" is a game which is still a novelty in this country.

Republican campaign handbook. The author's preface claims that the studies "furnish an authoritative review of the tariff, commerce, finances and national policies of the United States from the adoption of the Constitution to the present year. They portray the condition of the wage-earner under a tariff purposely framed to exclude protection, and under one purposely framed to provide protection, and the wages of labor in this country and in Europe are graphically compared. They also compare the results to the farmer and the manufacturer from increasing wages and decreasing prices during the Protective Tariff period. They treat silver as one of the products of labor. They examine the trade of South American countries, and show the possibilities and achievements of Reciprocity."

Dr. Percy's great work, "The metallurgy of lead, including desilverization and cupellation," was published in 1870 and has become a standard in several languages. During the past twenty years so much that is new has been introduced in American practice that a book embodying latest improvements is a necessity. The author, who is professor in the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, intends his book specially for Americans, and has discussed new European methods chiefly in connection with their applicability to this country. This book is intended for the student, the metallurgist and the investigator.

Dr. Holbrook advocates hygienic treatment as a curative and preventative of consumption. Hence a work introducing his methods. This is divided in three parts: Pt. 1, dealing with nature and cause of disease; pt. 2, its prevention and treatment in earlier stages; pt. 3, treatment of advanced cases. Several chapters are devoted to pure light, sun bathing and vocal culture, as these are considered important accessories of the treatment. Under the head of microorganisms Koch's experiments are discussed. Climate as it effects the subject is also considered.

Holt, Mrs. Elizabeth F. From attic to cellar; or, housekeeping made easy. Salem, Mass., Salem Press Pub. and Print. Co., 1892. c. 7+164 p. S. cl., $1.

Gives the practical details of arrangement and of work in the household. Recipes of cooking are not given, as the author considers this ground fully and successfully covered elsewhere. Directions for furnishing the rooms, training the servants, advice for simplifying housework, and many suggestive thoughts founded on experience are put into attractive shape.

Holt, Emily Sarah. All's well; or, Alice's victory. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] 285 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A story of the Weald of Kent in 1556–58—the days of the persecution of Protestants under Queen Mary. The heroine is Alice Benden, one of the "Canterbury martyrs" who was burned at the stake, June 19, 1557. Mistress Benden was delivered to justice by her own husband and her story was most pathetic. The fortunes of several other Kentish families who suffered persecution for their faith furnish a succession of interesting incidents. The home life of the period is pleasantly described.

Holt, Emily Sarah. Countess Maud; or, the changes of the world: a tale of the fourteenth century. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff, [1892.] 4–384 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Countess Maud began life somewhere between the years 1360–66. Her father was Adam Francis, mercer and former Lord Mayor of London. This historical novel is founded on her varied experience before and after she was Lady Maud de Montacute. Some contemporaneous incidents of English history and many famous personages of the day are introduced.

Holt, Emily Sarah. The harvest of yesterday: a tale of the sixteenth century. Bost., Bradley & Woodruff. [1892.] 5–384 p. il. D. cl, $1.25.

Among the numerous and gorgeous figures which crowd upon the canvas of the early Reformation period one of the most brilliant and imposing is Charles Brandon, Duke of Suffolk. He and his have been several times chosen for the principal figures of a historical tale. But there is one episode in his life which few know—one sad and true story that has scarcely come to light. That story is told in these pages.

Sermons and good counsels addressed to the people in Virginia and Alabama, among whom the author worked for many years. Of special value are the words concerning: A model Christian family; Mists cleared away; A word to mothers; A word to the penitent; Love messages from Paul, etc.

Hope, Anthony. Mr. Witt's widow: a frivolous tale. N. Y., United States Book Co., 1892. c. 5+243 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

The fascinations of Mr. Witt's widow are "harmonious contrasts," chief among which are dark eyes and golden hair. She is about to take as second husband Gerald Neston, an Englishman of good position, when his cousin, a young lawyer, is struck with the resemblance of Neaera Witt to Nelly Gale, a girl he had defended seven years before on a charge of theft. The story relates his efforts to trace her identity, and leaves the reader's mind in suspense until the unexpected dénouement.

Hopkins, A. K. A daughter of the Druids. Bost., [Damrell & Upham,] 1892. c. 4–297 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The heroine, Allice de Kymber, inherited, along with the traditional beliefs of her Druid ancestry, a love of astronomy. Her experiments in that science lead her to be suspected of witchcraft, and finally to flee England. The story gives the details of her flight and of the romantic episode between a scientific man and a visionary woman.

Hopkins, G. Irving. Manual of plane geometry, on the Heuristic plan; with numerous extra exercises, both theorems and problems, for advance work. Bost, D. C. Heath & Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 7+179 p. il. D. hf. leath., 75 c.

The demonstrations are purposely left incomplete, that the pupil may be compelled by the exercise of his reasoning powers to gain the full discipline which the study of geometry affords.

Hopkins, Louisa Parsons. The spirit of the new education. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. 2–282 p. D. cl., $1.50.

These essays are an outgrowth of vital relations with the educational reforms of the day, and represent advanced theories; they have a strong flavor of discussion and active participation in questions constantly pressed upon the consideration of thoughtful teachers. The great problems of the development of character, and the evolution of the moral nature, it is claimed, have been ever present in the author's thought. Among the subjects treated are the following: "Manual training," "Kindergarten addresses," "The utility of the ideal," "The relations of the schools to citizenship," "Character as an object of school education," "Elementary science," "Public school curriculum," "Moral education," "Physical training as a means of moral training," "Our divine attachments," etc.

Hopkins, Tighe. The incomplete adventurer. [Also] The boom in Bell Topps. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1892.] c. '92. 3–274 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 2006.) pap., 25 c.

The initial story tells amusingly of an impecunious young fellow's unsuccessful efforts to organize a stock company to handle a mysterious and potent medicinal powder. "The boom in Bell Topps" is a short tale of a London city clerk who invests an unexpected legacy of fifty pounds in American silver mines, lives extravagantly while expecting to realize a fortune, and finds himself ruined by the sudden collapse of the "boom."

Hoppin, Ja. M. The early Renaissance, and other essays on art subjects. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 5+306 p. O. cl., $2.

Twelve essays by the Professor of the History of Art in Yale University. The subjects are: The early Renaissance; Principles of art; Tendencies of modern art; French landscape painting; Murillo; Art in education; Art and religion; Bourges cathedral; The Lens-altar of Pergamon; Critique of a Greek statue; The masterpiece of Scopas; and Hellas. Seven of these have already appeared in periodicals. Prof. Hoppin believes that art dwells in the human soul and shows itself in an infinite variety of form like the types and products of nature. He acknowledges Ruskin as the best guide to the facts and ideas of nature, although he differs sometimes from Ruskin in drawing conclusions from these facts.

Horace, [Quintus Horatius Flaccus.] Odes and epodes; tr. into English verse, with introd., notes and Latin text, by J: B. Hague. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 12+188 p. O. cl., $1.75.

Except in chronological arrangement, the order is that of the majority of editions. The translator has adopted a chronology which to him seems to have fewer objective points than some accepted methods. It is an object of this version to condense where it is possible to do so without ommissions, as there is no equivalent in English for original lyrical verse. The translator has been free to select his metrical form.

Horine, Rev. M. C. Practical reflections on the Book of Ruth; with introd. by Eli Huber, D.D. Phil., Lutheran Pub. Soc., [1892.] c. 122 p. D. cl., 50 c.

Prepared by the Pastor of St. James' Lutheran Church, Reading, Pa., for his own congregation. He dwells particularly on the duties taught in the Book of Ruth, which are needed in every life—trust, cheerfulness, hope, courage and thoughtfulness for others. The introduction is by the pastor of Messiah Lutheran Church, Philadelphia, Pa.

Hosea, Mrs. Rob. Eastward, the Buddhist lover: a novel. 2d ed. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1892. c. '90. 5+267 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The hero is a young Buddhist who comes to America for the purpose of fitting himself for missionary work in his native land. His theological course, instead of converting him to the religion of Christianity, only makes him more staunch to the tenets of Buddhism. A love-affair is an issue of a story that contains in addition to information about Occultism, a defiance of orthodox Christianity.

Houston, Edwin J. A dictionary of electrical words, terms and phrases. 2d ed., rewritten and enl. N. Y., W. J. Johnston Co., 167–176 Times Bldg., 1892. c. '89, '92. 4+562 p. il. O. cl., $5.

Although a comparatively short time has elapsed since the original issue of the work, the rapid growth of electrical science has induced a second edition, which is practically a new work based on the same general plan as the original. Its character is encyclopædic, endeavor being made to define electrical words, terms and phrases, and at the same time to give a brief statement of the principles of science involved in the definition. The system of cross-references renders it possible to use the dictionary as a text-book. The order of arrangement in present volume differs considerably from the earlier issue, especially as to means of treating initial letters, etc. New words are also introduced and modifications of those formerly used.

This was the topic for debate at a recent meeting of "Sorosis." Mrs. Lozier, the President, acted as judge in deciding which method was entitled to the prize of $20 in gold. She decided for the method entitled "Companionship the requisite," on page 90.

Howard, Blanche Willis, [now Mrs. von Teuffel.] A battle and a boy: a story for young people. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1892.] c. 285 p. D. cl., $1.

The boy is a little Tyrolean waif who is bought at the child-market in a Wurtemburg city and taken to a rich farmer's dairy near Stuttgart to help carry milk. Among the customers he serves he hears many words that fire his imagination. He has rough work, but his battle is bravely fought and his proud, generous little soul longs to help those who are good to him. Incidentally a "Knabenhort" is described, an association to teach boys self-respect and give them a chance to learn. We leave our hero meditating whether he will be a Galileo, an Edison, a Raphael, a Christopher Columbus, or a Schiller.

Howard, Blanche Willis, [now Mrs. von Teuffel,] and Sharp, W: A fellowe and his wife. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 3–255 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The well-known English writer and Miss Howard have written in collaboration a novel, in which the plot and characters are developed through a series of letters between a husband and wife, Mr. Sharp writing the wife's letters, Miss Howard the husband's. The absence of Countess Ilse at Rome for a year affords an opportunity for the correspondence with her husband, Count Odo, at Rügen. She is a beautiful woman with some talent as a sculptor, who loves her art better than her husband, and who becomes interested in another man.

Howard, Oliver Otis. General Taylor. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 11+385 p. por. D. (Great commander ser., no. 2.) cl., $1.50.

The twelfth President of the United States—Zachary Taylor—was born in Orange Co., Va., Sept. 24, 1784, and died July 9, 1850. His life is full of incident. He was engaged in the Indian wars of 1812, served in the Black Hawk War of 1832, and gained distinction in the Mexican campaign of 1846, winning the battles of Palo Alto, Resaca de la Palma, and forcing Monterey to capitulate. He was the nominee of the Whig party for the Presidency in 1848, and was inaugurated as President March 4, 1849. He only lived out about fourteen months of his administration. All these interesting events are told by the author, who is Major-General U. S. army, with much color and picturesqueness.

Howell, Jeanne M. A common mistake. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., 1892. c. 3–290 p. D. (The golden lib., no. 3.) pap., 50 c.

A story of New York society life, in which a beautiful, rich and capricious girl makes the "common mistake" of expecting constancy of affection from her suitors. She passes through many phases of emotion, and her intense desire for admiration and homage frequently places her in questionable situations. Her engagement to a Polish count, whom she loves intensely, results in an unforeseen revelation, and the tragical conclusion of a story which aims to show the corrupt morals of society.

Howells, W: D. Christmas every day, and other stories told for children. N. Y., Harper, 1893 [1892.] 3+150 p. il. D. cl., $1 25.

A little girl in the first tale, who wishes for Christmas every day, is told a story of another child who echoed this same wish. In the consequences that follow the moral is seen. The other stories are: Turkeys turning the tables; The pony engine and the Paeific express; The pumpkin glory; Butterfly-flutterby and flutterby-butterfly.

Howells, W: D. A letter of introduction: farce. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4-61 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

A mistake made in giving a letter of introduction leads to comical complications which the Englishman who suffers from them sets down as incompreheusible American humor.

Howells, W: D. A little Swiss sojourn. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4+119 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

A three months' stay in Switzerland, from September to December, is delightfully described in this little volume. Several of the most interesting localities are graphically sketched with pen and pencil.

Howells, W: D. The quality of mercy: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. '91. 2+474 p. D. cl., $1.50.

John Milton Northwiek, the officer of a New England trust company, after a long life of apparent respectability, is at fifty-nine a detected thief, having robbed his company through his private speculations of large sums of money. When discovered he flies to Canada with a part of his plunder; the train upon which he is supposed to have been travelling having been wrecked, he is reported as dead, his body being classed among the dead burned beyond recognition. For a time his daughters and the world believe him dead, but an enterprising reporter in the course of time hunts him down. The wonderful analysis of motive is the story's strongest element.

Among the many declared aims that the author has had in view in writing his work are the following: To prove that the doctrine of the separate sovereignty and rights of the States underlies the whole structure of the government of the United States, and that if this foundation be destroyed the whole structure will fall into hopeless ruin; and to prove also that although the right of each State to secede from the Union for sufficient cause existed; yet a compact or treaty of Union also existed, and all the States had sovereign right to judge concerning the sufficiency of the cause.

Canada is the author's subject. "The new empire" arose with the independence of the United States. Our revolution had its influence outside of the colonies, working changes in the constitution of Canada, which resulted in "the fall of the old empire," to which a chapter is devoted embodying also a brief sketch of the American Revolution. This is followed by a study of the separation of the colonies from the "Mother Country" and Canada under the title of "the treaty of partition and its fulfillment," by an analysis of "the constitution of the new empire," and chapters entitled "Our centenary year" and "The crisis of the empire," in which Canada's future relationship to the United States is considered and an imperial Union sketched, which shall arbitrate international difficulties and settle disputes.

Howlett, Rev. T: Rosling. Anglo-Israel and the Jewish problem. Phil., Spangler & Davis, 529 Commerce st., 1892. c. 10+158 p. por. D. cl., $1.

The author, a Baptist minister, advances an argument that the ten lost tribes of Israel are now identical with the Anglo-Saxon race. He endeavors to substantiate his assertion by offering presumptive evidence with historical data, and by quoting ethnological, philological and scriptural facts. The Jewish problem is resolved in the reunion of Israel and Judah, and the restoration of the israelites is foreseen.

Sybil leads a most unselfish life, devoted to helping all who come near her. In the end she is made happy and is the means of making happiness for the little son of the soldier and his widowed wife. The book is not intended for very young readers. It is a novel.

Hughes, Rev. T: Loyola and the educational system of the Jesuits. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. 7+302 p. D. (The great educators ser.) cl., net, $1.

"In the following work," the author, who is a member of the Society of Jesus, says: "I have endeavored to present a critical statement of the principles and method adopted in the Society of Jesus. The effort to explain the sources, process of development and present influence of the system within and without the Order has made of the first part a biographical and historical sketch, having for its chief subject the person of the founder, while the details and the pedagogical significance of the various elements in the method appear, in the second part, as a critical analysis of the Ratio Studiorum." This is book second of part first of Victor Hugo's great novel, which introduces the sombre figure of Jean Valjean, the galley-slave. It covers the great scene of the robbery of the silver and the manifestation of true brotherly love by the Bishop of Digne. The professor of modern languages and literature in the College of New Jersey, Princeton, has supplied valuable linguistic notes and an ethical introduction.

Presents a careful study of all that has been written on the subject from the earliest Italian writers. The author has drawn much valuable material from the ablest English, French and German writers, and has given his own deductions and opinions, whether they agree or disagree with such investigators as Bracy Clark, Simonds (in English), Girard, Chauvean, Leyh, Le Coque, Goubaux, and Barrier (in German and French).

Huiginn, Rev. E. J. V. The graves of Myles Standish and other pilgrims. Boonville, N. Y., Herald and Tourist Steam Print. House, 1892. 35 p. O. pap., 50 c.

The writer disagrees with Justin Winsor, and Mrs. Jane G. Austin in turn disagrees with the writer, as to the exact location of Duxbury Cemetery, where Myles Standish requested to be buried. The various arguments are fairly stated. The little pamphlet is a plea for more care in preserving the resting-places of dead heroes.

Hume, Fergus. Aladdin in London: a romance. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 6+432 p. S. cl., $1.25.

A ring obtained mysteriously in London by an impecunious young lover takes the part of the lamp of Aladdin, giving command of unlimited wealth. Tiring of London life the possessor of the ring, his young wife and several friends go to the little kingdom of Busk to help reinstate a deposed queen. This setting affords the author opportunity to satirize the present position of Europe in regard to some coveted spots on the Black Sea. The details are cleverly managed.

Hume, Fergus. The fever of life. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1892.] c. '91. 2–381 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The author of "The mystery of a hansom cab" has again unravelled a mystery compounded of circumstantial evidence and unexpected dénouement in a murder case. The heroine is a Maori woman, married in early youth to a scion of an English nobleman's family. She tires of him and seeks her fortunes as an opera singer in the United States. Her mother-love brings her back to be paid companion to her daughter, and from this bold move springs the tragedy that underlies the story. Scenes on the Riviera and in England.

Hume, Fergus. The Island of Fantasy: a romance. N. Y., Lovell, Gestefield & Co., [1892.] c. 7–453 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A rich young Englishman with a talent for sculpture, bored to death with his conventional surroundings, is encouraged by a young Greek, who serves him as a model, to make a journey to "The Island of Fantasy." It is an island in the Ægean Sea, on which an Englishman, who calls himself Justinian, is trying to reproduce the old Grecian life. The result of his schemes, the mystery influencing his life, his beautiful daughter's heart history, and many theories of art and social well-being, make a story of marked originality.

Hume, Fergus. The man who vanished: a psychological phantasy. N. Y., and St. Louis, Mo., The Waverly Co., [1892.] 4–170 p. D. (World lib., no. 14.) pap., 25 c.

Believing himself a murderer, Adrian Lancaster hastily left London, and sought refuge with Dr. Roversmere. The hero consents to undergo a transformation planned according to psychic theories held by Roversmere, and thus to evade the law. The interest centres in the means used by a mystic, and the incongruities that result from one man's soul dominating another man's body.

Opens with a clever introductory drama, in which the shade of Henri Murger appears to the writer and comments upon his shameless imitation of his "Latin Quarter." The author explains that his "London Bohemians" are purely fictitious characters whose actions are detailed with a view to the proper English "young person." The ghost then fears the book will be a bore. Such is not the case, however, and much good-natured fun is found in these pages.

Papers discussing Old English books and authors, in which Prof. Hunt seeks to emphasize, in every legitimate way, that distinctively devout and Christian spirit which he has so clearly discerned in his study of these earlier eras. Special stress is also laid upon the fact that, in the teachings and influence of these older writers, those truths were established and diffused which went far to undermine the firmly-rooted principles of the Papacy, and to open the way, in part at least, for the great Elizabethan Reformation on behalf of English Protestantism.

Beginning with a bit of advice to parents about allowing girls to ride at a too early age, it is the purpose of this book "to carry the girl along the bridle-path from the time she puts on a habit for the first attempt to that when she joins the hunt for a run across country after the hounds." No space has been wasted on unnecessary technicalities.

The present edition appears in a new and illustrated form, over seventy portraits of English literary celebrities having been added to it. It has been carefully revised, a number of supplementary notes have been added by way of appendix, and, as far as possible, it has been brought down to the present day. The aim of the work is to trace the residences of literary worthies in London, and to identify the places associated with them.

"Most of the essays comprised in the present volume have been written during the last six or seven years, without premeditated purpose or intentional connection, in reply to attacks upon doctrines which I hold to be well founded, or in refutation of allegations respecting matters lying within the province of natural knowledge, which I believe to be erroneous; and they bear the mark of their origin in the controversial tone which pervades them."—Prologue. First published in the Nineteenth Century and the Fortnightly Review.

The prologue indicates that an earnest student of evolution had at some previous period placed a man-child and a woman-child on two islands in the tropics. The story tells the lives of these beings, living in a state of nature, their meeting after they have grown, their life together, the advent of a little Cain into their Eden, their trials and vague unrest until they wake up satisfied as sun worshippers. The epilogue leaves the question open: "Are they to be envied?"

Hyslop, Ja. H. The elements of logic, theoretical and practical. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 8+403 p. O. cl., $2.

The author claims that he has not aimed at an exhaustive study of logic, but that he has endeavored to produce a work which can be used both for beginners and advanced students of the subject. He also states that although his system is that of Jevons, as to matter and method, he has made both deviations, additions and omissions; endeavored to develop his subject, according to the questions of his students, and fully answer all questions induced by the framing of rules regarding the logical treatment of conceptions and propositions.

The author anticipates any criticism that may be made to the effect that these stories have been suggested by Rudyard Kipling, by saying they were written long before that author began to write. As she lived many years in India, her material naturally resembles Mr. Kipling's. The stories are of love and adventure, and very bright and entertaining. Jacobson, A: The crisis of a party. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., [1892] c. 2–171 p. D. (The ariel lib.) pap., 25 c.

An arraignment of the Republican party. "If it is to continue to live," says the author, "it must present to the people live, popular issues." The "issues" suggested are those Mr. Jacobson has advocated in several previous works—a succession tax, manual training schools, etc., etc. He looks upon the succession tax as a means of reducing the many large fortunes which now menace the future of the Republic.

Jacobson, A: The next step forward; or, better times for us all. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., [1892.] 5–76 p. D. (Ariel lib.) pap., 15 c.

Advocates briefly the same remedial measures for improving the condition of the working classes set forth in a former work, "An ounce of prevention;" that is, manual training schools paid for by a succession tax imposed on all inheritances, and compensation to parents while deprived of their children's labor during the time they are sent to school.

Jacobson, A: An ounce of prevention to save America from having a government of the few, by the few, and for the few. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1892. c. 8–251 p. D. pap., 50 c.

On current problems in American politics Mr. Jacobson takes the ground that the rapid accumulation of large fortunes is a menace to the future of the republic, and he therefore advocates the imposition of a succession tax on all large fortunes that are inherited. With this tax he also advocates a thorough system of public manual training schools, the money for which should be furnished by the tax just described. He also proposes to compensate parents for their children's time, where the parents are so poor that they cannot spare their children to go to school.

Jagemann, H. C. G. v. Elements of German syntax with special reference to prose composition. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., [1892.] c. 5+170 p. D. cl., 80 c.

The author is assistant professor of German in Harvard University. He presents the more important characteristics of German syntax from the point of view of the English language. What is quite natural and offers no serious difficulty is omitted, as well as all uncommon forms and constructions, both in English and German. The directions will enable the student to find at least one correct and idiomatic German rendering for every ordinary construction in simple English prose.

Jagemann, H. C. G. v. Materials for German prose composition, with notes and vocabulary: simple narrative. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., [1892.] c. 6+168 p. D. cl., 90 c.

The present selections for translation into German are for students who have read a few hundred pages of easy German prose and have had some training in translating simple sentences into German. In the choice of the "materials" adaptability to German rendering has been the first criterion. For this reason a number of translations from the German—by English and American translators—have been included.

James, Bushrod W., M.D. Alaskana: or, Alaska in descriptive and legendary poems. Phil., Porter & Coates, 1892. c. 368 p. il. D. cl., $2.

Alaskan legends, ethnology, customs and scenery are described in forty-four poems, written in the rhythmical blank verse of "Hiawatha." The author has spent much time in Alaska, and has evidently been strongly impressed by the wonderful natural beauty of that little-known region, and by the weird and fascinating legends of its people; contains a number of illustrations taken direct from photographs; richly bound, gilt edges.

One of the heroes of the Emin Pasha Relief Expedition, which was led through the trackless African forests by Mr. Stanley, is the writer of this volume. The scene of his stories is Fort Bodo, built in the forest by the expedition, and their home for several months. The life within the walls of the fort is amusingly described, and quaint pictures given of its two-legged and four-legged inhabitants. He also tells of the queer little dwarfs of the forests. The seven stories which form part of the contents are related by the Africans belonging to the expedition, and are on the "Brer Rabbit" style, having for their heroes various large and small animals who converse fluently.

The characters are all "bunnies," happy, home-sheltered bunnies, who spend their uneventful lives in a neighborhood called "Runwild Terrace." They talk and act like little children, and have the same thoughts and feelings. Written to console a little girl for the loss of two real, snow-white rabbits.

Jocelyn, Mrs. Rob. A big stake: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c 3+312 p. D. (Lippincott's ser. of select novels. no. 137.) pap., 50 c.

Aline Warren, the young stepmother of the heroine, threw over the man she loved to marry a fortune. Upon her husband's death she finds his millions go to his daughter Valda, a beautiful girl of much character and amiability. The story tells of the several times when Aline's romances are endangered by her stepdaughter's unconscious rivalry. Underneath all the cold worldliness Valda finally realizes that her stepmother has a heart. English high life furnishes the incidents.

Johnson, Rossiter. The end of a rainbow: an American story. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 5+344 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A fanciful idea started by three children that at the end of a rainbow there is always a crock of gold is the text upon which an amusing story of adventure is built. In trying to find the mythical wealth one scene after another is developed. The chief quality of the story is its humor which is fresh and bright, and as well adapted to older readers as young ones. The group of children introduced write prize stories, which are wonderful compositions, and exhibit many funny and original traits.

"By friends and many acquaintances the author has been often advised to republish 'Dukesborough tales' in a form more convenient than that in which it was first issued. He has carefully revised and now submits six stories selected from the original sixteen. These relate mainly to incidents in the career of Mr. Bill Williams and his nearest associates."—Preface. In Dukesborough the author has preserved his memoirs of Powelton, a small village in Hancock Co., Georgia, near which he was born. These stories were first published by Harper Bros See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., Jan. 20, 1883, [574.]

Johnston, R: Malcolm. Mr. Billy Downs and his likes. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. 5–232 p. il. D. (Fiction, fact and fancy ser.) cl., 75 c.

Contents : A bachelor's counsellings; Parting from Sailor; Two administrations; Almost a wedding in Dooly District: Something in a name: The Townses and their cousins. These short stories have appeared in the Atlantic, Century. Independent, Christian Union, etc. The editor of this series, Mr Arthur Stedman, reviews the nine volumes which have already appeared in a graceful preface.

Johnston, R: Malcolm. Mr. Fortner's marital claims, and other stories. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 4+182 p. D. (Appleton's summer ser.) bds., 50 c.

The first story, a somewhat pathetic experience of an old couple living near the village of Dukesborough, already made famous by the author, is now first published. The other stories, "Old Gus Lawson," "An adventure of Mr Joel Bozzle," "A moccasin among the Hobbys" and "A surprise to Mr. Thompson Byers," have appeared in the magazines.

Johnston, R: Malcolm. Studies, literary and social: second series. Indianapolis, Ind., The Bowen-Merrill Co., 1892. c. 4+240 p. S. cl., $1.25.

A companion book to a volume of essays by the same author published last year. Col. Johnston discourses with refinement, lucidity and kindly satire on Edward Hyde's daughter; Benjamin D'Israeli, the Jew: A characteristic of Sir Thomas More; A martyr to science; Some heroes of Charles Dickens; The extremity of satire; Irish lyric poetry; The minnesinger and meistersinger; The audacity of Goethe; King Henry VIII.: Celebrated and common friendships.

See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., May 16, 1891, [No. 1007.] Then published under the title "There is no devil."

Jókai, Maurus. The nameless castle; from the German, by M. Dassel. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 350 p. D. (Idle moment ser., no. 12.) pap., 50 c.

In the Nameless Castle dwell a soldier and a veiled lady who remain mysteries for many years. There is an undercurrent of history. The Hungarian insurrection and Napoleon's Austrian campaigns are brought in. A celebrated French female spy finally solves the mystery of the castle and loses her heart to its master. The veiled lady with her cats and dogs is a most charming little personage.

Jókai, Maurus. Pretty Michal: a free translation of Maurus Jókai's romance "A Szép Mikhál," by R. N. Bain. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 7+334 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 92.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The scene is laid in the Highlands of North Hungary in the 17th century. "Pretty Michal" is a girl who was brought up entirely by her father, a recluse, who had theories about moulding girls in certain lines. The plan worked well till the girl fell in love, and then father, plans and all were scattered to the wind. The story is a wildly romantic one, introducing scenes and character altogether new to novel-readers. Witches, robbers, hangmen are among the characters, while the scenes include the barbarous laws and usages of that period.

*Jonas, C. Complete pronouncing dictionary of the English and Bohemian languages for general use. V. 2, English-Bohemian. 2d ed., enl. Milwaukee, Wis., C. N. Caspar, 1892. 723 p. 16°, cl., $2.25.

Jones. Alonzo T. Two republics: or. Rome and the United States of America. Battle Creek, Mich., Review and Herald Pub Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 3–895 p. por. O. cl., $2.50, $3; hf. mor., $3.50; mor., $4.

The author is editor of the American Sentinel, devoted to the defence of American institutions, the preservation of the Constitution of the United States as it is, so far as regards religion or religious tests. In 1888 Mr. Jones vigorously opposed Senator Blair's Sunday-rest bill. The present volume appeals to the nation to oppose any movement "to commit the United States Government to a course of religious legislation," for should this succeed "so surely will there be repeated the history of Rome in the fourth and fifth centuries."

Jones, C. A. A modern Red Riding-Hood: il. by C. Paterson. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1892. 3+223 p. D. cl., $1.25.

On Rupert and Mary Howard's arrival at the house of their aunts, in St. Edward's square, London, Rupert explains why his sister is forced to appear immediately after the death of their father in a red cloak. Later the little girl and this same garment figure in an episode both pathetic and amusing, hence the title, "A modern Red Riding Hood."

Jonson, B: Timber; or, discoveries made upon men and matter; ed. with introd. and notes by Felix E. Schelling. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 35+166 p. D. cl., 60 c.

Except for change in punctuation, the plan is that of the edition of 1641. The present work, however, differs from Whalley, Gifford, Cunningham and Morley. These differences, with references, are found in a plentiful annotation. There is included a biographical sketch of Jonson and an analysis and index of proper names. Arranged for students.

Jordan, Kate. The other house: a study of human nature. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 3–183 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A young woman, tired of everything, goes to live in seclusion with her chaperon in a suburb of New York City. Her neighbor is a successful physician, who first meets her on entering her house by mistake with his own latch-key. The doctor is married and his wife soon grows jealous of the inhabitants of "the other house." Meeting a missionary friend of the doctor's the heroine grows interested in work among the poor. After attending an evening service at the Sunset Mission she confesses her history to the doctor. The consequences are far-reaching.

Julian, G: W. Life of Joshua R. Giddings. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 2+473 p. por. O. cl., $2.50.

In telling the story of Joshua R. Giddings' life, a valuable contribution is made to the literature of the anti-slavery movement, with which he was so closely identified. Copious extracts are made from his letters and speeches, written and delivered during his long and aggressive public career. He was born in Penn., Oct. 6, 1795, and died May 27, 1864. When about ten years old he removed with his parents to Ashtabula Co., Ohio, a part of the Conn. Western Reserve. He was a State Representative and a U. S. Senator.

With the object of rendering justice, which Mr. Julian contends has heretofore been denied, Charles Osborne is recognized as the first of our anti-slavery pioneers. He bases his claim on the evidences of personal witness, an old newspaper and other records of his work for the Abolition cause. His exile from the Society of Friends is traced to his political action.

Julian, J: J., ed. Dictionary of hymnology, setting forth the origin and history of Christian hymns of all ages and nations; with special reference to those contained in the hymn-books of English-speaking countries, and now in common use; with biographical and critical notices of their authors and translators, and historical articles on national and denominational hymnology, breviaries, missals, primers, psalters, sequences, etc. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. '91. 12+1616 p. O. cl., net, $10.

It is claimed that 200 or more languages and dialects are represented in Christian hymnology, and estimated that in these not less than 400,000 hymns have been written or translated. Effort is made to give a comprehensive but concise outline of them. Relative matter is chronologically arranged.

Gaston Jean Baptiste de Cominges was an accomplished Frenchman sent by Louis the Fourteenth in 1662 as ambassador to the English court of Charles the Second. During his residence in England he wrote voluminous letters to the French king on all subjects, politics, literature, the manners and customs, art, etc, in a quaintly familiar style, giving an almost photographic picture of the England of that period. M. Jusseraud makes this correspondence the basis of his work, quoting largely from it, with a running commentary of criticism and explanation. He also gives chapters on Cominges' family and ancestors, how Cominges' predecessor had to leave England, etc. Contains a number of portraits.

Kaplan, A. O. The magic laugh: il. by Frank M. Gregory. [Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1892.] unp. obl. O. pap., 75 c.

The story of a dream told in verse, wherein the relator visits the sun and is entertained by its controlling spirit, who, after discoursing on his mighty powers, bids his guest inquire for some great secret of nature not known upon earth. But before the visitor has formulated a request his reverie is disturbed "by a cheery, rippling, silvery laugh," which so charms him that he asks for the secret of its reproduction by chemical process. His request is granted, and when the laugh is reproduced it is wafted to earth, and the

Kappey, Sophie. A modern martyr: a novel. N. Y., W. D. Rowland, 1892. c. '91. 189 p. D. (Leisure-time ser., no. 8.) pap., 25 c.

Sebastian Lucas saw and loved Adrienne Loftus. Although the latter did not experience a like sentiment, she consented to marry Lucas conditionally. Their experiment in matrimony has sensational and tragic issues and a final act, in which Sebastian is seen in the rôle of martyr for wife and country.

Saunders, 1892. c. 6–818 p. O. cl., net, $5; shp., $6.

Besides giving clear and concise definitions and fully covering the subject, the authors aim to establish a system for the pronunciation of the medical vocabulary in accordance with the pronunciation of English-speaking physicians. The Latin pronunciation is commended, but the Anglican preferred. In regard to accentuation the general rules of "Webster's Unbridged" are followed. There are included a table of medical abbreviations and an appendix containing important tables of bacilli, micrococci, leucomaines, drugs and material used in antiseptic surgery, etc.

The history of the two voyages of the Kite is told in parts. Part one, under the title of the "Voyage of the Kite," is a narrative of facts connected with the first expedition of Lieutenant Peary, in 1891, to the northwestern shore of Greenland. Part two, under the title of the "Peary relief expedition," is a record of the realistic incidents which occurred during the second voyage of the same vessel in the present year. Included with this, in addition to Pike's log-book, are facts relating to Mr. Verhoeff, the missing member of the party, with letters and arguments advanced by his friends, and a minute description of the search made for him. The discoveries summarized in Peary's report are stated in an appendix; a brief history of Arctic voyages from the earliest times to the present day is also appended.

Keene, H. G. The literature of France. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 5+215 p. D. (University extension manuals.) cl., net, $1.

French literature from the beginnings of the nation down to our own times, exclusive of living authors, is the broad field covered by Mr. Keene's survey. The reader obtains a conception of the literature of France as a whole, and of the evolution and mutual relations of its various schools and stages; a detailed account of all French authors and their works has not been attempted. As the table of contents shows, the subject has been considered logically rather than treated as a topic for mere chronicle; the chapters on the sources of the French prose fiction and poetry of the present time are thoroughly original.

It is claimed that the full story of the part Whittier played in the anti-slavery movement is given for the first time in book form in this biography. The estrangement between Whittier and Garrison, with their subsequent reconciliation, is introduced, and the rise of the anti-slavery party is viewed with many facts of personal and political history. The author has an avowed purpose of showing that "Flood" Ireson deserved his fate, and that Barbara Frietchie actually waved the flag in the face of the Confederate troops. Quotations from the poet's poems and ballads, are interspersed, and there is included an appendix with a reference table of dates and notable incidents in the life of the poet, and notes on rare and early editions of his works.

Kerr, Alvah Milton. An honest lawyer: a novel. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., [1892.] c. 4–312 p. D. (Ariel lib., no. 10.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The author strives to show that men bury principle and lose sight of motive in a ceaseless effort to obtain wealth. He solves in the life of a young lawyer at once a social and religious question. The theory on which the book is based is that unlimited wealth is inconsistent with Christ's teachings, and that those who possess it are unchristlike. The events occur in the west.

The scene is the Pawnee Valley. Nita Guthrie is the heroine in a startling adventure that results in a great fright, a slight wound to herself, and the mystification of the entire barracks. This mystery is later revealed in Sergeant Ellis' love-story. In the second novel the part of Georgia Marshall in a soldier's trial resembles that of Portia in "The Merchant of Venice."

supplementary and regular reading in the lower classes in grammar schools, public libraries and the home. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. 9+227 p. il. D. cl., net, 56 c.

A continuation of Mr. King's "Picturesque geographical readers," and covering portions of the United States. Visits are made by our old friends, the Cartnell family, to the industrial centres of the Eastern and Middle States, as well as to the principal cities. These visits are described. The latest and most reliable information regarding products, industries, distances, temperature, etc., are given, the facts presented having been gathered from reliable sources.

The subject of this sketch by the author of "Monsieur Motte" was the first governor of the State of Louisiana. He was born at Ville Marie, Canada, on the 23d of February, 1680, and at twenty two became chief executive of Louisiana—a name that then covered three States and a half. For forty years he did faithful work and in 1743 retired to Paris. He died in 1768, passing from his unknown home in Paris to his unknown tomb in Montmartre. Dedicated to the students of Tulane University of Louisiana.

King, H: T. The idealist. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. 329 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The author's purpose is to attack the wrongs he sees among his fellow-men, "to make men feel uncomfortable, if tearing off their false faces will do it." He not only condemns the wrong, he despises the wrong-doer and speaks his mind at times with bitterness and generally with abruptness. One hundred and fifty wrongs are pointed out, and almost every honest reader will find that he commits many of them in his daily round of duty and pleasure.

First published in 1855 by Moore, Wilstach, Keys & Co. About two years ago Dr. King, feeling his work needed revision, entrusted this labor to his successor to the chair of Obstetics in the Eclectic Medical Institute of Cincinnati. Numerous additions have been made to every chapter. Especial attention is called to the treatment of the diseases of pregnancy, specific medication being substituted for the old style of prescribing. The work, it is claimed, is now fully up to date in all scientific discoveries.

"Mr. Kipling's volume of poems is for the most part new, although the 'Barrack-room ballads,' with which the volume concludes, have been published before, and several of the other ballads have already appeared in the magazines. The rest of the book is new. The best of the ballads are exceedingly spirited. Mr. Kipling, we think, shows good judgment in opening his book with 'The ballad of east and west.' The story which forms the subject of this ballad is a very good one and is admirably told. It is told without redundancy, and yet sufficiently and, as every ballad story should be told, clearly. The subject is Indian."—New York Times.

"The naulahka" is a superb necklace of precious stones that Nick Tarvin, of Topaz, Colorado, knows exists in India. He promises to obtain it for Mrs. Mutrie, the wife of the President of the C. C. & C. Road, if she induces her husband to have the road come to Topaz. The neeklace is not the only attraction India has for Tarvin. Kate Sheriff, a girl from Topaz whom he loves dearly, has gone there as a missionary. From the rough west of America the scene changes to India, and a graphic picture is presented of life in an Indian Residency, with Kate Sheriff penetrating through her missionary work the guilty secrets of the harem, and Nick Tarvin searching for his necklace, saving a little Indian prince from being poisoned and escaping several desperate attempts upon his own life. The book has rhymed headings to the chapters.

A monograph of importance to all interested in the management or patronage of railways. The author shows a thorough knowledge of the complex questions involved. He aims to prove that railway rates cannot be arbitrarily fixed by semi-judicial tribunals—as, for instance, the Inter-State Commerce Commission and the several State Railroad Commissions—and that the rate question is governed entirely by the competition of carriers (of all kinds) and the markets of the world. He also takes the ground that private ownership of railways is the best calculated to subserve the interests of all concerned.

Herbert Ashley, midshipman of H. M. S. Spiteful, cruising in the East Indies, is deputed to be one of a crew of the ship's steam pinnace, which is on the alert for slave-traders. After a fairly successful expedition and the capture of a large Arabian dhow, Herbert conceives the novel plan of manning her and going in search of further prey. The voyage of the Indian Chief is a perilous one that ends in her wreck on a small island called Monkey Island, because immediately after sighting this piece of land Ashley shot a chimpanzee. Ashley's part in this new scene causes him to be called Rajah of the Island.

The same scheme followed in preparing the other volumes of the series is continued in the present record, and the readers will find the same characters and the same general form of talk, observation and journal-making that they found in "Great Britain and Ireland" and "Northern Europe." Dr. Bronson is less conspicuous than before, but Frank and Fred are well able to manage the details of the journey and look after the comfort and pleasure of Mrs. Bassett and Mary, who make part of the group of travellers.

The object of the story is to show the possibility of making a journey around the world in seventy days from the time of starting, and to present the various aids to travel and communication which have appeared since Jules Verne published "Around the world in eighty days." Various scientific discoveries and inventions are thus brought to the reader's attention in their adaptation to the needs of the heroes. The geographical descriptions, routes, time-tables, etc., are claimed to be correct.

Krummacher, F: A. The risen Redeemer: the Gospel history from the Resurrection to the day of Pentecost; from the German, by J: T. Betts. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1892.] 8+298 p. D. cl., $1.

This book, published in Germany under the title of "The Easter manual," forms, with the writer's two preceding volumes, a devotional trilogy for Advent, Passion Week and Easter. Premising that "the bodily resurrection of Christ from the dead is the fundamental basis of Christianity," the author in twenty discourses follows the gospel history from the Resurrection to Pentecost, with the expressed hope of "strengthening the faith of the conscientious doubter by clearing away his difficulties in a sympathetic spirit."

These charming parables are rich in good lessons that the young may understand, and are so attractively told as to have all the enticement of fairy tales. They were originally published in three volumes and dedicated to Queen Louisa and the Princesses Paulina and Wilhelmina Louisa. Seventeen parables are in this handsome volume, and the publisher proposes to bring the others out in two similar volumes.

Prof. Ladd has carefully elaborated his "Story" from accurate data as well as from material gathered during a ten years' residence at Santa Fé and extensive travel throughout the country. His book will be read not only for its historic value, however, but for the vivid pictures it presents of strange and remote civilization, of splendid savagery, and of gallant courage such as always thrills the heart and quickens the pulses.

Laforest, Dubut de. In spite of himself; from the French, by Frank Howard Howe. N. Y., McHale & Rohde, 7 and 9 Cortlandt st., [1892.] 8-200 p. D. pap., 50 c.

A companion to "Thy name is woman"; as it was an aim in that story to gain an object by showing some of the dangers that beset women through a failing common to their sex, it is likewise the purpose of the present work to correct a social evil by presenting some consequences that befall mankind through a controlling vice. The scene is Limoges, France. The immoral action of a young army officer is the basis of a realistic novel in which the final scene is a tragedy.

The same book as Renée and Colette. See notice below.

Laforest, Dubut. Renée and Colette; from the French, by Mrs. B: Lewis. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 2+289 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 97.) pap., 50 c.

While Monsieur Louis Chazeau was pleading a case in the civil court of Noutron, he received a telegram that brought him face to face with the consequences of wrong-doing. He confided his trouble to his wife. On the unexpected developments of this act is based a novel which introduces both the frailties and the redeeming traits of humanity. Renée and Colette are Chazeau's daughters.

Laidlaw, A. H., jr. How she married him, and other stories. N. Y., Dickson & Laidlaw, 733 6th ave., [1892.] c. 3-54 p. sq. S. pap.,40 c.

The first story in a collection of five is called, How she married him. It tells the important part a phonograph played in the wedding of Gladys Westingfork and Reginald Weltingbroke. The other four are named: Rejected; A tale of alternate transmigration; The autobiography of a coffin, and A composite scheme.

Laidlaw, A. H., jr. Purgatory: a story. N. Y., Dickson & Laidlaw, 733 6th ave., [1892.] 4-30 p. T. pap., 35 c.

"Purgatory" was a pet name bestowed upon a mischievious little boy of four years, by the narrator of his brief life. His short history and tragic death is embraced in this little book.

Laidlaw, J., D.D. The miracles of our Lord: expository and homiletic. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1892. 4-384 p. O. cl., $1.75.

"The aim is entirely expository and didactic. The apologetic questions are assumed to have been sufficiently dealt with by other writers. . . . All that is sought is to set each incident in the light of the best exposition. For the spiritual lessons, again, the plan followed is not to collect the entire uses which might be made of each narrative. This would have given a mere outline of homiletic hints, which does not seem a very profitable task, however carefully done. The attempt made is to indicate, under most of the miracles, some one line of spiritual application, and so give an actual instance of their pulpit use."—Preface.

Laing, F: A. Simple Bible lessons for little children; with introd. by Rev. Ja. Stalker, D.D. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1892. 3-411 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The directors of the Glasgow Sabbath-School Union requested the author to draw up a three years' scheme of Sunday-school lessons. These notes appeared in the Sabbath-School Magazine during 1889 to 1891, and are now put into book-form, as the same scheme began anew in January, 1892.

Originally published in the Christian Standard, of Cincinnati. The author is one of the people known as Disciples of Christ, or Christians, and his book gives a correct presentation of their position and doctrine. The first part treats of the principles of a Christian life, the second of the "going on to perfection," the change of death and the useful, satisfying life hereafter in which the "Disciples" have perfect faith.

"As to the plan on which the selections for this volume have been made," says Mr. Johnson in his introduction, "it needs only to be said that, in general, the editor has aimed to include those letters which exhibit most fully the writer's distinctive charm and quality. This plan leaves, of course, a residue of considerable biographical and critical value; but it is believed that to all who really love and appreciate him Charles Lamb's 'Best letters' are those which are most uniquely and unmistakably Charles Lamb's."

Lanciani, Rodolfo. Pagan and Christian Rome. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1893 [1892.] c. 8+374 p. il. O. cl., $6.

A companion volume to "Ancient Rome in the light of modern discoveries." Its seven chapters describe: The transformation of Rome from a Pagan into a Christian city; Temples; Churches; Pagan cemeteries; Catacombs; Tombs of emperors, and tombs of popes. It covers the first five centuries of the Christian era, and depicts the gradual yet marvellous metamorphoses which passed upon the Rome of the Cæsars, making it the capital city of the Christian world. Like Professor Lanciani's previous work, it is historical and based on the rich results of archæological research and discovery. It is profusely illustrated with views of great variety not generally accessible. In all the details of manufacture the work is brought out in the most careful manner. In red slip covers.

Lane, Lydia Spencer. I married a soldier; or, old days in the old army. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893 [1892.] c. 2-214 p. D. cl., $1.

A woman's share of the discomforts and dangers of army life between the year 1855 and the close of the Civil War is told with spirit and most interesting detail. Mrs. Lane was stationed chiefly on the Mexican and Texan border, but at times travelled many miles through the western country with two little daughters and much inefficient Indian and Spanish help. Many of the well-known officers of the army figure in her unpretentious diary.

Lanza, Clara, [Marquise.] A golden pilgrimage: a novel. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1892. c. 4–358 p. il. D. (Library of choice fiction, no. 48.) pap., 50 c.

Helen Goodale, the daughter of a deceased New York doctor, is anxious to marry for wealth and position, so dismisses her attendant swain, a young physician of growing repute, and marries a man who has these requisites, but who is threatened with insanity. In the action of the heroine are seen some of the results of the conduct of a cruel and ambitious girl: in that of the hero and his rival the effects of misplaced love.

Lanza, Clara [Marquise], and Harvey, James Clarence. Scarabæus: the story of an African beetle. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 2-283 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A story full of mystery and adventure. The scarabæus is a ring, of which there is a duplicate, the two combined showing a geographical chart in cipher indicating the whereabouts of concealed treasure. The scene is Africa, and the leading characters are an American missionary of great intellectual grasp, his private secretary and the physician of the party. The possibilities of photography are skilfully worked into the complicated and strangely exciting plot.

La Rame, Louise de, ["Ouida," pseud.] The tower of Taddeo. N. Y., Hovendon Co., [1892.] 2–313 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The scene is Florence. "Ser Checchi," a dealer in old books lives in an ancient tower with his daughter Beldia. Though he loves his business he is no business man, and becomes impoverished through a worthless son and false friends. Under an Italian law there is no mercy for a debtor, and his treasures are seized to be sold, and he dies from the blow. The tower is torn down for modern improvements and Beldia is in poverty when an old lover arrives from South America and rescues her.

Larcom, Lucy. At the beautiful gate, and other songs of faith. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 10+117 p. S. cl., $1.

Many readers of Miss Larcom's poetry have wished for just such a book from her as is here offered, one containing her hymns and lyrics on sacred subjects. She has gathered from the Household edition of her poems those specially suited for this purpose, which make about two-thirds of the collection, the remainder never having appeared in book form.

Larcom, Lucy. The unseen friend. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 10+217 p. S. cl., $1; flex. mor., $3.

The leading idea is the spiritual presence of God among men, and of man as also a spiritual being. Miss Larcom takes the Christian view of this truth, believing it to be the only adequate view, and she wishes to suggest this by the title which she has chosen. The book is peculiarly appropriate for Easter, and indeed for all seasons, for religious readers.

Every edition of this work contains a fac-simile in water-colors of "Springtime," after Lynch, who was awarded the first medal of honor in the last Salon, and two etchings, one representing Corot, after Foubert, by Waltner, the other being an allegorical scene of "Winter," by Greux, after Puvis de Chavannes. With the numerous other beautiful photogravures and etchings with which the volume is filled and which appear in the text and in full pages, these pictures represent the gems of the recent exhibitions of art-works—paintings chiefly—made by the Paris Salons. The volume is a sumptuous one in every respect—paper, print, binding being the best.

Lathrop, G: Parsons. Gold of pleasure. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. '91. 140 p. por. D. (American novels' ser.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A love-story which finds its chief purpose in the contrast of two characters, one unselfish and constant, the other impressible, shifting, seeking the "gold of pleasure." Lizard Rock Light-house, on Long Island Sound, is the home of the heroine, whose sailor lover meets temptation among the tropical East Indies. How both kept their promises of constancy, and how Martha was freed at last to marry the man of her choice, is told with simple directness.

In this brilliant and absorbing narrative Mrs. Latimer has made history as fascinating as fiction; this is, indeed, the peculiar merit of her book. Possessing exceptional facilities for acquiring information, both on account of her long residence in France, and because of her distinguished connections and acquaintances, she has brought to her task fine scholarship, ripe judgment, a most engaging literary style, and that indescribable but potent personality which carries her readers with her as the impressive talker carries his hearers. The rapidly changing and dramatic scenes of French history, from the fall of Napoleon Bonaparte to the fall of Boulanger, are vividly portrayed.

The author is Fellow in History, Johns Hopkins University. The Puritan colonists of New England established the Congregational church and united civil and ecclesiastical organizations. This monograph gives the history of the establishment and points out the causes that led to the disestablishment, thus tracing the growth of religious liberty from the time of the first settlements to the final triumph of religious freedom in New England in 1834.

Laurie, André. Axel Ebersen: the graduate of Upsala. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893 [1892.] 5+286 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Esaias Bistrom, master of the Slojdskola (manual training school) of Sonneborg, in Dalecarlia, tells to his scholars the story of Axel Ebersen, his much-loved pupil. Axel is ten years old when the story opens, an impulsive, warm-hearted boy, the only child of rich parents, who demur to his entering a "peasants' school." He becomes Bistrom's pupil, however, works ardently at bench and tools, and develops much artistic skill. A warm friendship springs up between teacher and pupil, and Bistrom tells in detail the events of Axel's life, of his school-days at Upsala, his sudden loss of fortune, of the part manual training played in his long struggle with poverty, and how by it he gave health to his father and saved his family from want. The story is told with simple earnestness, and the scenes from Swedish life are most interesting.

Laurie, André. School boy days in Russia; tr. by Laura E. Kendall; il. by G. Roux. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1892.] c. 5–332 p. O. cl., $1.50.

Dmitri Térentieff is sixteen when the story opens, and a pupil of the Gymnasium, Moscow. While in a gloomy dungeon awaiting his trial for a crime of which he is innocent—the assault of the janitor of the Gymnasium—Dmitri writes his reminiscences. They include the days of his childhood in an obscure Russian village, the finding of "Sacha," a little girl who becomes his beloved companion, his father's death, and his coming to Moscow under the impression that he is heir to a fortune. His disappointment and his poverty and his struggle to live and obtain an education are well depicted. His meeting with a famous musician who discovers he has a beautiful voice, colors his whole life. The scenes from Russian school life are novel and extremely interesting.

Minutely describes the life of Frederick the Great from his birth in 1712 to his marriage with the niece of the reigning Empress of Austria, Princess Elizabeth of Brunswick-Bevern, in 1733. Shows how the future monarch "grew up in the midst of strange surroundings in a tumult of villainous passions in the company of ministers and valets, sold to others, besides their masters, in an atmosphere of gossip, of spying and intriguing, in the uncleanliness of a court where, perhaps, the only honest man was the king." Lean, Mrs. Francis, [formerly Florence Marryat.] A fatal silence. N. Y., Hovendon Co., [1892.] c. '91. 2-355 p. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Paula Bjornstern resolved to bury her past when she called herself Miss Safford, and became a teacher in the village school in Deepdale. Her plan was a success, until an unexpected meeting with an old friend caused a misconstruction to be put upon her actions, and she was called before a parish committee, where she accepted a dismissal rather than reveal her history. Hal Rushton, a young farmer, had previously proposed marriage, and Paula accepted. After their marriage a second concealment leads to interesting developments.

Some incidents of the Simonoseki war, which broke out between the English and Japanese in 1864, are interwoven into a story which its writer claims is in its main facts true. The naval and military details were copied from the diary of a Royal Marine. The hero, Charlie Harrison, is bugler of the Marines. By a heroic deed he saves his lieutenant's life and immediately afterwards adopts a Japanese baby. The latter is known from this out until the pathetic and fanciful conclusion of the tale as the Japanese lily. Facts about the cause of the war, with description of native Japanese manners and costumes, are introduced.

One of the men while on business in India gives a sound Yankee drubbing to an Indian fakir. This man swears vengeance at first, but relents, and when the young merchant goes home to America presents him with a pipe of great beauty. This pipe he gives to the other man, the affianced husband of the girl, and this possession leads to weird consequences. The second story is the heart history of a blind wife married to an uncongenial husband, who has wedded her for her prospects of money. Mrs. Harding's eyes are those of young Hazlehurst, who proves a devoted friend to the unexpected end.

Lee, J. W., D.D. The making of a man. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 4+372 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The Rev. Dr. Lee is a well-known and eloquent preacher of Atlanta, Ga. Under the general title of "The making of a man" he embraces seven sermons of decided originality and having a consecutive interest. They are called "Bread," "Power," "Truth," "Righteousness," "Beauty," "Love" and "Immortality." They define the provision made for the physical, social, intellectual, moral, æsthetic and spiritual nature of man the last sermon showing the permanence of the completed life of man.

The story chiefly concerns itself with the fortunes of the Rev. Wilbraham Ferrars, an English clergyman, and his eleven children. Mr. Ferrars' troubles mostly come from the limited income he receives, £120, upon which he is expected to appear like a gentleman and educate his children. Two of his daughters have unfortunate love affairs, and one is suspected of killing her husband and is tried for murder.

Three frivolous, fashionable women are the heroines of these three stories—"Lady Lal," "A wordly woman" and "The legend of Mme. Krasinska." Around the brief episodes in which they figure the author has woven, she says, "some of the least frivolous thoughts that have ever come into her head." The shortcomings of her characters seem to be "less a fault than a misfortune."

Delsarte devoted his life to the discovery of a principle underlying all art and expression. Upon this principle he founded a philosophy for the guidance of those who would make the body, voice and gesture render the highest service to the soul and mind. This little work deals only with the primary department of the physical culture division of this important study. Health is essential to true beauty, and the rules laid down by Delsarte which bear on physical health are here enforced.

The basis of this royal road is reform in diet and better habits of life. The author takes a stand against the extravagant meat-eating propensities of the American people, and she suggests that we will find advantages in living for health which always means for beauty.

The author has been for many years an untiring and devoted laborer in benevolent work and for ten years the honored President of the New York State Board of Charities. The volume is the result of careful investigation and study abroad during the greater part of a year. It is historical, comparative and suggestive in its treatment of the subject. The concluding chapter gives a careful and valuable résumé of the observations and conclusions made on the condition, treatment and prospects of the insane in foreign countries. A score of illustrations add value and completeness to the book.—New York Observer.

Battery E was organized in September, 1861, and remained in service until June, 1865. The honorable part borne by Battery E in the Army of the Potomac is related with much pride by Mr Lewis, who was a member of the battery. The picture given of the private side of soldier life is both pathetic and amusing. Contains a complete roster of the battery, besides an appendix giving some valuable statistical records of artillery losses during the war.

Beatrice Rohan was consigned by her dying father to the guardianship of Col. Brand. Before she attained her majority the latter conceived a plan to gain possession of his ward's fortune. On Beatrice's refusal to comply with his demands he imprisoned her in a castle in Belgium. Her flight and subsequent perilous adventures lead Sir Lionel Charlton to espouse her cause and become the hero of a romantic and sensational story.

The first novel, "Edith Trevor's secret," ends with the mysterious disappearance of Cecil Rosse. In this one her whereabouts is discovered, and the sensational facts of her imprisonment are brought out. Lady Edith is also seen, but at a disadvantage, and her secret is disclosed. The final scene is Zorlitz.

The scene is in Zorlitz parsonage in the Black Forest, and St. Leonards, Sussex, England. Edith, Lady Trevor, incurred the displeasure of her grandfather, Lord St. Leonards, by an ill-judged marriage. After her widowhood she attempted to remedy matters by a treacherous act that involved a fortune, the fate of an infant and the happiness of Cecil Rosse and the Earl of Glenham. The interest is in the machinations of Lady Trevor with their final developments.

By means of a daring act at Brighton, Octavia Hatheway, a widow and adventuress, wins the love of Sir Harold Wynde, a wealthy English widower, who marries her. Shortly after their arrival at Hawkhurst, the home of Sir Harold, he is called to India to attend his son's deathbed. During her husband's absence Lady Wynde is anxiously awaiting his return that she may execute a scheme that will put her in possession of his wealth. A despatch announcing his death, however, complicates things, and is the signal for a new intrigue involving a large fortune and Neva's fate, which seemingly depends on the actions of three suitors.

This hanging moss, of which the botanical name is Tillandsia usneoides, is peculiar to the Southern States and Mexico. The hero, after making a failure of his life in Berlin owing to his inordinate love for a selfish married woman, settles in the western wilds of America, in a hut surrounded by giant trees, veiled and smothered in hanging moss. He lives entirely alone, and is found after eighteen years by a passing traveller, who tells him of the fate of the once celebrated society woman who had sapped his energies as this moss draws all vitality from the trees it covers.

Lindau, Paul. Helen Young: from the German, by P. J. McFadden. N. Y. and Chic., Rand, McNally & Co., 1892. c. 4–183 p. D. (Globe lib., v. 1, no. 168.) pap., 25 c.

In an introductory letter from Paul Lindau to Duke Ernest II., of Saxe-Coburg-Gotha, the former thanks the duke for an incidental recital in which a mysterious woman is the central figure, and declares an intention of making the romance a basis for a story. The scene opens in the Royal Theatre, Berlin, during the play of "Elsa," founded on a noted murder. Prince von Lohenburg is attracted by the entrance of two ladies, and tries to learn their identity, but fails. On the next day, however, circumstances favor him, and the unknown is soon known to him as Helen Young, and there follows a story of mystery, love and pathos which seems real.

The author is Rector of Holy Trinity Church, Sussex, New Brunswick. These outlines are intended to suggest ideas and subjects for short sermons or addresses in the smallest compass and in the simplest form possible. The writer particularly dwells upon the power of the Holy Ghost, and points out how orthodox Christians as a rule slight the third Person of the Trinity. A suggestive appendix of thoughts, figures, facts and anecdotes to illustrate the addresses.

The compiler of this volume is Mark Hopkins Professor of Philosophy in Williams College.

"The world within a world" is the scene of Baron Trump's new journey. That is, he finds an opening in Russia to the interior of the earth, through which he passes with his faithful dog Bulger into a strange and marvellous country. The various people he meets with are described with wit and humor and exhibit a wonderful inventive power in the author. The Mikkamenkies, or Transparent Folk, and the Rattlebrains, or Happy Forgetters, are among the most ingenious and clever delineations. Grown people will thoroughly appreciate the work, though it is written for children.

On board the Pereire, on the first day out from New York to Havre, Baron Roger makes the acquaintance of M. Chalande. After noting to the latter their personal resemblance to each other, he gives in detail the history of his life, and tells his reasons for returning to France. Just after this recital the Pereire collides with The City of Birmingham, and the disappearance of the Baron leads Chalande to assume his title. The consequences of this unprincipled act are told in a story of sensational incident and dramatic ending.

A narrative of life among the North American Indians during the early struggles in America John Pas-Plus, who relates his own adventures, is the child of white parents, carried off in an Indian raid while an infant, and brought up a young savage among savages. He becomes interested in a young white girl captured by his tribe, serves under Montcalm in the French and Indian war, and becomes a powerful chief in his nation. Through Marie's influence he is converted to Christianity.

Lorne, Marquis of, [J: G: E: H: D. S. Campbell.] Viscount Palmerston, K.G. N. Y., Harper, 1892. 8+240 p. por. D. (The prime ministers of Queen Victoria, no. 6.) cl., $1.

Henry John Temple, afterwards Lord Palmerston, Premier of England from 1855 to 1865, was born in 1784, and died at Brocket Hall, Herts, while in office. The former Governor-General of Canada shows what Lord Palmerston considered his duty, and how he did it. He describes him as "a fair and square political fighter, who made his way to power where and when he could, but always by above-board work, and always by expressing in public the reasons he gave in private." One of the most interesting periods of the reign of Queen Victoria is described in many instances from material hitherto unpublished, and almost all Lord Palmerston's long criticisms on public affairs are quoted from this material.

Contents: The dream: Zeus, the tragedian; The sale of lives; The cock; The ferry; A true history; Toxaris, or friendship; Lonkios, or the ass; The halcyon. The Greek text used is that of Jacobitz in the Teubner library. Where it has been found necessary to omit words, sentences or even whole passages which would offend modern taste, it has been done without comment. The translator gives an estimate of Lucian in an introduction.

Lüders, C: H: The dead nymph, and other poems. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. '91. 134 p. S. cl., $1.25.

Frank Dempster Sherman, the intimate friend of the late Charles H. Lüders, made this selection of poems from those Mr. Lüders had written. It shows the young poet at his best, as a dainty, imaginative spirit and an ardent lover of nature. Mr. Lüders died in Philadelphia Jan. 21, 1891. He was in his thirty-third year, and one of the most promising of the band of younger poets. The volume is a dainty issue of the De Vinne Press.

Ludlow, Ja. M. That angelic woman: a story. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 2+149 p. S. cl., $1.

Before meeting the hospital nurse, Amy Welford, George Goldie had led the aimless, sometimes vicious life of a young man with riches, social position and no vocation. The influence of her beautiful character brings out the best qualities of his nature, and the performance of what he believes to be an act of righteous restitution leads to an unexpected dénouement. The word-pictures of New York life show the old skill of the author of "The captain of the Janizaries," "A king of Tyre," etc.

Ludlum, Jean Kate. Lida Campbell; or, drama of a life: a novel: il. by H. M. Eaton. N. Y., Rob. Bonner's Sons, [1892.] c. '91, '92. 4–351 p. D. (Choice ser., no. 58.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The "Drama of a life" was a novel, the conception of a woman strangely endowed, who hoped to ventilate in this way her ill-balanced action and strange theory of being. In her efforts to have the work published is a plot to obtain money, an attempt to take life, and other sensational incidents, in which hypnotism is an important agent.

By the author of "A tramp across the Continent;" a book for young folks describing some of the out-of-the-way wonders of the West. It is very fully illustrated and contains chapters on "The grand cañon of the Colorado," "The great American desert," "Montezuma's well" and other natural wonders, besides a great deal about the curious customs of various Indian tribes. It has for a frontispiece a reproductiou of a Navajo blanket in colors.

Lummis, C: F. A tramp across the Continent. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 270 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The author in his preface says this is "merely a truthful record of some of the experiences and impressions of a walk across the continent—the diary of a man who got outside the fences of civilization and was glad of it. It is the simple story of joy on legs."

The gradual development of an unsophisticated boy into a hardened man of the world is a means of presenting animated descriptions of Athenian society and characteristics of modern Greek life. The action passes wholly in Athens and the isle of Tenos. The hero, an impressionable youth, becomes infatuated with a coarse and vulgar woman, who has attained great fame as a musician. He also falls in love with a pretty silly little Greek girl and with a beautiful maiden brought up in primitive simplicity on the isle of Tenos, who has a love-story of her own. Unpleasant complications result.

Seven vigorous short stories of life in Australia and Japan, in which journalists chiefly figure. They possess considerable graphic power and abound in journalistic slang. "Felix Holt, Secundus," is the love-story of an ardent young socialist devoted to his "cause," who loses his heart to a viscountess. The others are: The wooing of Webster; A Toshuvara episode; The bear hunt of Fuji-San; A Tosa Monogatari of modern times; Faustus, jr., Ph.D.; Fred Wilson's fate.

Maartens, Maarten, [pseud. for J. Van der Poorsen Schwartz.] God's fool: a Koopstad story. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 2+446 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A flourishing commercial town of Holland appears as Koopstad. The head of a large tea importing house is the father of "God's fool." When a boy, Elias Lossell was hit on the head by a flower-pot thrown by his stepbrother. He becomes deaf and afterwards blind in consequence and his mind naturally remains that of a child. The book carries him to the age of thirty-five. In physique he is a perfect man of six foot two, in mind a child of nine. By his grandfather's will he is head of the firm when his father dies. His stepbrothers take active charge of the business. Their plans, their wives, their daily lives and the influences brought to bear upon their afflicted brother make intricate studies in character and psychology.

The hero, a bachelor, used to the excellent cooking of his mother, does not recognize that he is at a disadvantage until her death, when some culinary mistakes of his handmaiden warn him of this. He seeks a remedy in the restaurant cuisine. This likewise proving a failure, Joris Middlestrum makes another venture, in which he proves that cooking is a question of taste.

The memorial story of America; comprising the important events, episodes and incidents which make up the record of four hundred years, from 1492 to 1892, with special chapters written for this book by J: Sherman, J. K. Upton, H: L. Dawes and others. Phil., J: C. Winston & Co., 1892. c. 6+851 p. il. Q. cl., $4; hf. seal, $5.50.

"Chapters are devoted to a picturesque account of the modes of life in the New England and Virginia of colonial times, the exploits of the buccaneers and pirates, the gradual growth of democracy, the War for Independence, the struggles of the pioneers, the gradual accessions of territory, the formation of States, the policy of the Nation respecting the Indian and the negro, and foreign relations. The church, the school, industry and invention in varied phases, literature and politics, the growth of the great cities, and the thousand and one topics that belong to American civilization, are all treated with more or less detail. In addition to the work of Mr. Mabie and Mr. Bright, papers have been contributed by Senator Sherman, Senator Dawes, Bishop Vincent, Miss Willard, Representative Breckinridge and others. The volume is copiously illustrated."—New York Tribune.

McCaleb, T: Anthony Melgrave. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 2+203 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Anthony Melgrave, a young Englishman, married Natalie Dowd, an American girl, and fearing the opposition of his father, kept the fact of his marriage concealed. As a result, people put a wrong construction on some of his acts. After the death of his wife he falls in love with Marian Lemore, whose history is also a mystery. The novel is founded on a misunderstanding and a complicated and romantic love-story. The scene is at an estate called Montalbon, in Virginia.

Machar, Miss Agnes Maule. Marjorie's Canadian winter: a story of the northern lights. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., [1892.] c. 5–375 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Marjorie Fleming is a pretty, interesting little girl of thirteen, with a literary father engaged upon a New York periodical. The sympathy between the two is very beautiful; and it is a difficult task for Marjorie to permit her father to leave her after his recovery from a serious sickness for a winter in the south. The same time is spent by Marjorie in Montreal with her aunt and cousins, the reader obtaining a graphic picture of Canadian winter sports, such as tobogganing, snow-shoe tramping, skating, etc., and also of the Ice Palace and the Winter Carnival.

Machar, Miss Agnes Maule. Roland Graeme, knight: a novel of our time. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert, [1892.] c. 285 p. D. cl., $1.

The author shows the world is out of joint, but has a firm faith that it may be set right by sufficient brotherlove and true Christian sacrifice. The scene is a small manufacturing town in the United States. Mill-owners and their families, mill hands and theirs, discussions of matters social, religious, economic, musical, poetical, etc., are worked into a story intended to bring rich and poor together and show people their duty towards each other.

MacInnes, Mrs. —. Joyfully ready: a sketch of the life of Harry MacInnes, by his mother; from the 9th London ed. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1892.] c. 3–204 p. por. S. cl., 75 c.

Harry MacInnes, undergraduate of Trinity College, Cambridge, England, met instant death by a fall from the rocks of Chatillon, in the neighborhood of Villars-sur-Ollon, Switzerland, on September 22, 1884. From his earliest youth he had been a manly, unselfish and courageous boy, whose passion was to win souls to Christ. During his life as naval cadet and later as student in Cambridge, he had many opportunities to labor among a rather wild set. He was born in 1863, and was only 21 when he died.

McLane, W: W., D.D. Evolution in religion. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1892.] 4–266 p. D. cl., $1.

The author claims that Christianity should be studied scientifically as well by the literary and historic method, and demonstrates with a good deal of force that evolutionists have erred in overlooking or ignoring religious phenomena because they are spiritual in their nature. This book is written for the purpose of showing that it is entirely possible to admit all the facts claimed by evolutionists without giving up the thought of a divine Creator.

The Silent Sea is around Australia. The gold-mines and sheep ranches of that vast country offer the scenes for the action of the characters, many of whom are decidedly original. There are two heroines, one "twenty-nine and a bit" when the story opens, the other sixteen. The hero is twenty-one. The fascinations, dangers and peculiarities of Australian life are instructively pictured.

MacLeod, —, (pseud.) How to teach paper folding and cutting: a practical manual-training aid. Lebanon, O., March Bros., 1892. c. 94 p. il. O. (Manual training ser., no. 2.) bds., 50 c.

Presents in a brief and simple manner the development of that portion of manual training which is usually designated as "paper folding and cutting." Great care has been taken in the arrangement of topics so that they may come in natural succession, gradually increasing in difficulty and awakening by their variety an ever new interest in the minds of the pupils.

Begins with the discussion regarding the constitutionality of the Louisiana purchase, and a careful presentation of the manners, customs and special characteristics of the people of New Orleans, and the connection of the New England leaders and of Burr with the Louisiana question. Other chapters treat of the results of the Louisiana purchase, of the conspiracy of Aaron Burr, of the extension of the franchise, of our foreign relations, of the "long embargo" closing with the inauguration of Madison. Under the heading "Drifting into war" are included a graphic description of the progress of the people since 1784, political and social changes, the slavery question, the Seminole war and preparations for the war of 1812, and its disastrous opening with the surrender of Hull at Detroit. The volume contains two maps, an index and an elaborate table of contents.

MacMinn, Edwin. Thrilling scenes in the Persian kingdom: the story of a scribe. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 2-323 p. D. cl., $1.10.

Ancient Persian and Biblical history is here presented in narrative form. The scene is supposed to be the city of Jerusalem before the Christian era. It is the feast of Purim, preceded by the fast of Esther, and the four chroniclers, Mordecai, Ezra, Nehemiah and Atarah, relate to a company of youths the thrilling history of the Persian kingdom in past years. The destruction of Babylon, the wars and triumphs of Darius, Artaxerxes, etc., are described, and the story of Esther and Vashti is told at length.

"This volume carries to completion the tariff record begun in the handbook for 1890, and shows by what votes the Tariff Act of 1890 was enacted. It also shows by what votes the principle of Reciprocity was embodied in it. It also carries to completion the enactment of the Ocean Mail Service Act and of the International Copyright Act. It gives the Congressional apportionment based on the census of 1890, the final votes upon the long controversy over the forfeiture of lands granted to railroads upon the passage of the act to refund to the adhering States the direct tax of 1861, and upon the material amendment made to the acts regulating immigration. It shows how the National Elections Bill, which passed the Fifty-first House, was negatively disposed of in the Fifty-first Senate. It gives the votes on all phases of the yet unsettled silver question in both the Fifty-first and Fifty-second Congresses. It makes full statement of the executive action of the last two years, including the Reciprocity and all other proclamations of President Harrison, his message, etc."—Preface.

Macquoid, Mrs. Katharine S. Appledore Farm. N. Y., National Book Co., 1892. 361 p. D. (The premier ser., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

Appledore Farm lies in the southwest of England. Its owner squanders his substance at races and in speculation. His daughter finds her inheritance gone, and after making the old discovery that the gay, handsome, outwardly-devoted suitor is at heart selfish and designing, she accepts a good man's love, eases her father's burdens, and in time becomes a satisfied woman. Some of the story has its scene on the Continent.

Yardon Hall, an old English manor house, is the scene of the story. Here Maisie Derrick lived an uneventful life until her grandfather brings Druscilla Lescure to live at the hall. This incident is followed by disappointments and a mystery that involve a young man's constancy, a girl's happiness, a woman's treachery and a misanthrope's money and secrets.

The first volume of a series that is to include all the great American commanders on land and water from Washington to the present day. The author is President of the United States Naval War College. His facts are chiefly taken from the biography of Farragut by his son, published in 1878. Farragut was born in 1801, received his warrant as midshipman in 1810, became lieutenant in 1825, commander in 1841 and captain in 1854, the highest naval rank before the Civil War. The bulk of the book deals with the war in which the great leader so distinguished himself. A final chapter summing up the character of Farragut is of special interest. Farragut died in August, 1870, and is buried in Woodlawn, New York.

A series of letters first published in The Southwestern Presbyterian. They were suggested by an article in defence of the southern Christian slaveholders, and are based upon old reports. The author purposes to vindicate the people of the south by portraying a condition of civilization now obsolete, and by showing the mutual relations of master and slave.

Olive Greyson won the respect of George Stovall by her consistent religious action, and at the same time his promise to abstain from intoxicants. George kept his word until made aware of a slight deviation of Olive's, when he begins a career that shows his teacher the force of example and the necessity of combating a vice for which she was in a measure responsible. Her plan of Christian warfare takes up most of a story of moral purpose.

"This book deals especially with a period of German history of twenty-three years' duration. Beginning with the French Revolution of 1848, it records the rousing in Germany of passions long pent-up, and, for the time, difficult to be controlled or directed; the manner in which these passions were eventually mastered; the great void and the fierce longing they left behind them; the use made by one of the chief powers of Germany of the feelings and aspirations thus dormant, and finally, the complete reversal, by the means employed by that power, of the positions held in Europe till that period by Austria and Prussia on the one side, by France and Germany on the other."—Preface.

Mallock, W. H. A human document. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] 22+261 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 103.) cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

In the introduction there is a statement that Marie Bashkirtseff's journal ought not to be estimated as a "human document," because her experiences had limitations. A manuscript is then discussed, and a woman's purpose to carry an imaginary Marie through the perilous episodes of life and thus demonstrate her deficiencies, resolves itself into a personal history which conceals the identity of the narrator by fictitious names and changed scene. Hence an unconventional story in which a married woman loses sight of moral obligation.

Malot, Hector. Conscience; from the French, by Lita Angelica Rice; il. with photogravures. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1892. c. 2+350 p. D. (International lib.) hf. roxb., $1.25; pap., 75 c.

After dinner at the house of their mutual friend, Crozat, Brigard, theologian, and Saniels, doctor of medicine, discuss conscience as a factor in human affairs. The former asserts that it should be an established dogma. The latter opposes the argument and advances theories on which a novel is based. The scene is Paris.

Scenes and characters are French. A wife poisons her husband that she may marry her lover; married to the lover she quickly tires of him, and transfers her affections to another man. The guilty woman and her first lover are tried for the murder of the husband, the woman being clever enough to escape punishment, while the man is sentenced to hard labor for twenty years.

Man and the state: studies in applied sociology: popular lectures and discussions before the Brooklyn Ethical Association. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 10+558 p. D. cl., $2.

Seventeen lectures on various political subjects, all of which were published in pamphlet form and entered under authors in our "Weekly Record" during the past year. They are especially interesting in view of the approaching presidential contest, treating as they do of the relations of the individual to the state as illustrated in the practical issues of current American politics.

Manley, R. M. Some children of Adam. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1892. c. 2+310 p. il. D. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A novel that presents a social study of American life as seen in New York. The characters which figure in the uncommon and sometimes sensational incidents will be recognized as typical ones of the metropolis. In the plot there is strange coincident, interesting action and an episode in the lives of Frank Raymond, society man, and Desiree Renaud, apparent adventuress.

"Baron de Marbot's memoirs are truly characterized by the translator as in some respects the most interesting book that has appeared in France for a generation. Of their authenticity there is no question. They relate with frank and soldierly simplicity the principal events in a life literally crowded with adventure and vicissitude. Entering upon a military career at the age of seventeen, under the Directory, Marbot was aide-de-camp, first to Massena, then to Lannes, then to other marshals, until after years of fighting in Italy, in Spain, in Germany, he obtained his colonelcy and the command of a fine regiment, the 23d Mounted Chasseurs, which he raised to a very high degree of efficiency, and with which he performed many gallant feats of arms. He was present at Austerlitz, at Jena, at Leipzig, and finally at Waterloo. He seems to have been wounded in nearly every battle, and his hairbreadth escapes were numerous."—New York Tribune.

The translator gives the entire sense of Mariette's concise and comprehensive "Aperçu" in readable English. The book was written in lecture form for the use of the Egyptian schools in Cairo, and passages having particular reference to that fact are omitted and the dates are given according to our era. Where fresh discoveries have made it necessary notes have been added. Gives a summary of the great epochs and a clear account of the successive dynasties; also a definite and vivid idea of Egypt's most important records by chisel and pen. Maps, tables of dynasties and kings, ancient Egyptian calendars, etc. Full index and list of works of reference.

Markham, Clements R. A history of Peru. Chic., C: H. Sergel & Co., 1892. c. 6+556 p. maps, il. O. (Latin American Republics ser., no. 1.) cl., $2.50.

The first of a series of histories of the South American and Central American Republics, countries hitherto known to English and American readers only through the medium of books of travel and histories of limited periods. The complete presentation of the past and present national life of these republics, their enormous resources and the growing closeness of commercial relations will be included in the scope of these histories. In Peru the civilization of the red race attained its highest development. Here the colossal fabric of Spanish dominion was shattered, and for half a century an emancipated people have struggled to establish a national existence based on well-ordered liberty. The author has already written "Cozceu and Lima;" "Peru and India;" "War between Chili and Peru," etc.

Presents a new and ingenious plan of the multiplication table, so simple and so attractive that it commends itself at sight. Great prominence is given to the products, and that these may be photographed, as it were, upon the mind, each one rests in large black figures upon a colored square—the artistic arrangement of the different shades making a charming effect on the tinted paper, which composes the pages of the book. The tables are further rendered interesting by a rhyme. These rhymes in themselves give a refining influence, for each one contains some idea; for instance: "6 x 6 are 36, a part of the flower is the calix." A gesture drill is also fully described.

Mr. Marvin devoted a number of the last years of his life to collating and sifting the material relating to Cotton Mather, rejecting all that is not based upon fairly good authority; his care in this respect was such that the reader may feel that in this volume he has the actual facts before him. Both sides of the matter are given, where a controversy exists, and the discussion that follows reveals the full bearing and strength or weakness of the pros and cons. The author has adopted the plan of a consecutive chronological biography.

In 1884 the present Archbishop of York, who was then Bishop of Lichfield, called two clergymen of his diocese to preach missions in the dioceses of Christchurch and Auckland, New Zealand. The author was one of the two who responded to this call. His description of a trip across the continent, with some remarks on colonization, are contained in the present volume. The novel features of the scene of this mission are described, and some of its results are given in detail.

Catherine Shirley is left an orphan and penniless at eighteen. She is protected and enabled to become a painter by Mrs. Vanderslyce, a warm-hearted, irresponsible woman, addicted to drink and narcotics. Carried away by gratitude, Catherine shields this friend's good name after her death by accident. The consequences of this act are far-reaching. New York City and a Florida watering-place are the setting for a story of the frivolity and heartlessness of fashionable life.

Mathers, Helen. T'other dear charmer. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 3–192 p. S. (Lovell's Westminster ser., no. 69.) pap., 30 c.

Devonshire is the background. Hugh Valentine, a handsome young amateur artist, on his way across the country to visit Dosia Treherne, a girl whom he had met in London and given his heart to, stops before a high wall to pluck a white rose. Through this act he makes the acquaintance of a mysterious young Frenchwoman who lives in the house behind the wall, and becomes the innocent victim of an apparently compromising scene which nearly breaks Dosia Treherne's and his own heart.

A new departure in fictitious literature; a novel written by twenty-four authors. The scene opens in Harrowgate, an English summer resort, where the unexpected meeting of Sir Francis Onslow and his estranged wife impels Sir Francis to make friendly overtures which are suddenly checked when he witnesses an apparently questionable episode between his wife and the Count de Murger. His subsequent action, the sensational murder of the Count, and the confession and trial of Fenella, take up several chapters. the fate of Fenella being settled by the humorist, F. Anstey Guthrie.

Mathews, Harriet. Outlines of English grammar; with continuous selections for practice. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1892. c. 17+250 p. D. cl., 80 c.

The writer, a teacher in the State Normal School at Trenton, N. J., prepared this work, partly to comply with the often-repeated request of those who have studied in her classes the system it teaches, and partly for the purpose of furnishing a text-book to follow the excellent works in "Language lessons," which are used in primary teaching. The design of the work is to teach in the order of their dependence the analysis, classifications, modifications and constructions necessary to a grammatical knowledge of the English language.

Mathews, Joanna H. John Thorndyke's prejudice: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892. 8–372 p. D. pap., 50 c

A love-tale which, after the usual complications, comes to a happy ending. The scenes and characters are mostly American. The writer is the author of the "Bessie books"

Mathews, Joanna H. Maggie Bradford's fair: the 4th of a series of sequels to the "Bessie books;" il. by W. St. John Harper. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., 1892. c. 4–271 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.

The fair of the "Checryble Sisters" is the most notable incident in the story. Maggie Bradford is, of course, the heroine, although some of the little girls who had parts in the preceding story are also present in this. Bessie Bradford, Lilly Norris and Lena Neville are among them. Besides a detailed account of the fair, an episode in Gladys Seabrook's life and a wedding are diverting events.

A collection of brief essays on related and representative topics supplemented by numerous references to fuller sources of information. These have been carefully selected, and are thought to be sufficient for all practical purposes; they are topical on all kinds of subjects and to all kinds of books. Intended principally for debaters, for students in the preparation of their various literary exercises, and for teachers. Table of contents classified by subject; questions with references, questions without references, and alphabetical index of subjects.

The writer's study is based upon the Christian belief in a devil and his almost unlimited power. Many phenomena he credits to diabolic sway and influence. He shows the wreck and ruin fallen angels have wrought, and treats in the same spirit diviners, necromancers, demoniacal possessions, modern diabolism, spiritualism and supernatural forces, occult arts, magic and sorcery, etc.

Guthrie and H. C. Bunner). The author encourages Americans to be fearlessly American within cultured limits.

Matthews, Ja. Brander. In the vestibule limited. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 8–93 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50c.

A pretty little love-drama, plentifully balanced with nuggets of common sense supplied by a delightful old lady of three-score-years-and-ten, is played on the New York and Boston Chicago express, limited, and ends in a marriage ceremony before the train rolls into the Chicago station. Daintily illustrated, with frontispiece by Abbey.

An interesting bit of Revolutionary history is woven in with the story of Tom Paulding's search for buried treasure. Tom Paulding, a boy of to-day, lived above Central Park, in a house on the Hudson built by his great-grandfather. It is in looking over this ancestor's papers that he obtains a clue to the lost money. With a couple of his school friends he has an exciting hunt for the treasure, only to discover on finding it that the "golden guineas" are worthless counterfeits. Boy life and its games is amusingly depicted.

Matthews. Ja. Brander, and Jessop, G: H. A tale of twenty-five hours. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 6+189 p. S. bds., 50 c.

In a different form and under another title this story was published four or five years ago. Carefully revised by its authors, it now appears for the first time in its proper proportions. It deals with the anxiety of a young lawyer, who imagines he has discovered some crooked dealings on the part of his most intimate friend, but is finally convinced of the fallacies of circumstantial evidence.

A story written for the purpose of refuting the false impressions of missionary life that exist in England and America. The scene opens in the latter country with a discussion between Bishop Clinton and his wife. Mrs. Clinton is indignant at the injustice done to the missionary through a false conception of his methods, and proposes to test her theories by a practical experience. The Bishop agreeing, the Clintons rapidly execute their plans and are soon in India; here a novel view of the subject is presented. Native Indian life and customs are fully described.

The object is chiefly to direct attention to the services rendered by the women of the Southern States during the past 25 years in educating the southern boys and girls, black and white. The three main divisions of the essay are, first, southern schools for the education of girls; second, the work of northern and southern women in the superior schools for colored youth; third, the common school. An appendix contains a number of essays, originally prepared as lectures or magazine articles, bearing upon the subject of education in the south.

An essay on the duties of man: addressed to workingmen, written in 1844 and 1858; reprinted by permission of Mrs. Emilie Ashurst Venturi, editor of the life and writings of Joseph Mazzini. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1892. 2–146 p. S. (The standard lib., no. 168, supplement.) pap., 15 c.

Contents: God; The law; Duties towards humanity; Duties towards your country—1858; Duties towards the family; Duties towards yourselves; Liberty; Education; Association; Progress; The economical question. Mazzini was born at Genoa in 1805. He desired above all things the unity of Italy and the expulsion of the foreigner. When monarchy failed to satisfy the people he headed the revolution for republicanism, but republicanism separate from socialism and atheism. Although nearly half a century has passed his ideas meet the needs of the hour.

Medini, F. Roena. Edalaine: a metrical romance. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892. c. '91. 5–254 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Edalaine is the seventh child of parents whose home happiness is sung throughout the volume. This couple joined the Fourierites, but left when they found how far short of the ideal plan was the actual working of the society. Edalaine and Elizabeth love the same man, and the song pictures how this love influenced their lives and formed their characters.

Meissener, Mme. Sophie Radford de. A Tcherkesse prince. Bost., De Wolfe, Fiske & Co., [1892.] c. 2–305 p. D. cl., $1.

Olga Winthrope, the daughter of an American man and a Russian woman, is, after the death of both parents, consigned by the will of her father to live in St. Petersburg with Russian relatives, who are people of high social standing. Here Olga wins at the same time the love of Prince Tariel, the son of a captive Tcherkesse chief, and Loris Andrievsky. While she really loves Loris, Quixotic views and a desire to convert a Mussulman into a Christian lead to a singular betrothal and an unexpected ending.

Melville, Herman. Typee: a real romance of the South seas; with biographical and critical introd. by Arthur Stedman. [New issue.] N.Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 33+389 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Herman Melville's recent death in New York City (Sept. 28, 1891) attracted fresh interest to his works. The present reissue, of which "Typee" and "Omoo" are the initial volumes, meets a demand. Mr. Stedman's introduction gives an interesting account of the author, and notes how largely his stories are biographical. "Typee" and "Omoo" are almost literal accounts of his own experience when, aboard a sailing ship, he visited the Marquesas Islands and other points in the South Seas. Aside from the adventures and charming descriptions of scenery which the books include, they are rich in rare information, which has given them a permanent place in all libraries.

The trip described had a purpose although a somewhat different one from that of "A tramp trip, or, Europe on fifty cents a day," which first attracted attention to Mr. Meriwether as a writer. The systems of prison labor in Europe where opportunity offered were examined and the condition also noted of workingmen and the cost of producing such Mediterranean fruits as are exported to the United States in competition with the fruits grown here. These questions are only touched upon here and there, quite a variety of amusing travelling experience being thrown in for the general reader.

Merrill, E. A. Electric lighting specifications for the use of engineers and architects. N.Y., The W. J. Johnston Co., Ltd., 1892. c. 2-176 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Intended as outlines to aid in the construction of specifications for individual installations. The "specifications" do not take the place of the rules and regulations adopted by insurance companies and electric-light associations, but are so drawn as to depend almost entirely on such rules for the details of method. The latest rules and regulations governing electrical installations of the National Electric Light Association, the National Board of Fire Underwriters and the New England Insurance Exchange are included for ready reference.

By the union of Methodist churches is meant the consolidation of all the dissevered branches of Methodism in the United States in one governmental jurisdiction. Time, study, preparation and sacrifice will be required to heal the unnecessary divisions of Methodism which have proved to be calamities. There is nothing vital to any one of them that is not in the Methodist Episcopal Church—in doctrine, discipline, spiritual life and moral teaching. The chief purpose of this writing is to consider the question of reunion in relation to the M. E. Church and the M. E. Church South. The views held on slavery were the cause of this sorest division in Methodist history, and the cause exists no more.

A story of life in a western village changing for a time to Chicago. The events are on the plane of actual life and the characters are real and natural. Most of them appear to be sincerely good, but they have their peculiarities and some twists, and make a well-contrasted group in varied interesting situations. Among other topics dealt with is the improvement of the town by planting shade trees and laying pavements and sidewalks.

Merriman, Effie W. Socials. Chic., C: H. Sergel & Co., [1892.] c. '91. 2-88 p. T. cl., 50 c.

As the social is a popular means of church entertainment, endeavor is made to introduce a series of new and attractive devices for this mode of raising money for charitable purposes.

Merriman, H: Seton. The slave of the lamp. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. '91. 327 p. D. cl., $1.25; same, (International ser., no. 198.) pap., 50 c.

"The slave of the lamp" is a clever, enterprising young London journalist, who is especially up on French politics. While visiting friends in the country he hears of a new insurrection in Paris, thought to be fomented by the Jesuits, and receives a telegram from his chief to hold himself in readiness to go there at a moment's notice. In a most unexpected manner he receives a clue to the way in which the Parisian insurgents are obtaining English rifles, through a suspicion excited by a mysterious Italian visiting at the same house with himself. This is the beginning of an exciting series of incidents.

Mew, Jos., and Ashton, J: Drinks of the world. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. il. 8°, $6.

Mexican and South American poems (Spanish and English); tr. by Ernest S. Green and Miss H. von Lowenfels. San Diego., Cal., Dodge & Burbeck, 1892. c. 398 p. D. cl., $2.

With the exception of a few poems this is a "line for line translation," with the Spanish text on one page and the English on the opposite. It is designed not only to introduce American readers to some of the most beautiful poems of their sister republics, but also to supply a useful and entertaining auxiliary to the Spanish grammars and readers now in use. The selections are largely from Manuel Acuña, Manuel Carpio and Fernando Calderon. Single poems are given from twenty-five other poets.

Hurlbert; il. by Alfred Thompson. N. Y., J. W. Bouton. 1892. c. 18+254 p. D. cl., $1.50.

To the author the story of the stick is the story of civilization, and the story of civilization as illustrated by the "armed peace" which, ever since France was felled by Germany, has brooded over Europe like a nightmare. To him the stick is at once the distinguishing prerogative and the primeval curse of man. A valuable collection of history and historical information.

Contains the story of the (Eric) Jansonists, a body of Separatists who emigrated from Sweden in 1846 and founded a theocratic communistic settlement in the wilds of Illinois. It relates the actual experiences of a community engaged in the realization of the fundamental theory of collectivism. Aside from its interest as a socialistic study, it possesses the merit of being a contribution to the history of the Scandinavian settlements in the northwest, and especially to the early history of the commonwealth of Illinois.

Miley, J:. D.D. Systematic theology. V. 1. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 16+533 p. O. (Library of Biblical and theological literature, ed. by G. R. Crooks and J. F. Hurst, v. 5.) cl., $3.

The author is Professor of Systematic Theology in Drew Theological Seminary, Madison, N. J. His work will be completed in two volumes. In defining the scope of his book he says: "The several forms of theology must be distinguished and defined. The true sources of theology must be determined and mistaken sources set aside. The proofs of the divine origin of the Scriptures must be fully recognized. Attention must be given to the grounds of certitude in doctrinal truths, and to the consistency of faith with the requisite certitude, that we may secure a scientific construction of theology. The method of systematization must be considered in order to determine what doctrines should be included and in what order they should be treated."

Mill, Hugh Rob. The realm of nature; an outline of physiography. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 13+366 p. il. map, D. (University extension manual.) cl., $1.50.

Treats of the place of physical science in the sphere of human knowledge, and shows the relations to each other of the various special sciences. The larger part is devoted to an outline description of the facts regarding "the structure of the universe, the form, material and processes of the earth, and the relations which they bear to life in its varied phases." The nineteen maps are specially compiled by J. G. Bartholomew, the eminent cartographer. The work has been reviewed with reference to the use of American students by Prof. N. S. Shaler, of Harvard University, who has supplied occasional illustrations from the point of view of the American physiographer. Full index.

The book is addressed to those commercially interested in phosphates. The phosphate mining industry is carried on with the hope of obtaining satisfactory results from a pecuniary rather than a scientific point of view, yet thus far the practical side has been neglected in literature of geological formation and chemical analysis. The author bases his work on personal investigations during the past few years.

Miller, Emory, D.D. Evolution of love. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 3–346 p. D. cl., $1.50.

True love towards God and towards an ideal self will cad to a perfect adjustment of conditions present and uture, and enable mankind to devote itself to individual perfection in harmony with the perfection of others. Jesus Christ is held up for imitation as the ideal man, perfected until fit for companionship with the Godhead. His work for mankind must have been to him a privilege, not a sacrifice. All mankind is capable of perfection by the true following of lessons taught by ideal love. The author makes his standpoint clear.

Dedicated "to those who want to grow better." . . . "It is sent out in the hope that it may be helpful to some, first in showing glimpses of better things, and then in leading towards them. It is written for people who have common human experiences in the heart of the world's toil and care. One who is a fellow-pilgrim with like experiences would lend a brother's hand."

Miller, J. R., D.D. Girls: faults and ideals: a familiar talk: with quotations from letters. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1892.] 28 p. D. leatherette, 30 c.

With an end in view the writer asked a number of Christian young men to enumerate the common faults of their young women acquaintances. Also to give what they thought were the essentials of an ideal. From the answers sprung a series of talks advising girls of a means of attaining perfect womanhood.

The party of three whose adventures are described consisted of the author, Alfred Parsons and the leader of the party, an expert canoeist. In the summer of 1890 they started in three canoes to make the journey of the Danube from the Black Forest to the Black Sea. They paddled and sailed 1775 miles through Germany, Austria, Hungary, Servia, Bulgaria, Roumania and Russia. The journey occupied eleven weeks and one day. The many strange scenes and strange people are interestingly described. The illustrations from drawings made during the voyage are very attractive.

As the dog differs much from the horse and other herbivora which engage the chief attention of the veterinarian, he must be made a special study by the veterinarian who hopes to treat him successfully. The author has aimed to fill the demand for a text-book much needed by veterinary surgeons. At the same time he has made an exhaustive study of all varieties of dogs and their normal conditions which cannot fail to be of value to all owners of dogs. The book has been illustrated with pictures taken from the leading journals devoted to these interests, and is up to date, representing the various breeds of dogs in full-page plates. The author is one of the Faculty of McGill University, Montreal Full index.

Milman, Constance. Mum Fidgets. [Also] The two Richards: il. by Edith Ellison. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 3+150 p. sq. S. (The dainty books.) cl., $1.

"Mum Fidgets" was a "dear, delightful summer house" in which two little English girls played and planned during their summer holidays. "Mum Fidgets" was haunted, they discovered later, and trembled together over the mystery, the solution of which concludes the unpretentious little tale of vacation experiences. "The two Richards" is a short story of two little boys who while babies, were confided to the care of relatives. Later they become chums; by an accident it is discovered that the babies had been "mixed," and the two Richards must change places.

Milman, Helen. [Mrs. Caldwell Crofton.] Uncle Bill's children; il. by the author. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. 5+148 p. O. cl., $1.

By the author of "The little ladies" Will Seymour, who dislikes children, offers, in a weak moment, to take care of his sister's boy and girl for a few weeks at the seashore, to remove them from the danger of contagion from scarlet fever. The scene of his experience with venturesome "Jack" and wild "Mamie" is Tenby, a little out-of-the-way place in South Wales. The children's pranks are very amusing, and serve to bring their uncle's little romance to a very sudden climax.

Milne, W: J. High school algebra: embracing a complete course for high schools and academies, being "Milne's inductive algebra," rev. and enl. N. Y., American Book Co., [1892.] c. 360 p. D. (Inductive ser.) hf. leath., $1.

The plan pursued is substantially the same as that adopted in the author's "Inductive algebra," of which this is a revision, but the scope of the treatise has been considerably extended. Natural and properly graduated exercises lead the scholar to a thorough comprehension of the principles of the science, and then he is given abundant practice in applying them.

Milne, W: J. Standard arithmetic: embracing a complete course for schools and academies. N. Y., American Book Co., [1892.] c. 428 p. D. hf. leath., 65 c.

In the preparation of this work the author has aimed to secure two results, namely, skill in numerical computations and a proper understanding of the reasons for the steps in the explanation of processes and the solution of problems. He has endeavored to secure both these ends by embodying a large number of examples upon which the pupil may be trained to accuracy and rapidity, while at the same time he has not failed to incorporate a large number of problems that are designed to train the analytical powers, and to develop the reasoning faculties.

Missing friends; being the adventures of a Danish emigrant in Queensland, (1871–1880.) N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 11+313 p. O. (Adventure ser.) cl., $1.50.

The hero of these adventures was born in Copenhagen, 1850; tiring of home restraints at the age of 21 years, he sought employment in Hamburg; after a short stay there an alluring prospectus induced him to emigrate to Queensland. He describes in detail life on board an emigrant ship, dwelling especially on the hardships of the voyage, with the cruelty of the doctor, pictures the sentiments of the emigrants on sighting land, and includes a varied experience on the Herbert River, in the gold diggings, with a Danish maiden, and finally concludes a review of an adventurous life with the statement that his object in relating these experiences has been to give a true picture of Australian life.

Mrs. Leslie and Mrs. Lennox were New York society women with whom Jack Gordon was constantly associated. Gordon knew he loved Mrs. Leslie, but recognized the obstacles to an acknowledgment; so for obvious reasons he assumes a love for Mrs. Lenuox. In his action is a cause for self-sacrifice and a waiving of several points of honor.

Mitchel, F. A. Chattanooga: a romance of the American civil war. 3d ed. N. Y., Star Book Co., [1892.] c. '91. 5+229 p. D. Chattanooga ser., no. 1.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The hero is a scout of the Union army, and his adventures as such, with a romantic love-affair and daring rescue, are a part of a plot to learn the movement of the Confederate army. Although the incidents and mainly fictitious, the action of troops, with dates supplied, are facts.

Mitchel, F. A. Chickamauga: a romance of the American civil war. N. Y., Star Book Co., [1892.] c. 5+298 p. D. (Chattanooga ser., no. 2.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

As this is a continuation of Chattanooga, Mark Maynard, the scout of that story, is the hero in some perilous incidents that occur mostly in Chickamauga and vicinity. The movement of both armies is correctly described, and the history is authentic.

Mitchell, J. A. Life's fairy tales. N. Y., F: A. Stokes Co., 1892. c. 4+117 p. il. sq. D. cl., $1.

Fifteen satirical papers in the guise of fairy tales, originally published in Life, on the social customs, fads, etc., and individual peculiarities of the people of different American cities; by the author of "The last American."

Mitchell, S. Weir. Characteristics. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. '91, '92. 4+307 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A romance by the eminent Philadelphia physician; was published first as a serial in the Century. In the form of a narrative the author has given the results of a life-long study of human nature, skilfully dissecting various impulses and discoursing entertainingly on love and hate, art, music, literature, health, sickness, life and death.

Mitchell, S. Weir, M.D. Francis Drake: a tragedy of the sea. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. 7+60 p. O. cl., $1.25.

The time is 1578. The author has adhered in the poetical telling to the statements given in "The world encompassed" (1628), Hakluyt Society, No. 16; the extracts of evidence as to the trial of Doughty from the Harleian manuscripts in the same volume; Barrow's life of Drake; and a biography by Julius Corbett in the English men of action ser. It is worthy of note that there is no woman in this tragic story.

Mitchell, S. Weir, M.D. The mother, and other poems. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. 4+69 p. O. cl., $1.25.

Twenty-five poems full of the tender feeling, the scientific knowledge, the love of nature and appreciation of goodness and greatness in others for which Philadelphia's great physician is held in such high esteem.

South Africa at the time of one of the frequent native uprisings is the scene of a dramatic narrative of ghastly vengeance wreaked by a Kafir warrior upon an Englishman. There is a love-story woven in the plot, which terminates in orthodox fashion; but it hardly lightens the gloom cast by the rapidly succeeding scenes of savagery and by the horror of Hlangani's revenge.

Impelled by a wish for amusement Alix and Rafe search the garden of an old English manor house whose care-taker tells them stories of The three wishes; The summer princess; The Christmas surprise; and The magic rose.

Molesworth, Mrs. Ma. Louise ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] The girls and I: a veracious history; il., by L. Leslie Brooke. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 5+192 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

It is the custom of the young hero of the story to allude to himself and four sisters as "The girls and I." He tells in a rather patronizing way how his sister Anne was responsible for the loss of a very valuable jewel, how this heirloom was recovered under very peculiar circumstances and in a strange place, and of a visit to Fewforest.

Molesworth, Mrs. Ma. L., ["Ennis Graham, pseud."] Hathercourt. N. Y., G: Munro, [United States Book Co., 1892.] 5+380 p. D. (Seaside lib., no. 2026.) pap., 25 c.

First published in Holt's Leisure hour series. See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., July 6, '78, [338.]

Molesworth, Mrs. Ma. Louise. ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] Leona. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 3+332 p. D. cl., $1.

A study in the temperaments, motives, hopes, trials and temptations of young girls. Leona, originally spoiled and selfish, coming under good influences, becomes a help in her home and an inspiring friend to her cousin Jack. The story is a warning against interference on the part of good, well-meaning women in the heart histories of their girl relatives.

Molesworth, Mrs. Ma. Louise, ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] The man with the pan-pipes, and other stories; il. by W. J. Morgan. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1892.] 3–96 p. sq. O. cl., $1.

The man with the pan-pipes was so called because he played enchantingly upon a row of reed pipes. His story is really a modification of the "Pied piper of Hamelin," told by a German cousin to her little English relative. With this is included Pig Betty; The Dormouse's mistake; The Christmas guest; Olive's tea-party; A live dummy; A queer hiding-place; Blue frocks and pink frocks.

Molesworth, Mrs. Ma. Louise, ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] The next-door house. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] 4+271 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

Willie Peebles, a little motherless boy of nine years, spent a greater part of his time at the window speculating about "the next-door house," which after being closed for a long time, seemed to be taking upon itself signs of life. The new occupants count a couple of little girls among their number, and it is several episodes growing out the children's intercourse which make the story.

Molesworth, Mrs. Ma. L., ["Ennis Graham," pseud.] Robin Redbreast: a story for girls; il. by Rob. Barnes. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1892.] 3-291 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Robin Redbreast, an old house in a Thetford lane, was so called because of a jutting red front and ivied wings. Although formerly an inn which swung that bird for a sign, it was at the time of the story the residence of Lady Myrtle Goodacre. A trivial circumstance and the sight of Jacinth Mildmay revives old associations for Lady Myrtle, and lead to some pleasant incidents and a bequest which makes Jacinth the heroine of the Mildmay family.

The story of the brilliant actress who was a striking figure of the London stage and of the social life of the end of the last century. She is presented surrounded by a brilliant group of players, wits, critics, men of fashion and of letters who were her friends or her contemporaries. The remaining space on the canvas has been filled in with views of town life as it was in her day. David Garrick is one of the notable figures. Profusely illustrated.

Moltke, Count Helmuth v. Letters of Field-Marshal Count Helmuth von Moltke to his mother and his brothers; tr. by Clara Bell and H: W. Fischer. N. Y., Harper, 1892. 5+317 p. por. il. O. cl., $3.

The private correspondence with his most intimate relations, covering a period of sixty-five years, affords glimpses of the early life of Germany's great general, of his courageous struggles against adversity and disappointment and of his modest acceptance of the success and fame which finally were awarded him. The letters are full of opinions and criticisms of public men and events. Letter after letter is filled with observations on the incomprehensible Schleswig-Holstein question, which for twenty-seven years agitated Europe. The German radicals of 1848 also are classified and judged. The letters show von Moltke as a man of warm affections.

Moltke, Count Helmuth v. Moltke, his life and character: sketched in journals, letters, memoirs, a novel and autobiographical notes; tr. by Mary Herms; il. from drawings by Moltke, portraits and fac-simile letters. N. Y., Harper, 1893 [1892.] 9+332 p. O. cl., $3.

"Our knowledge of the Field-Marshal must be supplemented from notes regarding his family and his own life, from journals of travels and records of the many impulses, scientific and artistic, to which his travels gave rise: further, from an attempt in the region of belles-lettres—the novel of 'The two friends,' in which he, the man of eight-and-twenty, paints himself true to the life; finally, from the vigorous productions of his old age, with their strivings after the highest truth, which, under the title of 'Consolatory thoughts,' form the conclusion of the volume. With these autobiographical notices has been effectively incorporated that which has been said concerning Moltke's endeavors and performances by those whose duty it was to criticise or report upon them."—Editor's note.

Monday Club. Sermons on the international Sunday-school lessons for 1893, by the Monday Club. 18*th ser.* Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1892.] c. 415 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The eighteenth series of Monday Club Sermons has the same authors and the same valuable features that its immediate predecessors have had. The sermons are brief, clear and scholarly expositions of the passages selected by the International Lesson Committee. The authors, one of whom is a member of the International Committee, and most of whom are well known for success in Sunday-school work as well as for ability as preachers, have been very happy in hitting upon those features of the lessons which are most valuable for spiritual instruction.

Monroe, Miss Harriet. Valeria, and other poems. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. '91, '92. 7+301 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The title-piece of this collection of poems is a tragedy in five acts, the scene being a small Italian state of the fourteenth century. Upon this narrow stage the author has caused to be enacted a drama which has won from well known critics pronounced and cordial commendation. Miss Monroe was distinguished by being selected to write the "Opening ode for the World's Columbian Exposition," which is included in this volume.

Montagu, Mary Wortley, (Lady.) Lady Mary Wortley Montagu; select passages from her letters; ed. by Arthur R. Ropes; il. with nine portraits after Sir Godfrey Kneller and others. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, [1892.] 3+308 p. D. cl., $2.50.

Lady Mary Wortley Montagu belonged to the great Whig aristocracy that ruled England for half the eighteenth century. She lived a long and checkered life, and was a great traveller and a strong-minded, eccentric woman. She was the first Englishwoman who sent back accounts of the mysterious and magnificent East; she is remembered as the friend and then the enemy of Pope, and as the courageous introducer of inoculation. Mr. Ropes has made a selection from the great mass of letters she wrote, of some of the more entertaining passages, stringing them together with a thread of explanation where necessary.

Montmahon, C. de, and Beauregard, H. A course on zoölogy: designed for secondary education: tr. and adapted [from the French] for American schools by W: H. Greene, M.D. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893 [1892.] c. 2-368 p. il. S. cl., 75 c.

This book forms the basis of instruction upon the natural history of animals in the secondary schools of France. Its methods are such as have been found by experience to excite most interest on the part of the pupil. In the translation the plan of the original work has been followed closely; but such changes have been made as were needed to Americanize the book.

Moore, G: Vain fortune. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 3+283 p. D. cl., $1.

A man of sixty-five proposes marriage to his eighteen-year-old adopted daughter. She refuses to marry him, and he dies of the disappointment, leaving his entire property to his nephew, an unsuccessful playwright. He comes to the fine old English estate, and becomes acquainted with his uncle's adopted daughter and her companion. Given this scene and situation the author of "Impressions and opinions" tells a morbid story of art, jealousy and discontent.

Moorehead, Warren K. Primitive man in Ohio. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 15+246 p. il. O. cl., $3.

An elaborate presentation of the more recent explorations among the prehistoric mounds of the Ohio Valley, accompanied by detailed diagrams and illustrations. One hundred and seven mounds, graves and cemeteries were opened during the four seasons of exploration which Mr. Moorehead records; careful field notes were made of every excavation, and the result of each day's labor was fully written out. These notes form the basis of the volume, which is a valuable contribution to American archæology.

Moran, W. H. W. From school-room to bar: a novel. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. 304 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The scene is Virginia. Roger Lane, one of the F. F. V.'s, whose father had lost fortune, but not pride or caste, during the Rebellion, suddenly astounds his family by declaring his determination to go to work. He acts immediately on this threat, and a schoolteacher's position in Leesburg is one of his means of reaching a higher goal—the bar. A young lawyer's success in pleading a first case and a charming love-affair are pleasing episodes.

Morley, H: English writers: an attempt towards a history of English literature. V. 9. Spenser and his time. N. Y., Cassell Publishing Co., 1892. 12+456 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Covers the period between 1552 and 1599. Among Spenser's contemporaries were Queen Elizabeth, Walter Raleigh, John Hooker, Philip Sidney, Francis Drake, Edward Knight, Thomas Watson, Mathew Grove, Tasso, Montaigne, Arthur Hall, John Lyly, George Peele, Robert Greene, Marlowe, Francis Bacon, Richard Hooker, Shakespeare, etc. One of the most important and most fascinating volumes of Prof. Morley's great book.

Morley, Margaret Warner. A song of life; il. by the author and Rob. Forsyth. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1891. c. 4-155 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author is a special student of biology and embryology, a charming writer, and a graceful artist. Her combined attainments have produced a most entertaining book for young people on the life of the flowers, fishes, frogs, birds, etc. There are also two chapters on "The end—and the beginning" and "The world's cradle," the latter referring to eggs and the embryos of life. The book is prettily illustrated in the text by flowers, birds, fishes, etc.

A series of entertaining stories taken from the leading plays of the most noted dramatic authors, from Ben Jonson to the present day. This work is based on the general plan of Lamb's "Tales from Shakespeare," and deals with the most popular plays of the best-known English playwrights.

Morris, E. J. Prayer meeting theology: a dialogue. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 2+263 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A little Congregational church in a sequestered Welsh settlement in Pennsylvania had kept up a weekly prayer-meeting for half a century. Members seemed to come more seldom and the meetings lacked spirit. Three of the most faithful meet and discuss the reasons for the dearth of piety and plan ways and means to revive a spirit of prayer in their little church. Their thoughts are put in dialogue form.

These three volumes contain the most famous narrative poems of ten great Victorian poets, done into prose, which has preserved the charm of the poetry, in so far as it was possible, while giving the story pure and simple. The collection affords an admirable means of learning in a brief and agreeable manner what has been done in narrative poetry during the present generation. The poems represented are: The ring and the book, by Robert Browning; The Princess, by Tennyson; Rose Mary, by Daniel Gabriel Rossetti; The lovers of Gudrun, by W: Morris; Tennyson's Enoch Arden; A blot on the 'scutcheon, by Browning; Aurora Leigh, by Mrs. Browning; Matthew Arnold's Sohrab and Rustum; Buchanan's The two babes; Swinburne's Tristram of Lyonesse; Lucile, and The Spanish Gypsy.

Whether it is Mrs. Barbara Temple or her daughter Sophia, who is "charming to her latest day," is left somewhat in doubt. Mrs. Temple is a rich widow with three unmarried girls when she is first introduced. She cleverly wins rich husbands for two of her girls, and is not without her own admirer, who proves unfaithful when he discovers that she is many years older than her looks indicate. Sophia marries late in life, and is the author of a number of rules teaching women "how to be beautiful forever."

The first of a series of twelve volumes planned to give a complete history of the United States from the discovery of America to the present day. They will represent 12 ages of progress. The historical divisions are: 1, The age of discovery; 2, Conquest; 3, Bigotry; 4, Colonization; 5, Reason. 6, Tyranny; 7, Superstition; 8, Contention of powers for supremacy; 9, Independence; 10, Liberty established; 11, Supremacy abroad; 12, Union. The present volume was first published by the Worthington Co., in July of 1891. Besides relating the trials of Christopher Columbus and his discovery of America, embraces a pleasant love-story.

Musick, J: R. Estevan: a story of the Spanish conquests. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co.. 1892. c. 5+388 p. il. D. (Columbian historical novels, v. 2.) cl., $1.50.

The second volume of this series, "Estevan," covers the whole period of the conquest; treading the ground cleared by Prescott in his "Conquest of Peru." Estevan, a Spanish boy of noble family, is introduced in the first volume. The story of his boyhood is a romantic one, and as a youth he accompanies Columbus on the voyage of discovery. In the second volume he is recognized as an old acquaintance whose fortunes inspire a lively interest, he and his son after him being among the chief actors in the moving scenes of history.

Musick, J: R. Pocahontas: a story of Virginia. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co , 1893 [1892.] c. 7+355 p. il. D. (Columbian historical novels, v. 4.) cl., $1.50.

In "Pocahontas" Mr. Musick continues to weave romance with history. The Indian princess and Captain John Smith play the leading parts in the story, which deals with the history and shifting fortunes of the first Virginia colonies. As in the preceding volumes, an Estevan—who on English soil is known as plain Philip Stevens—is the hero of many adventures and a pretty love-story.

Musick, J: R. Saint Augustine: a story of the Huguenots in America. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1892. c. 7+319 p. il. D. (Columbian historical novels, no. 3.) cl., $1.50.

The period covered is the establishment of St. Augustine, the oldest town in the United States—the period corresponding to the Reformation in Europe and the fierce persecution of the early reformers. The murder of the Huguenots, who had sought a home in Florida, constitutes the chief historical episode The romance of the story is again centred in an Estevan, a grandson of Hernando Estevan, who accompanied Columbus on his voyage of discovery. This Francisco Estevan, after many experiences, is made prisoner by French pirates and taken to the Huguenot settlement in Florida, where he saves the woman he loves from the massacre in which nearly the whole Huguenot colony perished.

Two cousins who only meet when nearing manhood are the leading characters. Gerald Yorke has lived his young life in Italy. He is imbued with a love of art, is a musical genius, and impetuous, imaginative and independent. At his mother's dying request he seeks her brother's home in England. Martin Cartwright is a prosperous tradesman living in a provincial town. He and his wife are strict Methodists, the wife, however, exceeding the husband in narrowness and bigotry. Here Gerald finds John, their only child, who is breaking his heart in the unsympathetic atmosphere. Gerald is a revelation to his cousin John, and from the moment of meeting the boys entertain for each other a deep and faithful friendship which receives no strain even when both unfortunately love the same woman.

Philip Methuen was the only son of a younger son. Disappointment in his own career led Methuen senior to educate Philip for the priesthood. Just before he is ordained, however, his destiny is changed by the sudden death of his cousin, and Philip is a most unwilling successor to a title and Methuen Place. The interest is in the sad effects of a strong man's self-sacrifice for what he believes to be right and just. The story occurs mostly in Dorsetshire.

Nella, Milton. His one desire: being an account of the growth of the greatest wish of his heart, and how he secured the attainment thereof. N. Y., J. S. Ogilvie, 1892. c. 4–258 p. D. (The peerless ser., no. 57.) pap., 25 c.

The hero, a compositor, returns to his home in Syracuse after some years' absence, where he becomes acquainted with a young Rochester girl. The novel is founded on his efforts and success in winning her love. The action is in Syracuse, Rochester and Nashville, Tennessee.

Norris, Mary Harriott. Afterward. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., 1892. c. 4–470 p. D. (Golden lib., no. 2.) pap., 50 c.

Henry Winchester, a prominent New York broker, is tempted first to falsify a check, and later to appropriate bonds not his own. The results of defalcation fall chiefly on his unoffending wife. The story is one of a woman's social ostracism, a struggle for a higher plane of life, and of a pleasant aftermath, in which Madeleine Winchester is seen as the betrothed wife of Mark Dascom.

Norris, W. E. His grace. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 278 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The story is told by Philip Martyn, a "practical nonentity" in the events which he relates. He plays the part of guide, philosopher and friend to the hero of his story, whom he supplies with much good advice, which is usually calmly disregarded. "His Grace" is Arthur Gascoigne, a young fellow who, from comparative poverty, becomes Duke of Hurstbourne. From the petty spite and malice of his cousin some very pretty complications arise, but His Grace's unfailing optimism brings him out a victor both in love and war. English "society" life is sketched with Mr. Norris' accustomed perception and delicate satire.

North Carolina. The code of civil procedure, with notes and decisions to Dec., 1891, (including some decisions in the 109 N. C. reports,) with the rules of the supreme and superior courts, and the adjudications thereon; by Walter Clark. Raleigh, Edwards & Broughton, 1892. c. '91. 8+817 p. O. shp., $6.

"When the first edition of this work appeared there were only twenty-six volumes of N. C reports which contained adjudications upon the code of civil procedure. Since then twenty-one additional volumes of our reports have been issued. This edition has therefore been entirely rewritten The number of adjudications cited are about double in number those in the first edition. All the changes made by the last four Legislatures in the C. C. P. have also been incorporated in the text. . . . The present work is simply a working-tool to save labor to the profession. It is intended for that purpose, and to be like the C. C. P. itself—a practical work."—Preface.

Norton, A. B., M.D. Ophthalmic diseases and therapeutics. Phil., Boericke & Tafel, 1892. c. 4–555 p. por. il. O. cl., net, $3.50.

A text-book upon ophthalmology, devoting especial attention to the homœopathic treatment of the diseases of the eye. Gives as concisely as possible all the essential features necessary to a thorough knowledge of the subject, commencing with the anatomy of the various structures. It has been the aim to follow a definite and systematic order, taking up successively the pathology, symptoms, course, causes, diagnosis, prognosis and treatment of each separate disease. Practically a new work, though offered as a continuation of Allen and Norton's "Ophthalmic therapeutics," which has long been out of print.

Ober, Corolyn Faville, and Westover, Cynthia M. Manhattan, historic and artistic: a six days' tour of New York City. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 9+232 p. il. D. cl., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

It is the intention of the authors to present it as attractive a literary form as is possible a practical guide-book which has for its object economy of the sightseer's time. Although historical and artistic points of interest are of first importance, the educational, commercial, municipal and philanthropic features are fully represented. There is a comprehensive chronological record of notable events that have occurred in the metropolis from its settlement in 1624 to 1891, and a general history which traces the social developments of New York City.

O'Donnell, Jessie F. A soul from Pudge's Corners. N. Y., G. W. Dillingham, 1892. 2–313 p. D. pap., 50 c.

A question of conscience is involved in the first story. A minister, who believes it is a sin to marry a divorced woman, has a painful experience in a miserable out-of-the-way village in New York State. The other stories are "Two points of view," "Miss Athalina's mind cure," "Miss Pamela's journal" and "An afternoon's imprisonment." The stories appeared first in the Ladies' Home Journal.

Ogden, Antoinette. Christmas stories; from French and Spanish writers. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 5–265 p. S. cl., $1.25.

The French stories are by Theuriet, Coppée, Daudet, Gustave Droz, Jules Simon, Marcel Prévost and Maxime du Camp. The Spanish ones are by Valdés, Galdós, Maré, Alarçon, and Adolfo Becquer. The features of the continental Christmas, so different from the English plum-pudding tradition and our American customs, are delightfully presented in very successful translations. In pretty white covers with floral decorations.

O'Grady, Standish. Finn and his companions; il. by J. B. Yeats. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1892. 12+182 p. S. (The children's lib.) bds., 75 c.

It is believed that Finn and his companions lived in the second and third centuries: Cælta, the son of Roman, and Ossian, the son of Finn, are supposed to be the only survivors of Finn's heroes at the time of the story. The former of these is brought into relation with St. Patrick while building a church on the plains of Meath. By this means a number of stories of ancient Irish folk-lore are introduced.

First published in Berlin, 1827. "A sufficient reason," the editor says, "for republishing an English translation of the wonderful book of Prof. G. S. Ohm is the difficulty with which the only previous translation (that of Taylor's 'Scientific Memoirs') is procurable. Besides this, however, the intrinsic value of the book is so great, that it should be read by all electricians who care for more than superficial knowledge."

French country life, its hunting parties, fêtes champêtres, etc., is described. All of the characters are ardent followers of Nimrod, and complications arising between poachers and land-owners are important in the story. The heroine is a Jewess, only child of a vulgar millionaire stock speculator, who loves a young marquis ruined by her father's financial operations. Under his influence she becomes a Christian. Though their love-story has many painful episodes, the dénouement is satisfactory.

Oliphant, Mrs. Marg. O. W. The cuckoo in the nest. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 3-357 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

"The cuckoo in the nest" is Patty Hewitt of the "Seven Thorns"—a little country inn—who forces herself into the aristocratic family of the Pierceys of Greyshott Manor, by marrying their imbecile son Gervase, generally known as the "Softy." The manner in which she enters Greyshott after Lady Piercey's death and routs her enemies—the servants and visitors—takes possession of old Sir Giles, and attempts to feather her own nest, is amusingly told.

Oliphant Mrs. Marg. O. W. Diana: the history of a great mistake. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892] c. 2-306 p. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

Diana was a poor school teacher when she came under the notice of an old couple named Trelawny, who discovered in her a second cousin and bequeathed her large estates and a vast fortune. She is thirty when she is introduced to the reader, a noble woman, proud of her position and extravagant in her kindness to all who come in her way. She sends an aunt and niece to Pisa for their health, then follows them and gathers around her a delightful circle. In ideal Italian surroundings "the great mistake" is made.

Morris Julian, at the age of 35, wooed and won for his wife Satia Maynard, a beautiful school-girl. What at first seemed an ideal marriage is followed by a revulsion of feeling and an unconventional act on the part of the young wife, with remorse and atonement on the side of the husband, and a reunion, in which Dr. Kenneth Cameron is an important actor.

Oman, C. W. C. The story of the Byzantine Empire. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 14+364 p. il. D. (Story of the nations ser., no. 33.) cl., $1.50.

The writer has not accepted Gibbon's presentation of the Byzantine government as a corrupt and decaying despotism, but has written from the point of view of later historians, who recognize the great work done by the East Roman Empire in "holding back the Saracen and keeping alive throughout the Dark Ages the lamp of learning." The picturesque history of the great empire is clearly and briefly presented from the founding of Byzantium and its destruction, A.D. 196, through the gradual rise of Constantinople to supreme magnificence, its slow decline in power, menaced by Frank and Saracen, to the final tragedy, the fall of the city of Constantine before the hosts of Mahomet II. A chronological table of emperors is appended.

Ompteda, Christian v. (Baron.) A Hanoverian-English officer a hundred years ago: memoirs of Baron Ompteda, Colonel in the King's German Legion, 26th Nov. 1765 to 18th June, 1815; tr. by J: Hill. N. Y., B. Westermann & Co., 1892. 7+320 p. por. O. cl., $5.

The memoirs of Baron von Ompteda have been edited by his grandnephew, Baron Louis von Ompteda, who has made use, for that purpose, primarily of the letters and diaries of his granduncle, and the personal literary remains of the late Baron Louis, Christian's brother, and secondarily a number of historical works of the period treated. The hero was a brave soldier who served in many countries and died at Waterloo. The book has a wide historic interest and also a strong personal one, as Ompteda's life was full of incident and vicissitudes.

On Calvary. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892 4-394 p. D. pap., 50 c.

In a study of sacred literature the first eleven chapters are devoted to Calvary, from the days of the patriarchs to the life of our Lord; other chapters, without regard to chronological order, give the history and graphic descriptions of notable Biblical places such as the Mount of Olives, Mount Carmel, The Mount of Temptation, Nazareth, Hebron, The Sea of Galilee, Palace Shushon, etc.

Oppenheim, E. Phillips. The peer and the woman. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1892.] c. 259 p. S. (Mayflower lib., no. 4.) pap., 30 c.

Joan and Jerry were two cousins whom an aunt had called derisively Beauty and Brains. Joan met her cousin for the first time under unpleasant circumstances in a London lodging-house. The main incidents of the friendship thus formed, with a description of some of Joan's lodgers, take up most of a story which tells finally of Joan's victory.

*Original Mother Goose's melody, as issued by J: Newberry, of London, circa 1760; Isaiah Thomas, of Worcester, circa 1785, and Munroe & Francis, of Boston, circa 1825; reproduced in fac-simile from the 1st Worcester ed., with introd. notes by W: H. Mr. Whitmore has made a careful bibliography of "Mother Goose," and given the various theories about the writer of these classic nursery poems. He is certain that the verses were of French origin and that the book containing them was first named "La Mère l'Oye."

In the "House comfortable," of which the author writes, "use comes before display, health before fashion, and adaptibility to present and future circumstances is considered in the buying of all its belongings." The practical advice for furnishing all parts of the house is excellent. Approximate prices are given and details gone into for every article of furniture needed for the kitchen, bed rooms, parlor, dining-room, etc. A valuable little book for any one beginning housekeeping.

The principal characters are a hunchback who has been employed as cabin-boy on board the ship Atlanta, from Savannah to Bremen with cotton and turpentine, and Aunt Nancy, a tiny spinster living alone on the coast of Maine. An explosion aboard the Atlanta makes the crew think the vessel is on fire, and the captain's infant boy and Jack, the cabin boy, are put into a boat. The boat drifts to the Maine coast, the two characters being brought into contact with "Aunt Nancy," who, in spite of her many eccentricities, has a kind heart.

Ottley, H: Bickersteth. The great dilemma: Christ his own witness or his own accuser. New ed. N. Y., American Tract Soc., [1892.] c. 3–232 p. D. cl., $1.

The present work is a general revision as to notes and text of a series of lectures in which there is an endeavor to solve a Christian problem by elucidating the great dilemma that the author claims is involved in answers to questions suggested by the tragedy of Calvary.

Ottolengui, Rodrigues. An artist in crime. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 3+281 p. S. cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The story opens in a Pullman sleeper. Two New Yorkers discuss a recent robbery and one of them wagers that he will plan and commit a crime within one month and elude detection for a year. If he succeeds he wins one thousand dollars. The wager is overheard by "the best-known detective in New York," and the following morning it is found that one hundred thousand dollars worth of jewels have been stolen from a passenger on the train. From this point on a succession of bewildering clues are found and lost and the mystery is skilfully unravelled.

Park, Roswell, M.D. The Mütter lectures on select topics: surgical pathology, for 1890–91. St. Louis, Mo., J. H. Chambers & Co., 1892. 293 p. 8°, cl., $3.

Parker, G: F. A life of Grover Cleveland; with a sketch of Adlai E. Stevenson. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 10+333 p. D (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 129.) pap., 50 c.

This life of Cleveland may be looked upon as a supplement to his "Writings and speeches" prepared by the same author. So much unused material came to Mr. Parker's hand in the preparation of the latter volume, that he was moved to embody it in the present brief sketch. It chiefly relates to Mr. Cleveland's political life since elected in 1884 to the Presidency. Besides Mr. Parker's own eulogistic summing up of his subject's character, there are warm appreciative letters from Richard Watson Gilder and Wilson S. Bissell, Mr. Cleveland's former law partner.

Parker, Jos., D.D. The people's Bible: discourses upon Holy Scripture. V. 16, Jeremiah xx.–Daniel. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., [1892.] 6+456 p. O. cl., $1.50.

The discourses begun in a previous volume are completed in the present work, which is an exhaustive interpretation of the "Lamentations of Jeremiah," "The book of the prophet Ezekiel," and the "Book of Daniel." Each salient subject is treated in turn as a text, doctrine is expounded, and the moral in the incident is brought out. As in the previous volumes, these homilies are supplemented by a liberal number of articles, entitled "Handfuls of purpose," drawn from the texts and topics, and which are especially prepared for the use of teachers.

Parker, Jos., D.D. The people's Bible: discourses upon Holy Scripture. V. 17, Hosea–Malachi. N. Y., Funk & Wagnalls Co., 1892. 7+456 p. O. cl., $1.50.

This is the concluding volume of Dr Parker's pastoral notes on the Old Testament, and it covers a vast and interesting field from Hosea to Malachi. These sermons are not only for the theologian, but of special use to the Christian man or woman who is anxious to get greater illumination upon the divine word. There are but two more books on the New Testament to follow and complete this series, making in all twenty-five volumes, Parker's People's Bible.

Parker, Leroy, and Worthington, Robert H. The law of public health and safety, and the powers and duties of boards of health. Alb., N. Y., Matthew Bender, 1892. c. 42+471 p. O. shp., $5.25.

Contents: The police power of the State; Limitations on the police power; Municipal corporations, powers and duties, ordinances; Board of Health, organization, powers and duties, etc.; Nuisances; Regulation of business pursuits and professions; Practice of medicine; Slaughter-houses; Oleomargarine laws; Regulations of markets; Regulations to prevent fires; Building laws; Regulation of burial; Regulation of railroads.

Parker, Nella. Home acting for amateurs: six original comediettas. N. Y., F: Warne & Co., 1892. 2 series, ea., 12°, cl., 50 c.

Parker, Theo. Lessons from the world of matter and the world of man; selected from notes of unpublished sermons, by Rufus Leighton. Chic., C: H. Kerr & Co., 1892. 4–430 p. D. (Unity lib., no. 16.) pap., 50 c.

Selections have been made from the sermons of ten years, extending from 1849 to 1859, and embrace a wide range of topics. Parker's most striking peculiarities were his happy faculty of making the most abstruse and complex themes interesting to thousands; and his continual and varied illustration of his favorite idea that religion is to be applied to every department of human thought and action, to the most trivial actions of the individual.

Parker, Theo. West Roxbury sermons, 1837–1848; from unpublished manuscripts; with

In some respects the present volume is a new contribution to the mental and religious history of Theodore Parker. He does not appear here so much as the reformer or controversialist, but as the preacher of a suburban parish, breaking the bread of life to his congregation from week to week. The sermons have been chosen not so much for their thought-power as for their relation to life and conduct. They cover the period from the beginning of his ministry at West Roxbury to the year following his settlement in Boston.

Parker, W: G. The information readers, no. 3, Man and materials. Bost., School Supply Co., 1892. c. 3–326 p. D. (Boston school ser.) cl., 60 c.

The purpose of the series is to make practical information a basis for a course of reading. The subject-matter in this number is some products of the earth; these are seen first in their natural state, then as forces of science, art and industry in the hands of man.

Parkman, Francis. A half century of conflict. Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1892. c. 2 v., 10+333; 8+395 p. O. cl., $5.

Forms Pt. 6 of the series called "France and England in North America." Takes up the narrative at the close of the author's "Count Frontenac and New France under Louis XIV." (being Pt. 5), and filling the gap between that work and "Montcalm and Wolfe" (pt. 7). The series now forms a continuous history of the efforts of France to occupy and control this continent, being completed by this work, which covers the period from 1700 to 1748. "In the present volumes," says the author, "the nature of the subject does not permit an unbroken thread of narrative; and the unity of the book lies in its being throughout, in one form or another, an illustration of the singularly contrasted characters and methods of the rival claimants to North America. Like the rest of the series, the work is founded on original documents."

Parkman, Francis. The Oregon trail: sketches of prairie and Rocky Mountain life; il. by F: Remington. [New il. ed.] Bost., Little, Brown & Co., 1892. c. '72, '92. 14+411 p. O. cl., $4.

This popular book for young and old, describing a journey among the Indian camps and the Rockies by the eminent historian in 1847, and giving a vivid description of a condition of country and of Indian life now passed away, will be found more attractive than ever before, being enriched in its present form by a number of striking pictures of Indian settlements, camps, implements, buffalo hunts, trappers, etc., by the distinguished artist, Mr. Frederic Remington, well known for his faithfulness and power in depicting the red man and western scenery and life. Mr. Parkman's new introductory chapter, written specially for this holiday production of the work, points out the remarkable change which has taken place in the scenes of the narrative during the past forty-five years.

Parr, Mrs. Louisa. The squire. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 2+328 p. D. cl., $1.

An ideal English country place is the home of Squire Royston, a confirmed bachelor, for a reason that to his daily associates remains a mystery. The heroine is the daughter of a London physician, who dies, leaving her a stepmother and an inheritance of debt. As soon as she discovers that her father's people have been induced to furnish money for a style of living far beyond their means by misrepresentations of her stepmother, she breaks off her life of false pretence and goes to gladden her grandmother's heart and meet her destiny.

When the regiment to which "Dick's" father belonged went out to India, he asked his brother, Martin Yelf, to give Dick a home on the farm until he was a few years older. Mrs. Yelf reluctantly received Dick, as she feared he would make her own boy, Albert, wish to become a soldier. The story only covers a few years of the boy's life and shows how he finally wins his aunt's love through his brave, manly spirit.

Parsons, Eugene. Tennyson's life and poetry, and mistakes concerning Tennyson. Chic., Ill., printed for the author by The Craig Press. [1892.] c. 30 p. O. pap., 15 c.

A brief biographical sketch which gives a survey of Tennyson's literary career. The author claims that while consulting periodicals and works of reference for data relating to the subject, he discovered much of the information about Tennyson was erroneous. Hence a paper attempting to correct and expose these errors.

Parsons, Ja. Russell, jr. French schools through American eyes: a report to the New York State department of public instruction Syracuse, N. Y., C: W. Bardeen, 1892. c. 136 p. 1 il. O. (School bulletin pub.) cl , $1.

This report, with paper on the French elementary school system, was prepared by the author of "Prussian schools through American eyes," at the request of A. S. Draper, New York State Superintendent of Public Instruction. The information it offers is the result of personal observation and a trip to France. Although the special subject is primary instruction in France, a comprehensive account of the entire educational system of that country is given. The statistical matter is likewise furnished by Mr. Parsons, ex-Consul at Aix La Chapelle, who was formerly School Commissioner in Rensselaer County, and is now Inspector of Teachers' Training Classes.

Partridge, C. S. Stereotyping; the papier maché process. Chic., Published by the author, C. S. Partridge, 1892. c. 139 p. il. O. cl., n. p.

The importance of this method of stereotyping in its relation to newspaper printing and its progression, with the lack of published matter on the subject, has induced the present work, which has a practical aim. In it the various processes of this system are shown, and machines, tools, materials and results are described. Space is devoted to American patents, and there is included a list of inventions, with name of inventor, number and date.

Pascoe, C: Eyre. London of to-day: an illustrated handbook for the season, 1892. 8th annual ed., rev. and enl. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. 6+434 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

In a note to this edition Mr. Pascoe says: "The earlier and some other chapters have been, as heretofore, rewritten. Other new matter and illustrations have been added, and the whole has been revised and, as far as possible, brought up to date. In several particulars this book differs from most works of its class published. Practically it is a new-made book every year. Though originally planned solely as a guide to visitors, a purpose it still principally fulfils, in reality it is somewhat more. It is in part also a record of all that seems most worth noting in the life of London of to-day."

Patton, Francis L. Caspar Wistar Hodge: a memorial address. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1892.] 61 p. O. bds., 60 c.

Dr. Hodge was born in Princeton, Feb. 21, 1830. In 1860 he was called to Princeton as Professor of Exegetical Theology and New Testament Literature. He died Sept. 27, 1891. This address was prepared at the request of his colleagues in the Theological Seminary and delivered in the First Presbyterian Church, Princeton, on Sunday morning, Nov. 15, 1891. Handsomely printed with marginal references.

Patton, Jacob Harris. Four hundred years of American history. N. Y., Fords, Howard & Hulbert. [1892.] c. '76–'92. 2 v., 5–614; 2+616–1215 p. O. cl., $5.

A new revised and enlarged edition of the author's "Concise history of the American people," brought down to the present time. This work fills a place between the school histories and the elaborate histories of many volumes. The great events and principles which have influenced the American people and have made the nation are most largely dwelt upon, an informal summary of the less important facts and events being given from time to time in order to keep perfect the thread of the narrative.

Patton, Jacob Harris. Political economy for American youth; written from an American standpoint. N. Y., A. Lovell & Co., [1892.] c. 8+297 p. D. cl., $1.

Aims to present the study in a clear, concise, practical and attractive manner so as to win the interest and attention of young American students. Certain phases of political economy—such as free trade and protection—about which there are differences of opinion, have the arguments for and against, as set forth by their respective advocates, fairly and concisely given.

On the threshold of his life Robert Grey is engaged to his cousin. His two most intimate friends love this girl also, one most unselfishly, the other with less noble motives. One of these friends dies under suspicious circumstances, and Robert Grey is tried for murder. The tragedy is finally most ingeniously and scientifically explained. The three young men are students at Cambridge, England, and college life furnishes many incidents of the story.

Payne, E: J: History of the new world called America. V. 1. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 30+605 p. O. cl., $3.

The writer is Fellow of University College, Oxford. In this volume the social economy of the advanced aborigines of the New World is traced to its physical conditions. The author's theory is that all advancement in civilization takes its origin in the organized provision of the food supply on an artificial as distinguished from a natural basis. Such organization necessitates defence, and communities having the two organizations elaborated extend their boundaries at the expense of others whose social arrangements are less advanced. Begins with a philosophical argument on the function of history, and throughout every fact of the history of the countries of South America, the West Indies and Mexico is traced to its scientific cause. Glossary of Spanish and aboriginal words and full table of contents.

Payne, F. M. Excelsior Webster pocket speller and definer. N. Y., Excelsior Pub. House, [1892.] 317 p. Tt. flex. leath., indexed, 50 c.

This small volume embodies about 22,000 words of recent coinage, which have recognized usage. The spelling is principally based on the system of Noah Webster. There is a special plan for peculiar verbal construction and pronunciation. A list of abbreviations, with rules for capitalizing, punctuation, etc., is included. Designed as a ready reference lexicon for business and literary people.

Payne, Harold. The gilded fly: a political satire. St. Paul, Minn., The Price-McGill Co., [1892.] c. 3–331 p. D. (Idle moments ser., no. 18.) pap., 50 c.

"The gilded fly" is the name of a club of politicians and police officials whose enormous revenue is derived from "contributions" from dive-keepers, liquor-dealers, etc. The author satirizes New York life in a sensational story of political, social and moral corruption.

"The Baroness" was the young Madame van Cortlandt, who was temporarily separated from her husband. Five years before the story opens she had appealed to the courts for a separation, on the ground that her husband had struck her, The Dutch law only grants a temporary separation for five years, giving discontented couples an opportunity at the end of this period to reconsider their affairs. The Baron van Cortlandt's brother believes that the Baron is the victim of a revengeful woman's spite, and the story turns on his efforts to efface the scandal from their honored name.

Pearson, K: The grammar of science: with twenty-five figures in the text. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. 13+493 p. D. (Contemporary science ser.) cl., $1.25.

In the latest volume of this series the author claims that while he accepts almost unreservedly the results of modern science, he believes its vocabulary to be deficient and obscure. Hence a critical analysis, in which apparent deficiencies are shown, theories introduced, and the minutiæ of the subject is discussed.

The story opens in the Rosedale Insane Asylum;

Clothilde Gilroy is dying. Before her death, however, she bequeaths to her physician, Dr. Aubrey Grotius, a package of letters which reveal her fatal secret and the strange antecedents of her mother. These, with the diary of Dr. Grotius, and the experiences of Grotius, Dana, and Elfrieda Cathmore, with the action of an Indian mystic, Sulmal, are a means of ventilating theories of mysticism, transcendentalism, spiritualism, etc. Although one of the scenes is in Benares, India, many of them, it is claimed, are real places in New York State.

The story of a poor and proud southern girl who earns her living first as companion to a young girl afflicted with suicidal mania and then as governess to eleven riotous Irish children. She sacrifices her own happiness for love of her first charge and for a time things look very dark; but all comes out right in the end. Scene and characters are American, and the history of Mildred's buffeting with fortune is both interesting and amusing.

In the history of this organ the origin and development of the Afro-American newspaper is traced, its attitude in Abolition days and present time is shown. The nature and work of representative journals and their editors described, and a fac-simile of its first paper reproduced.

Pennell, Jos. The Jew at home: impressions of a summer and autumn spent with him; il. by the author. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 2–105 p. D. cl., $1.

Mr Pennell wrote a series of descriptions of the Jew in Austria and Hungary, in Austrian Poland and in Russia for the Illustrated London News in December, 1891. In the issue of this paper for January 9, 1892, his articles were answered by "A Native of Brody." Other newspapers have challenged him to answer this answer. The Illustrated London News did not think well of continuing the subject, and preferring not to begin a newspaper war, Mr. Pennell makes his explanations in this volume.

Principally devoted to describing the games and religious festivals of the Provençals. There are chapters on "The bull fight," "The water tournament," "The story of the Maries." "A painter's paradise," etc., and illustrations to the number of nearly one hundred.

Pennington, I: Selections from Isaac Pennington, [by Mary W. Tileston.] Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 20+113 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Isaac Pennington, born about 1617, was the oldest son of a former mayor and alderman of London. He joined the Society of Friends about 1658. These letters were written in the interim between that year and the time of his death, in 1679. With the selections are included passages from his other writings, He was persecuted for his faith and imprisoned, and it was while in prison that he wrote many of the letters, which are notable for their forgiving, Christian spirit.

Perkins, Ja. Breck. France under the regency; with a review of the administration of Louis XIV. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 17+603 p. D. cl., $2.

Mr. Perkins has already treated of French history in "France under Richelieu and Mazarin." This volume discusses the interesting period of the Regency of the Duke of Orleans and the long reign of Louis XIV. The titles of its chapters indicate the important subjects treated: France in the eighteenth century; The early years of the administration of Louis XIV.; Wars with Spain and Holland; Colbert; Louis the Great; The revocation of the Edict of Nantes; Coalitions against France; The Spanish succession; The close of the reign of Louis XIV.; The Regency; Dubois and the English alliance; The Quadruple Alliance and war with Spain; Law and his system; The Mississippi Company and its failure; The ministry of Dubois; The close of the Regency; The morals and the Regency.

A year or two ago a little volume containing the poem of "Eleusis" was published anonymously in a private edition, and made a very marked impression in the limited circle where it was known, as disclosing evidence of a new and distinctive force in American poetry. The author being thus encouraged to avow his creation, has revised and somewhat extended the poem; and it now appears with the addition of a dozen "Lesser poems" that give a pleasant relief and variety to the volume.

The author desires to tell the story of the discoveries made in Egypt in a style between the dry, scientific and the pleasing, inaccurate work which has appeared in fiction. He gives many hints how travellers may go about in Egypt "without the usual routine of coddling and being led by the nose by a dragoman." Gives a table of the kings and dynasties, addenda to Bædeker's vocabulary, and a full index, giving reference to every illustration. The author has already published "Pyramids of Gizeh," "Hawara," etc. He is actively engaged in the "digging" he describes.

A satire upon the politics of to-day. A presidential campaign in the animal kingdom—thoroughly up to date—is described in text and caricature. The animals that are most prominent in the election are the tiger and the lion and the elephant, and these one almost immediately picks out as Mr. Harrison, Mr. Blaine and Mr. Cleveland.

A young Londoner who goes fishing for trout in Devonshire during his summer vacation is the hero of numerous amusing adventures, which are described, so English critics say, with "American humor." There are, besides, many pages given up to pen-pictures of the beautiful scenery of the country, with many philosophical remarks on fly-fishing as an art.

Lady Twombley, the wife of the "cabinet minister," is not only very extravagant herself, but is worried by an extravagant son. The motive of the play is her efforts to get money to pay her own and her s n's debts. She speculates upon state secrets, she learns from reading her husband's papers, and is the victim of a couple of schemers, who wish to get into fashionable society. The play is rich in amusing character-studies of London society people.

Dr. Moran and his wife, wealthy, educated people, looking for a girl baby to adopt, are attracted by girl twins in a home for friendless children. The doctor's first impulse is to take both the little girls, but his wife's advice prevails, and one is left, who figures as "the little sister of Wilifred." The "little sister," known as "Peggy," becomes the property of a boarding-house keeper, and the "slavey" of a third-rate establishment, made up largely of students. The children by chance meet after they have reached their twelfth year, and they are able through their extreme likeness to play a very funny comedy, which again reunites them.

Pool, Maria Louise. Mrs. Keats Bradford: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4+309 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"Roweny in Boston" ended in the heroine's departure for Paris to pursue her studies in painting. There she became Mrs. Keats Bradford. The new story opens with her return on a visit to her old home without her husband. Roweny constantly tells her mother what an angel Keats is, though he spends his time in a California ranch, while she paints in Boston, taking her young sister to live with her. After many days Roweny decides to be wife first and artist in moderation.

Pool, Maria Louise. Roweny in Boston: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. '92. 3+348 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author of "Dally" has written a bright story of life among the Browning clubs, theosophists, mediums and some newer fads of Boston "culture." The heroine goes to Boston from her commonplace country home to study painting. Her boarding-house experiences, her country and city lovers, her final departure for Paris, make a readable story, full of humor and pathos. The continuation of this story, entitled "Mrs. Keats Bradford," appeared in the N. Y. Tribune.

Poole, W: F. Columbus and the finding of the New World. Chic., privately printed, [by W: F. Poole,] 1892. 19 p. sq. T. pap., n. p.

The ordinance in question was a part of the scheme of the Ohio Company of Associates, devised 1787, for buying and settling a tract of land in Ohio. The fact of Mr. Poole's accrediting its authorship to Manasseh Cutler led H. A. Chaney to challenge the former in the November Inlander, and this in turn led to a reply in the January issue of that paper.

A young Russian girl who has led the conventional, fashionable life of well-to-do young women of good position in large cities is forced by her father's dishonesty and crime to accept the position of schoolteacher in a little village on the wild plains of Russia. After arriving, with her mother in the most rebellious humor, she finds the diary of her predecessor, the general's daughter, whose memory is revered among children and parents. Manitchka learns to long for higher motives in life, and is more and more repelled by her frivolous, pleasure-seeking mother. The end is tragic.

Pott, Mrs. H: Francis Bacon and his secret society: an attempt to collect and unite the lost links of a long and strong chain. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 4–421 p. il. D. cl., $2.

The author undertakes to introduce Bacon as a member of a secret organization which he perfected, and whose secrets have never yet been divulged, and can only be discerned by unlocking the ciphers and secret means of communication as Mr. Donnelly has done in his cipher discovery. She declares that "in those dark days every prince had his cipher, and no correspondence was conducted without the use of some secret cipher."

When Alec Dundas and Nellie Christian, who were lovers until separated by designing relatives, meet in Lausanne after many years, Nellie is an estranged wife, and Alec the betrothed of Violet Derrick. On some pathetic incidents in the past and present of this pair is founded a novel in which the most interesting episode is the marriage of a woman of thirty-two and a man of forty.

Praeger, Ferdinand. Wagner as I knew him. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. c. 23+334 p. D. cl., $1.50.

For half a century the writer and Wagner were intimate friends. He feels he is one to speak with authority on Richard Wagner, the man, the artist, his mental workings, and the doctrine he strove to preach. He does not vindicate Wagner in all things. He acknowledges his inconsistencies, but thinks that when seen in his true character "many a hostile, unsparing criticism, begotten of malice or inadequate knowledge, will shrivel and crumble away." He considers Wagner "the greatest art personality of this century—unequalled as a musician, great as a poet as regards the matter, moral, and mode of expression, whilst in dramatic construction a very Shakespeare."

Written as a devotional help for the Church at large to promote her spirituality and to lead to a chosen communion with the Holy Spirit. The late President Mark Hopkins, of Williams College, read the outlines of this book during the last year of his life and offered the author words of encouragement and valuable suggestions. It is suggested that the comparative feebleness and insufficiency of modern piety may be traced to the lack of public attention given to the third person of the Trinity. Unsectarian.

This poem, beginning "We are the Ancient people," is virtually an utterance of the Pueblo people themselves out of their own life and experience It is a passionate, pathetic, proud outpouring of racial and tribal feeling with reference to the past, when the Pueblos were supreme, and to the present, when they are encompassed by the conquering white men. Every allusion is based upon some fact in the history or habits or beliefs of the people, as the notes attest. The illustrations portray correctly the life and customs of the Ancient people.

Graphology in the present instance is treated as a science and based on the methods of Jean Hippolyte Michon. It is claimed that with the aid of this book practice, and the analysis of a letter, that it is possible to determine the writer's personality, and even nationality. Philosophical reasons, illustrations, proofs and specimens of handwriting are given and their characteristic features noted.

Does not pretend to be a guide either to the great city of Chicago or to the Exposition; is rather a series of descriptions of the peculiarities and attractions of Chicago, and of the most novel and inviting of those features of the Exposition in regard to which it was possible to gain reliable information at the time the author was in Chicago—Oct., 1892. Many of the chapters have already appeared in the Harper periodicals.

Ralph, Julian. On Canada's frontier: sketches of history, sport and adventure, and of the Indians, missionaries, fur traders and newer settlers of Western Canada. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 8+325 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

The chapters that compose this book originally formed a series of papers which recorded journeys and studies made in Canada during the past three years. They were published chiefly in Harper's Magazine. In the newer western parts of Canada the same mixed surplusage of Europe that settled the Western States is elbowing the fur-trader and the Indian out of the way, and is laying out farms in the far north. The reader can get an insight into the almost departed life of the plainsmen and woodsmen, and of the newer forces of nation-building on our continent.

"There are two classes for whom this book is not intended. The first are those who are already familiar with all the results of past labors, and who, therefore, can find nothing here to add to their present ample stores of knowledge, there being no claim to original discovery or invention. The second class are those who neither know nor care anything about the history or philology of their native tongue. Between these extremes is the large and important class who already know something and desire to know more." The first part comprises chapters on: The instability of language; The sources of English; The province of grammar; Word-making; The alphabet; Grimm's law, and Pronunciation and spelling. The second part is devoted to the various parts of speech, with illustrations

Rand, E: A. The Down East master's first school. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1892. c. 473 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

The author's own experiences as a "Down East master" have provided him with much of the material for this story, which will, he hopes, furnish helpful hints to teachers just beginning work. It relates the experiences of a young collegian who "teaches school" in a Maine backwoods village some thirty years ago, and who succeeds in securing the respect and affection of his unruly scholars. Of course there is a girl pupil to whom he loses his heart, and when the war breaks out and the young teacher enlists, and is wounded at Gettysburg, Annie Alton goes to the hospital to nurse him back to life and happiness.

School-boy life with its hopes and disappointments, its fun and pleasures, is woven into an attractive story. The boy-heroes are healthy, hearty specimens whom it is pleasant to read about.

Ray, Anna Chapin. In Blue Creek Cañon. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1892.] c. 3–310 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Miss Anna Chapin Ray has had the advantage of spending a summer in a mining camp in the Rocky Mountains. Her story, introducing a number of the simple-hearted, healthy boys and girls whom she excels in depicting, is full of local color and of such incidents as are true to the life. It opens in the breeziest and most alluring manner, and the spirit which animates the young skaters on the pond in the cañon in the first chapter never fails.

Raymond, Mrs. Evelyn H. Mixed pickles. N. Y., T: Y. Crowell & Co., [1892.] c. 2–286 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The "Mixed Pickles" which Mrs. Raymond has so entertainingly put up for the delectation of the young are a German family who hear the romantic name of Pickel, and who are brought by an easy-going, good-natured brother of their father to visit their American grandmother. Other grandchildren are domiciled in the roomy Quaker farmhouse, and the adventures of the various members of the household, especially of young Fritz Pickel, are a source of amazement, perplexity, amusement, and not seldom of righteous wrath to the maiden aunt, whom at the last the German uncle carries off in the regulation manner.

Monica is a Spanish girl of Southern California who lives in a quaint old house of adobe, surrounded with vines and flowers, and is the main support of a family descended from the proud Hidalgos of Spain. Into their quiet life comes a current from the outer world. Monica goes in search of her missing brother, and meets with strange adventures, which result in the unravelling of a complicated chain of destiny.

This volume completes Rénan's "Souvenirs," and forms an essential part of his lifework, since it explains the origin and foundation of his judgments. He says: "I was brought up by women and by priests; therein lies the whole explanation of my good qualities and my defects." The preface gives a clear statement of Rénan's beliefs, and shows his hopeful sympathy with the people of his time and the races yet unborn. In this preface he pays a touching tribute to Calmann-Levy, his publisher and friend, at whose request this book was written.

V. 1, 1850–1854; v. 2, 1854–1860. N. Y., Harper, 1893 [1892.] c. 10+506; 9+541 p. O. cl., $5.

These two volumes embrace the history of eleven years—a brief period, but one fraught with the most momentous consequences. Beginning with an introductory chapter on the origin and progress of negro slavery in the United States, the author traces the history of the famous compromise measures of 1850, gives an account of the absorbing political controversy which throughout this period engrossed the whole attention of the nation, relates the downfall of the Whig and the formation of the Republican party, tells about the struggle for supremacy in Kansas, and finally describes the events which led to the defeat of the Democratic party by the election of Abraham Lincoln in 1860. The work is the result of thorough and scholarly investigation, and will be welcomed as a most complete, judicious and fair-minded history of that important period.

A new edition in larger type and with a larger page of a popular story of the New England coast, published two years ago; illustrated with thirty half-tone pictures, from Frank T. Merrill's drawings. See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., Nov. 1, '90, [979.]

Hildegarde Grahame has already been the heroine of two volumes, "Queen Hildegarde" and "Hildegarde's holiday." Her story is taken up again about six months after her father's death and loss of fortune. She and her mother are obliged to give up their elegant New York home and live in the country in an old-fashioned house full of quaint furniture and reminiscences of the past. Here Hildegarde finds a cousin Jack and other interesting characters who both charm and amuse.

Under the heading, "The praise of God as declared in the book of nature," there are four sermons, entitled The glory of the Lord; The omnipotence of the Lord; The riches and wisdom of the Lord; The holiness of the Lord. These were read at sea in 1890. The series for 1891 includes under the heading "Christ our Lord, thee even the sea obeys," five sermons which

Rickoff, Rebecca D. A supplementary first reader. N. Y., American Book Co., [1892.] c. 6+122 p. il. D. bds., 25 c.

The distinguishing features are: Words by sight learned first in sentences; analysis and synthesis combined in two interchangeable parts of one whole; comparisons of forms to cultivate the sight, and lead to a correct seeing of words. The complete reviews are most important, being the setting forth in tabulated forms of the stages of the work done.

Riddell, Mrs. J. H. The head of the firm. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. '91. 3–450 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 214.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

A pretty young English girl, a vender of vegetables and fruits, falls heir to a large fortune, made by her father's uncle in America. She has been supporting her shiftless step-mother and her children by her efforts, but after receiving her fortune pensions them off, and takes a governess to train her for her new position. The story is one of simple homely details, showing the influence of money on the rich as well as the poor. There is the usual love episode, with an unusually lovely heroine.

Through the Black Forest and the adjacent country is the ground covered by "a mad tour." The characters are a young woman and a young man who take advantage of a month's holiday in the summer season to take a walking tour in Germany on a very economical plan and with very light baggage. The tone of the book is light and amusing throughout, the characters themselves contributing most of the incidents.

Riis, Jacob A. The children of the poor. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 9+300 p. il. O. cl., $2.50.

The author of "How the other half lives" has supplemented that important book with a new volume of facts concerning the problem of children of the poor, the Italian slum children, the great East side treadmill, the little toilers, the truants of our streets, what it is makes boys bad, the story of the fresh air fund, the kindergarten and nurseries, the potters field etc. The application of these facts is suited to the conditions of New York City chiefly, but a lesson is taught for all the world by this book in which nothing is set down "in malice."

Ring, Max. Prince and musician; from the German; by Hettie E. Miller. Chic., Donohue, Henneberry & Co., [1892.] c. 3–317 p. il. D. (Optimus ser., no. 20.) pap., 50 c.

The hero is a famous musician, the protegé of a German prince. Women find him irresistible, and he appears successively as the lover of the Countess Ada Harrer and the Duchess Léonie von Taland. The former had been a happy wife before falling under his influence, but fully expiates her sin in the misery that comes to her in finding herself deserted. Norin, the musician, meets his punishment at the hands of the countess' husband.

Rippe, W: Des kindes erstes buch, nach Paul Bercy's "Livre des enfants." N. Y., W: R. Jenkins, 1892. 100 p. D. bds., 40 c.

An adaptation into German of Livre des Enfants. The method is divided into forty lessons, each consisting of a short vocabulary and appropriate illustration, a reading lesson and a few sentences to be memorized; and as an appendix are given a few simple rhymes suitable for the nursery.

Ritchie, Mrs. Anne Thackeray. Records of Tennyson, Ruskin, Browning. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 6+190 p. pors. il. O. cl., $2.

The author writes "frankly, garrulously and at ease" about all the Tennysons, the places they have lived, the friends they have known and incidents connected with the publication of Tennyson's best-known poems. She treats of Ruskin and Robert and Mrs. Browning in the same way. There is no attempt at criticism. The book deals with the people and their surroundings as they have come under her personal notice or that of her celebrated father.

When the story opens more than two years had passed since Barbara had sent Jack Dering away from Rosemary. His unexpected appearance again upon the scene and Barbara's final acceptance of him gives the motive of the story. Their married life is a stormy one, from which the spirit of "Val," Barbara's first husband, is not altogether exorcised. Another uncongenial couple, with a husband as cold and colorless as Dering is vivid and passionate, varies the monotony of the Derings' domestic infelicities.

Roads, C: Christ enthroned in the industrial world: a discussion of Christianity in property and labor. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 3–287 p. D. cl., $1.

The author aims to reach the Christian ideal which is attainable in the many phases of complex work-day life.

Robbins, Mrs. Mary Caroline. The rescue of an old place. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 6+289 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The neglected farm of this experiment was an odd-shaped tract of land in Hingham, Massachusetts. Recognizing its possibilities, Doctor and Mrs. Robbins purchase the "old place," and begin their work of restoration by tearing down a house that had been standing 200 years; then follow improvements of the ground, which are fully described. Besides interest as a descriptive work, there are hints for those meditating a similar undertaking. The chapters were originally published in The Garden and Forest.

Roberts, Margaret. A younger sister. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 314 p. D. cl., $1.25.

A story of English family life, told with the minute detail characteristic of the author of "The atelier du Lys." It deals chiefly with the development of Guenola, the "younger sister," whose originality and innate force of character are repressed by her father's selfish short-sightedness, and who is considered by her family to be a far less devoted daughter than Marcia, her well-regulated elder sister. Yet Marcia seeks her own happiness, and when times of trial come it is Guenola who takes her place, becomes the mainstay of the home and makes the greatest sacrifice in her power unsuspected. In the sudden happiness that comes to her at last, the devotion of the younger sister meets with due recognition.

Tom Tiehurst, mate on the Vancouver, incited the anger of his brother, in command of that vessel, and further complicated his affairs in a scene with his brother's wife, by a misunderstanding with the girl he loved, and by incurring the revenge of an Oriental. After suffering some of the consequences of these misfortunes he leaves the ship, and is the hero of adventures of both love and hate. The scenes are varied. The greater part of the action occurs in Australia.

Roberts, Morley. The reputation of George Saxon, and other stories. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1892. 7–282 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

George Saxon, upon coming into a fortune, aims to be an author. He buys manuscripts from impecunious geniuses and brings them out over his own name. His books cover many subjects and betoken a catholic intellect and an unprecedented capacity for work. The extent of his reputation is the subject of the first story. The "others" are entitled The artist; The bronze-caster; Exlex; A noble German; The troubles of Johann Eckert; The plot of his story; On Bear Creek; The captain's wife; Sam Jackson's snake, and Francke and party.

Mrs. Leslie, a prominent New York woman, seeks the advice of a well-known detective on a matter that involves her husband's honor; while they are in conference, another client in the personage of the apparently erring husband appears on the scene, and there follows a second recital. After summary evidence he agrees to aid both, and the consequences make a novel of sensational surprises and unexpected developments.

The substance of this volume was delivered as the Baird lecture in the spring of 1889. Dr. Robertson says: "My interest in the subject is not primarily of a dogmatic or theological character. I am less concerned to defend a theory than to claim for the Biblical writers—what I think they have not received—fair play. On both sides of the controversy the books have been wrangled over as if they had been some legal deed or act of Parliament, while the personality of the writers has been left out of view."

One of the inheritances of the Westmorlands, an old English family of great wealth, was a "prophecy" in doggerel, to the effect that when the last son was the only son of a younger son, and did not marry before the new moon fell upon a Sunday, March 1, that the family would become extinct. This coincidence of the moon only occurs twice in one hundred and fifty years, and was noted by the almanacs to happen in the year following that in which the story opens. The Westmorlands had dwindled down to a father and son, who fulfilled the conditions outlined by the "curse." The story turns on the many efforts the father makes to have his son marry before the fatal day.

Governor Robinson, known as "the war governor of Kansas," adds his valuable knowledge gained as an eye-witness of the early struggle in Kansas (1855–58) between the free-state and slave-state men as to the admission of slaves into the state, to the literature of the subject. The book was written, he says, for two reasons: "The first is the importunity of persons who were actors or sympathizers in making a free state of Kansas, and the second, that no writer thus far has taken the view that seems to me the true one of the movements made by the free-state party, and of the causes and reasons for the same." The author aims to show that the state was saved to freedom by inside work.

Vermont has the honor of being the first state added to the original thirteen. Mr. Robinson is an honored son of Vermont and takes just pride in its unbroken record of intelligence, lofty patriotism, and resolute morality. On the borderland between the United States and Canada, Vermont has had a part in every contest carried on between Great Britain and France and between Great Britain and the United States, and has not been behindhand in the work of the United States. Gives a discriminating picture of the people of Vermont, their industries, interests and characteristics. Vermonters have been pioneers of civilization throughout the United States. Index.

These discourses, though prepared in 1888 and 1889, by the progress of economic research and the march of history are already in need of modification. This is especially true in regard to the theory as held in 1889 of the causes that led to the immigration of agricultural laborers to London. The editor has pointed out the changes, but does not correct his father's statements in the body of the book. Index.

Roland. Extraits de la Chanson de Roland; avec une introd. littéraire des observations grammaticales, des notes et un glossaire complet, by Gaston Paris. 3d ed., rev. and corr. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. 27+160 p. D. (International modern language ser.) cl., 70 c.

To be used as an introduction to the study of old French. Eight hundred and fifteen lines are given in eight chapters, with a summary at the head of each chapter, and excellent notes at the foot of the page. The first thirty-six pages contain the author's preface, the introduction to the Chanson, and an admirable introduction to the grammar of old French, that is to say, primarily the French of the Chanson. At the end is a full glossary. Gaston Paris is conceded to be the highest authority on the Chanson de Roland. The preface, introduction, and, in short, the whole book is in French, as of course it is designed for advanced students.

The three countries mentioned in the title are the subjects of many pages of interesting description. The volume represents a brief winter and summer tour south and north. The time of the writer's Brazil experiences was just before the founding of the Republic.

Romanes, G: J: Darwin, and after Darwin: an exposition of the Darwinian theory and a discussion of Post-Darwinian questions: 1, The Darwinian theory. Chic., The Open Court Pub. Co., 1892. 13+460 p. por. O. cl., $2.

The second of three volumes designed to appear under the general title of "Darwin and after Darwin." The volumes are made up from a series of lectures delivered before the students of Edinburgh University from 1888 to 1890. The present volume is a systematic exposition of what may be termed the Darwinism of Darwin for the "general reader." The author has been careful to avoid assuming even the most elementary knowledge of natural science on the part of his readers. The first volume, or that which deals with the purely historical side of biological science, "may be allowed," says Prof. Romanes, "to stand over for an indefinite time." Contains a portrait of Darwin and many good wood-cuts.

First edition (see P. W. "Weekly Record," Dec. 1, 1888 [879],) has now been out of print for some time. In the preparation of a second edition, each chapter has been carefully examined, some portions (notably the chapters dealing with Neurasthenia) have been considerably amplified. It has also been thought desirable to give a description of various toxic neuroses, viz.: those due to alcohol, opium, etc, and to supplement the section on disorders of the abdominal organs, by adding a chapter on corpulence.

Rosseboro, Viola. Old ways and new: stories. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. '89–'92. 5+216 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Ten short stories in which humor, pathos and keen satire blend harmoniously. "The clown and the missionary" meet as second-cabin passengers on an eastward-bound steamer from New York and before reaching England the clown's devoted love for his sister and his habit of reading the Bible have convinced the missionary that he will make a much-needed assistant in Chinese mission work. The other stories are: Bentley's system; A jest of fate; The last Marchbanks; The reign of reason; Nannie's career; The force of example; Rudolph; The village alien, and The girl and the problem.

Gerald Garston is the son of an Iowa farmer, who has been brought up in the close companionship of two girls, daughters of neighbors. He cannot tell which he prefers, so leads each to think she is the favored one—finally succeeding in ruining both the girls' lives.

Ross, Albert, [pseud. for Linn Boyd Porter.] Why I'm single. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, [1892.] c. 4–360 p. D. (The albatross novels.) pap., 50 c.

In the experiences of Bianca di Romani, sensational scenes in the life of an apparently friendless girl are reproduced: and in the fate that threatens her is seen the history of many girls dependent on their own exertions for a livelihood. In a startling escapade, in which there is both pathetic and humorous incident, the heroine shows she has resolved not to marry; therefore the concluding chapter offers a surprise.

Ross, Clinton. Improbable tales. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. '91. 5+256 p. S. cl., $1.25.

The three tales are called: "The pretender" (the sentimental adventures of a personage), "The peace of the hills" and "After the play of 'The rivals.'"

Ross, E: A. Sinking funds. [Balt., Md.,] American Economic Assoc., 1892. c. 3–106 p. O. (Publications of the American Economic Assoc., v. 7, no. 4, 5.) pap., $1.

This study falls under three heads: English amortization, American amortization, the theory of amortization. In an introduction the author says: "To understand the nature and workings of the device known as the sinking fund we must study it as it appears in the financial history of England and the United States. In the former we have exemplified all the financial mistakes to which a wrong theory of amortization can give rise. In the latter we discover the slow emergence of certain ultimate forms of amortization, on which both experience and scientific analysis set the seal of approval. Both taken together furnish ample basis for a theoretical treatment of the payment of public debts."

Rouse, Adelaide L. Wendover House. Phil., The American S. S. Union, [1892.] c. 4–269 p. D. cl., $1.

A fine and spacious mansion is Wendover House, full of ancient grandeur and family memories, but dim and gloomy till it is brightened by the presence of little Paul, a waif who comes mysteriously into the home, bringing to light an old love and an old quarrel. Miss Wendover is a forbidding recluse, cold as an iceberg till thawed by the witchery of the child who alone has the key to her heart. Life in the Wendover house is portrayed in the words of its several actors, who tell their stories frankly.

Rouse, Lydia L. Ebb and flow. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 329 p. D. cl., 90 c.

The moral is that joy and sorrow alternate in life as constantly as the "ebb and flow" of the tide. The story is of Jessie Laidlaw's early orphanage, her childhood at Grandfather Kenyon's, her courtship and marriage, and the sorrows and joys incidental to an eventful life. The scene is Scotland.

A picture of American life as it impresses an enthusiastic Frenchman. The writer has evidently travelled throughout the United States. His opinions have been founded on his own unguided observations, and some of his comments on the mental, moral, social, political and industrial peculiarities of America will have the spice of novelty to the native-born who have not yet acquired some of the facts here furnished them.

George Mason settled after his mariage on the banks of the Potomac, and became the intimate friend of Washington, to whom he was a valuable adviser and for whom he drafted the "non-importation resolutions" which the latter presented to the Virginia assembly, and procured their adoption, 1769. One of these resolutions pledged the Va. planters to purchase no slaves imported after Nov. 1 of that year. In 1775 he was a member of the Virginia Convention, and declined an election to the Continental Congress. In May, 1776, he drafted the "Declaration of Rights" and the "Plan of Government," which were adopted June 12 and 29. As a member of the convention for framing the Federal Constitution, 1787, he proposed that the election for President should be direct and for a single term of seven years.

The far-reaching effects upon the home life of England of her rule in India are made clear in a strong story. Helen Treveryan, the child of English parents, is born in India, returns after some years of schooling in England, marries a gay, selfish but affectionate British cavalry officer, is left widowed with a baby after an Indian uprising in 1879, returns to England and feels all the drawbacks of both the English and Indian modes of living. A pretty romance conveys some important truths.

Contains, in revised form, a series of lectures on representative modern thinkers and problems, with suggestion of the author's own philosophical views. These lectures were given in Boston, New York and Cambridge, and two of them were printed in the Atlantic Monthly. Dr. Royce discusses the views held by Spinoza, Kant, Fichte, Hegel and Schopenhauer; the doctrine of evolution, the outer and inner worlds, and their meanings, natural law, freedom, optimism, pessimism and moral order. A book of unusual range and grasp of thought intended for all intelligent readers.

"The preparation of this book was begun with the purpose of making each selection a representation of Mr. Ruskin's two-fold work, as the greatest of art critics and as a master of ethics. This purpose has not been strictly adhered to, but the drift of the book as a whole, and most of the selections, will be found to bear directly on the fundamental principle of all Mr. Ruskin's criticism, that art is inseparably connected with character and conduct or morality, and that all great art rests upon a basis of what is intrinsically good."—Preface.

The heroine is a married lady of twenty-six, who drifts out to sea in an open boat from a little English sea-coast village. She is picked up after some days by a French ship, but owing to an injury her head has received she has lost her memory and cannot tell who she is. Many thrilling adventures follow, and several years elapse before her memory is restored and she is returned to her husband and children.

Russell, W. Clark. A marriage at sea. Chic., Donohue, Henneberry & Co., [1892.] 172 p. il. D. (Dearborn ser., no. 80.) pap., 25 c.

The story opens with the midnight elopement of a young English girl from her Boulogne boarding-school. Her lover takes her to his yacht, in which they propose to make a brief cruise, hoping by this escapade to force a consent to their marriage. A heavy storm wrecks the yacht; the eloping couple are rescued by an outward bound steamer, and, taking advantage of a little-known provision of the Shipping Act, are married by the shipmaster, thus cutting the Gordian knot of opposition to their union.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. The Duchess of Angoulême and the two restorations: tr. by Ja. Davis. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 5+403 p. por. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

Continues the life of the daughter of Louis XVI. The first scene is where she returns to Paris with her uncle, who becomes Louis XVIII.; after a brief reign the new king is driven from Paris by the news of Napoleon's escape from Elbe. The second restoration is marked by Louis XVIII.'s second return to Paris after the battle of Waterloo. The duchess accompanies him, but is more austere, more sorrowful and more distrustful of her followers than ever before. Thus the reader leaves her, with the shadow of the vengeance of the new government upon the Imperialists darkening her life, and her popularity on the wane before the rising star, the young Duchess of Berry.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. The Duchess of Berry and the court of Charles X. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 5+305 p. por. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

Opens with the accession of the brother of Louis XVIII. to the French throne; he is known in history as Charles X. Again the Duchess of Berry is the central figure of a court and surrounded by friends and admirers, with little fear of what the future holds for herself or her son. The chief incidents of the volume are the entry of Charles X. into Paris; the funeral of Louis XVIII., the coronation of Charles X., and reentrance into Paris, the jubilee of 1826, the Mary-Stuart ball, etc., etc. Accounts are given of the Orleans family, of the household of the Dauphin and Dauphiness, of that of the Duchess of Berry, of the Theatre of Madame, etc.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. The Duchess of Berry and the Court of Louis XVIII.; tr. by Eliz. Gilbert Martin. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 5+301 p. por. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

The Princess Marie Caroline of Naples became, upon her marriage with the Duke of Berry, the central figure of the French court during the reigns of both Louis XVIII. and Charles X. This volume, like the preceding ones of the series, while largely biographical, presents vivid pictures of the times. The chief events it chronicles are the marriage of Marie Caroline, the assassination of her husband the Duke of Berry, and the birth of her son, the Duke of Chambord, and the death of Louis XVIII., the old king having expired Sept. 12, 1824. The other two volumes of this group will deal with the Duchess of Berry and the court of Charles X., and the Duchess of Berry and the revolution of July, 1830.

Saint-Amand, Imbert de. The youth of the Duchess of Angoulême; tr. by Eliz. Gilbert Martin. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 6+316 p. por. D. (Famous women of the French court.) cl., $1.25.

The daughter of Louis XVI., though always austere, is shown to have been full of generous aspirations and patriotic sentiments. Her heroism was grave and religious; she was like a saint. She personified the sorrows and catastrophes of royalty at the beginning of the Restoration. This volume opens in the Prison of the Temple on the day when Marie Antoinette, leaving her daughter behind her, departed to the Conciergerie; it ends the tale at Goritz, in the chapel of the Franciscans, on the day when the Count of Chambord, buried by the side of Charles X. and the Duke and Duchesse of Angoulême, bore the white flag like a shroud into his tomb. The ideas, hatreds and prejudices of the Restoration are clearly detailed.

A story of Devon, England. It tells of a long engagement between a man and a woman much his senior. The man goes to India as a missionary and on his return finds his betrothed aged and faded; his heart wanders to her young and beautiful sister, who flies from her home rather than make her sister unhappy. It is then supposed the minister has murdered her and he is tried for his life. The elder woman's unselfish devotion to both parties is very beautiful.

St. Felix, Marie. A little game with destiny. N. Y., Saalfield & Fitch, 1892. c. 152 p. D. pap., 50 c.

The girl who plays "the little game with destiny" confides her repulsive history to the pages of her journal. She is but sixteen when her story begins, and for several years afterwards leads a dual life. To her parents, rich Boston people of social importance, she is an innocent school-girl pursuing her studies. To a certain fast set she is "Mrs. Gammell," the mistress of an elderly married man who has ruined her, and a reckless drinker and gambler. Her career henceforth is a downward one to the end, no detail of which is spared the reader. The story is said to be "a vivid picture of what is happening about us every week in the year."

As the Roman senate accorded the title of imperator to the heirs of Julius, his assassination is considered as the passing of the republic and the foundation of imperial Rome. In the succession of the Cæsars, Augustus is seen as the first magistrate, Tiberius as the first citizen, Caligula as the first emperor, and so the entire line, which dies with Nero, is viewed in the light of individual and dominant vices and virtues and as contributors to Rome's greatness. Her downfall is traced in Commodius' reign. The condition of Rome during five centuries of glory is shown.

Schoenhof, J. The economy of high wages: an inquiry into the cause of high wages and their effect on methods and cost of production; with introd. by T: F. Bayard. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 18+414 p. D. (Questions of the day ser., no. 72.) cl., $1.50.

The author, late U. S. Consul, was commissioned by the Department of State in 1887 to make an intelligent study and personal examination of those industrial centres of Europe where technical education had been most highly developed and had proved itself to be productive of the highest economy and best results. The report of his investigations refutes the theory that a human being is a mere machine, and proves that the cheapest labor is the labor that is most productive, and that "the more the forces of cultivated intelligence, conscientiousness and hopefulness infuse themselves into human industry, the more abundant and valuable are the results."

Stories which have appeared in Harper's Weekly, Peterson's Magazine and Texas Siftings. Besides the one which gives title to the volume are: A romance of the Big Horn; A daphne of the foot-hills; The sheriff of Oskaloo; "Yaller-bird" and Yaller-bird's Christmas turkey.

Seelye, Elizabeth Eggleston. The story of Columbus; il. by Allegra Eggleston; ed. with an introd. by E: Eggleston. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 12+303 p. il. D. (The delights of history ser.; ed. by E. Eggleston.) cl., $1.75.

The first volume of a series to be prepared by the same author, artist and editor, which will present not only the stories of great lives, but also the coloring and interesting details of the times and environments of their subjects. There is no attempt made here to discuss the pros and cons of debated points in Columbian history. Careful use has been made of leading authorities. The personal coloring is chiefly derived from the curious researches of Harrisse and the local descriptions from the work of the antiquary Staglieno. The narrative conforms strictly to facts, though related with enthusiasm and made delightful for the general reader. The artist has gathered material for her illustrations from many well-known pictures, chiefly in private collections

Sergeant, Adeline. Sir Anthony's secret; or, a false position. N. Y., J: A. Taylor & Co., [1892.] c. '91. 528 p. D. (Broadway ser., no. 6.) pap., 50 c.

A Scotch marriage to a woman far his inferior socially, was the secret of Sir Anthony's life. After the poor woman dies her two children live in Sir Anthony's house, and are supposed by some to be his wards, by others his illegitimate children. A second marriage to a woman of position, from whom he preserves his secret, complicates matters, and after her own children are born and she begins to suspect her boy may not inherit the title, she does not hesitate to poison Sir Anthony.

Sergeant, Adeline. The story of a penitent soul. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 2–299 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 194.) cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

Stephen Dart only learns when he reaches manhood that the woman he had always called "Aunt Grace" is his mother, and that he is an illegitimate child. This information is imparted to him at his mother's grave, his whole after life being colored with the bitter disgrace. He becomes a minister after a varied and sad experience with the world, and drifts into a disgraceful love affair, becoming in his turn the father of an illegitimate child. His penitence and sad ending are strongly pictured.

The story of Wyclif was rewritten for this series, with the aid of a few fresh facts and side-lights to develop and illustrate his character, and with the aim "of doing something to popularize the picture of John Wyclif as an Oxford schoolman, and the picture of the schoolmen in general as pioneers of the reformation of religion and the revival of learning."

Sermon Bible (The): Acts vii.–1 Corinthians xvi. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1892. 4+394 p. D. cl., $1.50.

This series of volumes, "The sermon Bible," embraces in convenient form the essence of the best homiletic literature of this generation. See notice, "Weekly Record," P. W., Feb. 21, [995,] and Sept. 12, [1024,] 1891, under previous volumes of series.

Sermons to young men. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1892.] 104 p. S. cl., 40 c.

Four sermons which were preached during Advent, 1890, at King's College chapel, in connection with the London Diocesan Council. The first, The secret voice, is followed by The religious duty of thought, by Bishop Alfred Barry; Christian strength, by H: Ware, D.D.; The joy of the Lord, by Canon H: Scott Holland.

Sexton, S:, M.D., and Duane, Alex., M.D. Deafness and discharge from the ear; the modern treatment for the radical cure of deafness, otorrhœa, noises in the head, vertigo and distress in the ear. N. Y., J. H. Vail & Co., 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 3–89 p. il. D. cl., 50 c.

The purpose of the work is to answer inquiries as to the methods of modern aural treatment. It is largely based on a paper read before the Tenth International Medical Congress, held in Berlin in 1890, and an article that appeared in the Archives of Otology, April, 1891. The theories introduced are progressive, and are presented with a view of showing by comparison the advantages of operation over former mode of treatment. Some histories of cases are included.

Seymour, G: Franklin. An open letter to the Rt. Rev. William C. Doane (Bishop of Albany) in reference to the consecration of the Rt. Rev. Dr. Brooks (Bishop of Massachusetts) by the Bishop of Springfield (Ill.), [Milwaukee, Wis., The Young Churchman Co., 1892.] c. 6+148 p. O. pap., 50 c.

This arraignment of the bishops who voted for Dr. Phillips Brooks and approved of his consecration as Bishop of Massachusetts on October 14, 1891, is addressed to the Bishop of Albany because "you commend yourself to me as the one of our brethren whom I ought, without any hesitation, to associate with myself before the public in the statement which follows." Bishop Seymour claims that Bishop Brooks "is as to faith in Jesus Christ an Arian of some sort, as to man's natural condition a Pelagian, and as to church polity a Congregationalist," and he therefore opposed his consecration.

Shackford, C. Chauncy. Social and literary papers. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 4–299 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Essays prepared for and read before various literary clubs, chiefly in Boston and vicinity. While they were in process of printing the author died, and his work was carried on under the editorial supervision of A. W. Stevens, of the University Press, who has aimed, as far as possible, to carry out what he believes to be the design of Mr. Shackford. The articles are entitled: Æschylus on some modern social problems; A satirist in the second century; A sceptic in the eighteenth century; Nemesis in Greek tragedy; The Pope in "The ring and the book;" Browning's "In a balcony;" The Greek comedy of manners; Plato's republic; Aristotle's politics; Social progress; Social plans and problems; Social tendencies; The nation as an orgauism in Shakespeare: Tbe common reason in social reforms; History as development.

Shahan, T: J., D.D. The Blessed Virgin in the Catacombs. Balt., Md., J: Murphy & Co., 1892. 2–80 p. il. D. cl., net, $1.

The author has collected the most reliable results of modern study on the early veneration of the Blessed Virgin, as revealed by a long and minute examination of the Roman catacombs. He treats of the representations of the Virgin on the sarcophagi or splendid marble tombs, on gilded glasses, and in the numerous frescoes or wall-paintings of the catacombs, and presents a series of monuments from the first to the fifth century which demonstrate that the veneration of the Virgin Mary is an heirloom of tbe Roman Church. He also treats of the famous mosaics of the Blessed Virgin in the Basilica of Saint Mary Major, Rome, executed 432–40.

Sharpless, I: English education in the elementary and secondary schools. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 10+193 p. D. (International education ser., no. 22.) cl., $1.

Dr. Sharpless is president of Haverford College, Penn. The greater part of the winter of 1890-91 was spent by him in England in visiting schools of various kinds, in collecting educational literature and in conversing with school and university men. Believing that there is in America great ignorance of the present condition of English education, he has briefly summarized the results of his investigations and presents them in this volume. In one chapter the author discusses the great endowed schools of England—Eton, Rugby, Harrow, Winchester, etc.—which he believes deserve the most careful study on the part of American high-school teachers. He found great advances in all English schools since 1870.

Shaw, Clara S. Weeks, comp. Text-book of nursing, for the use of training-schools, families and private students. 2d ed., rev. and enl. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. '85, '92. 2-391 p. il. D. cl., $1.75.

Although the purpose is the same as that of the first edition published about six years ago, the subject-matter has been revised to meet the requirements of modern surgery and medicine. Hence additional chapter on gynecology, with the most approved methods for trained nurse or amateur. When used as a text-book it should be preceded or accompanied by an elementary course in anatomy or physiology.

Shaw, E: R. English composition by practice. N. Y., H: Holt & Co., 1892. c. 203 p. il. D cl., 75 c.

"This work is arranged aloug two parallel lines--first, a study, by meaus of observation, comparison and inference of the principles generally observed by good writers: and, second, constant practice in connected composition. The work in composition is so designed that the pupil may apply his knowledge of priuciples as soon as gained, and at the same time acquire those valuable qualities of writing—unity and fluency."—Preface.

Sheldon, C: M. Richard Bruce; or, the life that now is. Bost., Congregational S. S. and Pub. Soc., [1892.] c. 4-355 p. il. D. cl , $1.50.

The author pictures the effect of a great spiritual re ival upon the social life of Chicago. In giving this picture he brings in a group of four very interesting men. Richard Bruce, the hero, is a young man just out of college, and an author of ideals so high that he prefers to shovel coal rather than write sensational stories. His chum and devoted friend, Tom Howard, is a reporter upon a daily paper. It is Tom's conversion which marks the beginning of the great revival.

Letters written for the Buffalo Courier during a hasty Continental tour taken in the summer of 1890. They portray some of the author's fellow-passengers on the Majestic, and describe Irish and Scotch scenery with that of many countries, with characteristic sights, especially the delights of Paris and the play of Oberammergau, as it appealed to Miss Sheldon. In the descriptive text more ground is gone over than was covered in the Courier letters.

This new edition of Shelley is especially noteworthy in its literary form. It contains a number of poems which are not included in any English edition, for although Shelley's grandson allowed Mr. Dowden to print certain poems, he would not permit him to add them to his edition of Shelley's works; and no later editor has been more fortunate. Mr. Woodberry has made the text as accurate as care and skill can make it; he has taken scrupulous pains that every poem is correctly produced, and supplies such variorum and other notes as are necessary. His Memoir of Shelley is one of the most valuable contributions to the literature devoted to this poet. Mr. Woodberry has been extremely fortunate in obtaining the assistance and good-will of one of the Shelley family in the preparation of his work. The mechanical features of the Centenary ed. are very much the same as those of the Riverside editions of Lowell, Whittier and Longfellow.

By means of the camera not only are the renowned works of art and nature reproduced, but characteristic views of remote peoples, customs and lands are faithfully portrayed. Each picture is accurately described in brief text. As it is the aim of the collection to bring out the features of a continental tour for those who are not enabled to take the trip, continuity of scene is observed as far as possible. The line of travel is eastward in Europe, Asia, Africa, North and South America, etc.

Shiells, Rob. The story of the token, as belonging to the sacrament of the Lord's supper. N. Y., J: Ireland, [1892.] c. 6+170 p. S. cl., $1.

The token was usually a small piece of lead, marked with some device referring to the congregation which owned it, which, in the Scotch Presbyterian Church, was handed to communicants the day before the sacrament was administered, and by which they were entitled to approach the table. The custom is supposed to have originated in the Early Church, when it was necessary to guard against those who came as disturbers and persecutors into the meetings of the first Christians. This little book gives a detailed historical account of the custom and its workings, and pictures of many tokens bearing significant devices.

Shindler, Rev. Rob. From the usher's desk to the Tabernacle pulpit: the life and labors of Charles Haddon Spurgeon. N. Y., A. C. Armstrong & Son, 1892. c. 12+316 p. pors. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The writer's personal knowledge of Mr. Spurgeon dates back to the year 1855, just after his settlement in London. This book was all ready, and had been read and approved by Mr. Spurgeon before his final illness made it advisable to delay the publication. The history of the last hours and the funeral were at once added after the preacher's death, on January 31, at Mentone. Contains full description of the various charities connected with the Tabernacle and of Mrs. Spurgeon's Book-Fund. Many portraits are given. Full index.

Slosson, Annie Trumbull. Aunt Liefy; il. by G. F. Randolph. N. Y., A. D. F. Randolph & Co., [1892.] c. 4–50 p. il. D. cl., 60 c.

Liefy was a contraction for the name Relief. The story tells of an incident in Miss Relief Stapleton's life, which transformed her suddenly from a hard-featured, irreligious and selfish woman into the kindly personage called Aunt Liefy.

Slosson, Annie Trumbull. The heresy of Mehetabel Clark. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 2+103 p. S. cl., 75 c.

Mehetabel Clarke lived in a peaceful nook of the Landaff valley, northern New England. Previous to a serious illness she worshipped God in the rigid and narrow way of her Puritan ancestry. With Mehetabel's slow recovery, however, she gains a new and unorthodox religion and an illusion, while at the same time she arouses the ire of her townsfolk. A pathetic last scene incites both speculation and interest.

Smith, Mary P. Wells. More good times at Hackmatack. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 277 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

Carries on the story of "Jolly good times at Hackmatack," and sets forth the further doings of Parson Strong's children. Opens with the spring in New England of fifty years ago; the incidents are the gathering of maple sap; moving the meeting-house, making hay, going a fishing, nutting, etc.

Smith, Saqui, (pseud.) Back from the dead: a story of the stage. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 4+185 p. nar. D. (Unknown lib., no. 12) cl., 50 c.

About 1812 Jack and Harry Preston, brothers, were members of the Howbridge Royal Shakespearian Company. In the Spring of that year, while the company was playing in Lincoln, England, the Prestons became involved in a quarrel over an actress. Directly following this Harry disappeared and Jack was tried, convicted, and sentenced to be hung for the murder of his brother. The thread of the narrative then is taken up by other actors, and results in a story of dramatic scene and phenomenal incident. Medical science plays an important part in the history of the hero.

Snedeker, Florence Watters. A family canoe-trip. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 3+137 p. il. T. (Harper's black and white ser.) cl., 50 c.

The story of a family's summer outing. The trip is mostly made in a canoe, which is sometimes towed by a canal, sometimes paddled by the occupants; at other times the canoe is carried by the canal-boat, or in a wagon over difficulties between stations. The ground covered is from New York to Glens Falls, and through Lake George and Lake Champlain to Millsborough Point. Many delightful days are spent in camp on shore, and some useful and valuable hints are given to others who wish to go and do likewise. The illustrations are made from photographs taken during the trip.

Snow, Alvin L. Songs of the White Mountains, and other poems. Creston, Ia., The Creston Gazette Pub. House, 1892. c. 6+113 p. O. cl., $1.25.

The majority of these verses treat of the grandeur of mountain scenes and other wonders of nature, although there are a few pathetic poems and several national odes included in the collection.

Snow, Freeman. Cabinet government in the United States. Phil., American Acad. of Political and Social Science, [1892.] 13 p. O. (Publications of The American Acad. of Political and Social Science, no. 60.) pap., 15 c.

A criticism of the article, "Congress and the Cabinet," which formed the number for November, 1891, of these publications. The writer thinks it wiser to run all the risks of the evils of popular government than to put too much power in the hands of the Executive Department.

Sotheran, C: Horace Greeley and other pioneers of American socialism. N. Y., The Humboldt Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 14+343 p. D. (Social science lib., no. 9.) pap., 35 c.

The work is neither strictly biographical nor distinctively sociological, but both. Horace Greeley is considered as a representative American socialist for the purpose of making clear facts of sociology, which, the author claims, to carry out this idea, is a comparatively unknown science. Greeley's contemporaries, later-day political reformers, notable authors and prominent capitalists, with political methods, are introduced. Among these are William Lloyd Garrison, Wendell Phillips, Ralph Waldo Emerson, Edward Bellamy, the Vanderbilts and Jay Gould. The abolition movement is discussed.

Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. 488 p. 12°, cl., $2.25; mor., $2.75.

The Mills Professor of Philosophy in the University of California has enlarged the work, which has been before the public for nearly twenty years, almost one-third, keeping strictly to Mr. Soule's plan. This was to make an alphabetical list of all the more important words in the language, with their various meanings or shades of meaning set down under them, each followed by its appropriate synonymes. Many new words have been taken into the English language during the last score of years, and these Dr. Howieson has carefully collected.

Gaillot, Parisian banker, and Severin, Provincial manufacturer, live in fiction for the evident purpose of showing the power of money in the contest of money against man. The point is made by making these rivals in trade. On their action is founded a novel in which the issues are a social downfall and a pathetic love-story.

Sparhawk, Frances C. Onoqua. Bost., Lee & Shepard, [1892.] c. '92. 4+263 p. D. (Good Company ser., no. 18.) pap., 50 c.

The story was originally published as a serial in the Congregationalist. Onoqua, the heroine, is a young Indian girl who leaves the reservation to attend an Eastern school. In her history is pictured the life of the girls of her race, some of the indignities which the white man heaps upon the Indian are defined, and the action of the Indians under the present condition of things is seen. The novel aims to awaken an interest in the Indian problem

Spear, Mary A. Leaves and flowers: or, plant studies for young readers. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1892. c. 8+103 p. il. S. bds., 30 c.

A series of supplementary lessons, every one of which presents an obvious fact in descriptive botany. These facts are given in short, easy sentences for the purpose of stimulating thought and investigation, and they are accompanied with pictures of common specimens in plant life. The plan is to use specimens represented in pictures, or something of the same nature, in conjunction with the studies in order to arouse the perceptive faculties of the pupils.

Spectator, [by Addison and Steele.] Selections. N. Y., E: P. Dutton & Co., 1892. c. 11+410 p. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The editor hopes to increase the scope of Addison and Steele by presenting those of their essays which he believes will at once interest and instruct the mass of readers. Essays which are obsolete, purely local or broadly expressed are eliminated from this collection.

Part 4, "Justice," the first part of volume 2, was issued last year. See notice P. W., "Weekly Record," August 8, 1891, [1019.]

Spencer, Herbert. Social statics. Abridged and rev. ed. [Also,] The man versus the state. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 420+8 p. O. cl., $2.

"Social statics" was first published in 1850. To the successive editions of the work Herbert Spencer prefixed the statement that some of the doctrines now needed qualification, but that he was not yet ready to make the required changes. In spite of repeated warnings, persistent quotation was made of views which he had abandoned, and ten years ago Mr. Spencer stopped the sale of his book in England. He has now reviewed his work with special reference to the rights of individuals and the duty of the state. Mr. Spencer has secured an American copyright for his new volume.

*Spender, J. A. The state and pensions in old age; with introd. by Arthur H. D. Acland. N. Y., imported by C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. D. (Social science ser.) cl., $1.

Sprague, Rev. F. M. Socialism from Genesis to Revelation. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 22+493 p. D. cl., $1.75.

The writer is convinced that some form of Christian Socialism affords the only basis of peace between the hostile forces of society. He traces the present social movement known as socialism, "from Genesis to Revelation," that is, from its origin and history to "its outlook and prophecy." He considers the objections urged against it, and shows its advantages. He believes it rests upon the soundest philosophy and upon the most approved principles of social utility and justice. He also devotes some pages to suggestions as to the mode of introducing socialism and the proper attitude to maintain towards social reform. The "Socialism" the writer advocates is "the socialization of industry"—not the division of private property.

Srygley, F. D. Seventy years in Dixie: recollections. sermons and sayings of T. W. Caskey and others. Nashville, Tenn., Gospel Advocate Publishing Co., 1891. c. 400 p. il. D. cl., $2.

Besides being a life of T. W. Caskey, a southern preacher and politician, the volume presents various odd phases of southern life as they have existed in the recollection of the writer. The following topics, taken from the table of contents, will give some idea of the nature of the book: "An old-time meeting;" "An old backslider;" "Attacked by wolves;" "Black mammies;" "Coon skins;" "Carding and spinning;" "Daniel Boon's gun;" "Eating a cat;" "Forests and canebrakes;" "Johnnycakes;" "Log-rolling;" "Marks of the tomahawk," etc.

Staal, Marguerite Jeanne Cordier De Launay, (Baronne) de. Memoirs; from the French by Cora Hamilton Bell; il. with etchings by Adolph Lalauze. [Edition Jouaust.] N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. 2 v., 211; 3+207 p. D. pap., net, $10.

The writer of these memoirs is often called in history and literature Madame de Staal-Delaunay, to distinguish her more completely from Madame de Staël-Holstein. She was born in Paris in 1684 and died in 1750. Her memoirs appeared about five years after her death, and have often since been reprinted. They relate with much frankness and humor her own discomforts at Sceaux in the household of the Duchesse du Maine, where she filled various positions from femme de chambre to companion to the Duchesse. The humors of the "court of Sceaux" are also vividly depicted. These two pretty books were printed for Dodd, M. & Co. by the celebrated Imprimerie, Jouaust of Paris, and contain all the beautiful etchings of the French edition, which are set in the text, which is finely printed on Holland paper, with uncut edges.

Stables, Gordon, M.D. Born to command: a tale of the sea and of sailors; il. by W. H. Overend. N. Y., E. & J. B. Young & Co., [1892.] 533 p. il. D. cl., $2.

According to Captain Brebner, an old sailor, Roland Adair was born to command because of his stability of character. This assertion is verified in a story of adventure on both sea and land. Among the notable incidents in the hero's career is his winning of a sword, a battle for life, the capture of a Barracoon, the discovery of a mysterious island and a romantic love-affair.

Staffe, Baroness. My lady's dressing-room; adapted from the French, with introd. and additions, by Harriet Hubbard Ayer. N.Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 12+430 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

Though primarily intended for Frenchwomen, this volume will be a help to many women who know that beauty is the great secret of success. There are chapters on the dressing-room, the bath-room, general care of the body, the face, hair, mouth, voice, eyes, nose, ear, hand, foot, mysteries of the toilet, obesity and leanness, and advice and recipes of all kinds. Women are specially counselled to keep themselves beautiful for their husbands, and to guard their dressing-room secrets carefully.

A handsome new edition on larger paper, with seven full-page illustrations reproduced from etchings, thirteen full-page photographs and numerous cuts. Rich binding of white and violet, stamped with gold; slip covers of violet. See notice of first edition in "Weekly Record," P. W., Dec. 15, 1888, [881.]

Stanton, E:, (pseud.) Dreams of the dead. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. 3-268 p. D. (Good company ser., no. 15.) $1; pap., 50 c.

According to the author the dead dream, and these visions take astral form. It is also permitted the living soul to take astral flight. Hence the novel is based upon the hero's visitation of spiritual realms. His experiences are varied and weird, and cover phenomena of psychology, mind-reading and hypnotism. Life and death are viewed in a new light in this novel.

Stapleton, Patience. Babe Murphy. Chic., Morrill, Higgins & Co., 1892. c. '90. 2–280 p. il. D. (Idylwild ser., v. 1, no. 3.) pap., 50 c.

Babe, or Beatrice Murphy, was the daughter of a Colorado miner, Con Murphy, who had been defrauded out of his mine, "The Maid of Eriu," by Lawyer Beach. Con swore that he would be revenged, but his love for the lawyer's wife, and her love for him, prevented the fulfilling of this oath. A sudden exposure of the guilty pair is followed by an elopement and tragedy. By the author of "Kady." The story is brought out in the Western experiences of a New England school "marm."

Stedman, Edmund Clarence. The nature and elements of poetry. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 14+338 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

This series of lectures, although now somewhat revised and extended, formed the initial course as delivered in 1891, of the Percy Turnbull Memorial Lectureship of Poetry, at Johns Hopkins University. The lectureship was founded by Mr. and Mrs. Lawrence Turnbull to commemorate the name of their son, who died in 1887, in his ninth year. In conformity with the terms of the gift a course of lectures is to be delivered annually by some maker or critical student of poetry. "I have thought it appropriate," says Mr. Stedman, "that an opening course upon this foundation should relate to the absolute nature of the art which future lecturers will consider more in detail with respect to its technical laws, varied forms and historic illustrations. Hence these pages treat of the quality and attributes of poetry itself, of its sources and efficacy, and of the enduring laws to which its true examples ever are conformed."

Steele, Frances Mary, and Adams, Elizabeth Livingston Steele. Beauty of form and grace of vesture. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. c. 231 p. il. D. cl., $1.75.

A small part of the material in this volume has been already published in Harper's Bazar. It consists of a series of chapters entitled: hindrances to the pursuit of beauty; plain words to plain people; true standards of beauty; fair endowments; muscular symmetry and fine condition; immediate helps; grace of design; art principles applied to costume; beauty of material; beauty of color, from youth to age; models, help for the future, etc. The authors say, "We have chosen to win, if possible, pilgrims into the right way by offering ideals the successful imitation of which necessarily includes health." They are both artists, and entirely practical in their suggestions of artistic costumes.

Stevens, G: B. The Pauline theology: a study of the origin and correlation of the doctrinal teachings of the Apostle Paul. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 11+383 p. O. cl., $2.

This volume inquires into the genesis of Paul's leading thoughts, so far as their origin may be the subject of historical inquiry, defines critically their content and relation to each other, and thus presents a systematic account of his teaching upon the great themes which he considers. The author aims to aid the reader in determining how far that set of convictions which he so firmly cherished and defended furnishes the materials for a theological system. He discriminates strictly between what Paul taught and the inferences that have been drawn from his doctrines. The writer is Professor of New Testament Criticism at Yale University. Select bibliography. Indexes.

Stevens, Mary Fletcher. By subtle fragrance held. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893 [1892.] c. 2–206 p. D. cl., $1.

A love-story of American home-life, showing the development of a warm and loving nature in an apparently proud, capricious society girl who falls under the restful influence of a quiet country home.

Stevenson, Rob. L: Across the plains: with other memories and essays. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 6+317 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Sidney Colvin, at Mr. Stevenson's request, made the selection of papers embraced under this title: they had appeared at different times in Fraser's, Longman's, Scribner's and the Magazine of Art. "Across the plains," written in 1879, purports to be leaves from the note-book of an emigrant between New York and San Francisco: "The old Pacific capital" (1880) relates to Monterey; "Fontainebleau, village communities of painters," is dated 1882; these are followed by the "'Epilogue to 'An inland voyage,'" "Random memories," "The lantern-bearers," "A chapter on dreams," "Beggars" and "A Christmas sermon."

Stevenson, Rob. L: A child's garland of songs gathered from "A child's garden of verses" by Rob. Louis Stevenson, and set to music by C. Villiers Stanford. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 4+33 p. il. Q. pap., 75 c.: cl., $1.25.

Stevenson, Rob. L: A footnote to history: eight years of trouble in Samoa. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 8+322 p. D. cl., $1.50.

The long residence in Samoa of Mr. Stevenson, the author of "Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde," etc., has given him an unusual opportunity to investigate a people little known. In the present volume he gives a history of the internal troubles of the Samoans during the past decade; describes the personalities of the leading chiefs and kings; the dramatic events of the hurricane of March, 1889; and offers a brief sketch of the habits, language, domestic life, laws, etc., the interference of the English and German nations, etc.

Stevenson, Rob. L:, and Osbourne, Lloyd. The wrecker; il. by W: Hole and W. L. Metcalf. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. '91. 5+553 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The scene opens in the Marquesas, where the arrival of an unknown vessel is exciting great wonderment. The curiosity of the idlers is later gratified in the club-room of the Cercle Internationale. The relation of H. Loudon Dodd's experience as the partner of a man who buys wrecks includes much adventure both by land and sea, and gives the personal story of a man who plays many parts.

Stewart, D. D., M.D., and Lawrance, E. S., M.D. Essentials of medical electricity. Phil., W. B. Saunders, 913 Walnut st., 1892. 14–158 p. D. (Saunders' question compends, no. 23.) cl., $1.

The most distinctive points elucidated at great length in the exhaustive works of Erb, De Watterville, V. Ziemssen, Beard, Rockwell and others have been partially digested and an effort made to place them before the undergraduates in such a manner that they may form a general idea of the diagnostic and therapeutic value of electricity. Many students grasp certain points of this subject with peculiar difficulty, and the authors' experience as teachers enables them to judge which points to reiterate in different connections.

For several years the famous American wood-engraver, Timothy Cole, has been contributing these full-page engravings of old Italian masters to the Century Magazine. The sixty-seven engravings are now collected and issued in a handsome book. Each engraving in this collection has been cut by the engraver in the presence of the original. Mr Cole also furnishes brief comments on the paintings reproduced. The runtniugtex is by the art critic and correspondent in Rome of the London Times.

Stock, Sarah Geraldina. The story of Uganda and the Victoria Nyanza mission. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1892.] 4–223 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A detailed history of the Victoria Nyauza mission from its founding in 1876 to the present time, 1892, which reviews the work of Krapf, the pioneer missionary of East Africa, and the efforts of Alexander Mackay, with others famous in the East African movement. Describes the Uganda country, its past and present conditions, the persecution of the missionaries, views its rulers, chiefly King Mtesa, in the light of native religious belief and superstitions, and introduces relative actions of Stanley and Gordon.

Stockton, Frank R. The clocks of Rondaine and other stories; il. by E. H. Blashfield, W. A. Rogers, D. C. Beard and others. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 7+174 p. O. cl, $1.50.

Some quaint conceit is elaborated in each of the seven stories with all the author's characteristic humor. "The clocks of Rondaine" tells of the experience of a girl who tried to make all the clocks in the town keep time with her own; "The curious history of a message" is a tale in which a telephone plays a part; "A fortunate opening" is an account of the adventures of a man and woman on an abandoned steamer; "The Christmas truants;" "The tricycle of the future;" "The accommodating circumstance" and "The great show in Kobol-land" are the other stories.

Stoddard, C: A: Spanish cities, with glimpses of Gibraltar and Tangier. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 9+228 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

The writer is editor of the N. Y. Observer, author of "Across Russia." He travelled with his daughter, and to her the book is dedicated. Among the cities described are Gerona, celebrated for its cathedral; Barcelona, Tarragona, Lerida, Taragoza Madrid, Cordova, Seville, Cadiz, Granada, Malaga and Gibraltar. The travellers also crossed into Tangier, the earliest African town. People, customs, manners, traditions, history, commerce and the political economy of modern Spain are originally discussed.

Stoddard, C: Warren. South-sea idyls. New ed. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. '73, '92. 8+339 p. D. cl., $1.50.

First published in 1873; been long out of print. This new edition is opened with a pleasant letter from W. D. Howells, who characterizes these sketches of people and places in the South Sea as "the lightest, sweetest, wildest, freshest things that ever were written about the life of that summer ocean."

Stoddard, W: O. The battle of New York: a story for all young people. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 4+248 p. il. O. cl., $1.50.

The draft riots, which occurred in New York City, July, 1863, are the culminating scenes in a story of a most exciting period. The youug heroes are a southern boy, who is playing the spy between General Lee and traitors in New York City who only wait an opportunity to betray the government, and a northern boy who is selling newspapers to help his mother while his father is at the front. The boys fraternize during the days New York City is in the hands of the mob and have a thrilling experience. The southern boy's experience at Gettysburg is a vivid piece of description.

Storrs, R: S. Bernard of Clairvaux, the times, the man and his work: an historical study in eight lectures. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1892. c. 13+598 p. O. cl., $2.50.

Bernard of Clairvaux, known to the Christian world as St. Bernard, was born near Dijon, France, in 1091. He became one of the most illustrious Christian teachers and representatives of monasticism in the Middle Ages. He entered the monastery of Citeaux, and in 1115 was chosen to found the new monastery of Clairvaux, with which famous abbey his name is most associated. He inspired the crusade of 1144, which ended disastrously. Dr. Storrs pictures him as an ardent enthusiast, tenacious of friendships, terrible in indignation, fearless in his attacks on popes and emperors. The facts are gathered chiefly from his own works, edited by Mabillon and reprinted in Paris in 1839. Delivered in the Theological Seminary at Princeton on the L. P. Stone Foundation.

Strahan, S. A. K., M.D. Marriage and disease: a study of heredity and the more important family degenerations. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 6+326 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The doctrine of the hereditary transmission of family characters, pathological as well as physiological, has not been accorded, Dr. Strahan states, the general recognition its great importance demands. Believing that the present continuance of transmitted disease is the result of ignorance on the part of the people, he presents in this volume a popular consideration of the laws of heredity in various aspects, especially as they concern the tendency to physical degeneration by ill-assorted marriages.

Strange, Daniel. The farmers' tariff manual; by a farmer. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 13+363 p. D. (Questions of the day ser., no. 71.) cl., $1.25.

"The author has no new theories to advance, no new facts to offer. He has aimed to present in available form such true theories as are accepted by students of economic science, and so much of the false theories regarding tariffs, now popularly current, as the limits of the work allow room to exhibit and refute. An array of historical facts and of statistics is also presented, which may be verified by any one having the facilities, the time and the inclination."—Preface.

Streatfield, Henrietta S. Philip Ross; or, tried by fire. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1892. 128 p. il. 12°, cl., 40 c.

Stredder, Eleanor. The merchant's children: a story for the young. N. Y., T: Nelson & Sons, 1892. 6–249 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.

The merchant is the resident agent of a large London tea-house, who lives with his family on the "English Concession," in Hankow, the great tea-market of China. His children, Greville and Cordelia, are wholesome little people, who adopt a castaway Chinese baby, are spectators of a riot against the "foreign devils," and are captured by river pirates, but who carry themselves pluckily through all their adventures. The story gives an interesting picture of life among the foreign residents and among the queer native population of the Celestial Kingdom.

A young Oxford graduate makes a runaway match with a pretty, ignorant, furious-tempered saddler's daughter. They wander about Italy and Austria-Hungary and finally quarrel once more and separate. Miscarried letters, the greed of ignorant peasants and many complications prevent the husband, who is heir to millions, learning that he has had a child born to him. After seven years he marries happily, and when his son by this marriage is twenty-one he discovers his half-brother in an almost savage state in the mountain wilds of Hungary. The solution of difficulties is ingenious.

Sturgis, Julian. After twenty years, and other stories. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. c. 5+324 p. D. cl., $1.

Eight short stories dealing chiefly with phases of every-day English life. The first, "The philosopher's baby," was published in 1874 in Blackwood's Magazine; it tells amusingly of the commotion created by the advent of that important person. The others—excepting the initial story, now first printed—have appeared in various periodicals. They are: A disappointing boy; An unimportant person; John's hero; Romance of an old don; A mad parson; A child of science; After twenty years.

Sulley, Ja. The human mind: a text-book of psychology. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 2 v., 8°, cl., $5.

Sullivan, F. and I. E. What it cost; or, debtor and creditor. Chic., Laird & Lee, 1891 [1892.] c. '91. 4–451 p. il. D. (Library of choice fiction, no. 36.) pap., 50 c.

The novel opens just after the storming of Fort Sumter. The hero is Will Morris, who enlists as a private in the 7th Iowa. Scenes of army and individual life are blended. Several heart histories with some sad episodes in the lives of soldiers are introduced. The story closes with the presidential campaign of '88. The author shows at what cost the Union was preserved.

Sullivan, J: L. Life and reminiscences of a 19th century gladiator; with reports of physical examinations and measurements; il. by half tone plates and anthropometrical chart by Dudley A. Sargent, M.D. Bost., Ja. A. Hearn & Co., 1892. c. 3–294 p. pors. D. cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

The life of John L. Sullivan, the pugilist, written by himself; contains his opinions of other pugilists he has met, accounts of his meetings with prominent politicians and public men at home and abroad; gives also a history of boxing from the earlier Greek and Roman records to the present time.

Sullivan, Ja. W. A concept of political justice. N. Y., Twentieth Century Pub. Co., 1891 [1892.] 58 p. D. (Unsettled questions, no. 9.) pap., 10 c.

The author endeavors to bring within moderate compass the salient inferences and positions that most nearly accord with the principle exposed. It is intended as a compact source of useful information and as a formulation of thought to be corrected or assented to by those who are discussing the social problem in the light of principle.

*Sullivan, Ja. W. Direct legislation by the citizenship through the initiative and referendum. N. Y., Twentieth Century Pub. Co., 1892. c. 120 p. D. cl., 75 c.; pap., 25 c.

Concisely states the methods of government which place Switzerland in the van of republics. Shows how similar direct legislation is practised in township, county and State governments in this country as well as in national organizations of trade and labor. The author contends that in an extension of this principle lies rescue from evils which threaten the nation's life.

Summer (A) in England: a handbook for the use of American women. [2d ed.] Bost., published by the Women's Rest Tour Assoc., 264 Boylston st., [1892.] 82 p. obl., T. pap., 50 c.

In the spring of 1891 several women, who had made a summer trip across the Atlantic, and discovered that foreign travel was far easier and cheaper than they had imagined, resolved to offer other self-dependent women, who might be deterred from such a journey either by the expense involved or by lack of escort, the results of their own experience. They therefore formed themselves into a society called the Women's Rest Tour Association, which published a handbook of hints and directions called "A summer in England." The second and present edition of this handbook contains, among its new features, an article on University Extension and the advantages for summer study in the universities of England, and a Continental supplement and bibliography.

Suttner, Bertha v. (Baroness). Ground arms: the story of a life; from the German, by Alice Asbury Abbott. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 286 p. D. cl., $1.

In a story which is practically a revolt against war, the author considers the individual claim as represented by the soldier's family stronger than the claims of church and state combined. Therefore, in the record of the sufferings of a woman twice widowed by war is seen some of the causes and effects of the Sardinian and Franco-German wars, with a plea for universal national peace. The scene is Austria. The Baroness von Suttner recently presided at the International Peace Congress held in Rome. The cause of the International Peace Arbitration Association has been one to which she has devoted many years.

Selections of poetry and prose from the best authors, such as Emerson, Lowell, Longfellow, Whittier, Helen Hunt, Jackson and others, grouped under the headings: Life's victories; Death's ministry; Immortality; The family on earth and in Heaven; Eternal goodness; The father's will; Aspiration; The perfect trust.

Sutton, W. S., and Kimbrough, W. H. Primary book. Bost., D. C. Heath & Co., 1892. c. 4+80 p. D. (Pupils ser. of arithmetic.) bds., 25 c.

Swan, Eliza B. The opal queen. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1892. 387 p. D. cl., $1.25.

There seems to be an evident aim in the construction and character development of the story to show the dangers of giving æsthetic culture more prominence than spiritual culture. The scene is in the South. The action is realistic. Elise Archer is the "Opal queen" by virtue of an inheritance of a valuable set of these jewels and the incidents that follow her wearing them.

Swett, Sophie. Flying Hill farm: a story. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4+263 p. il. D. (Harper's young people ser.) cl., $1.25.

An incidental story, in which the chief characters are Phonsie, Cherry, Ben, Dilly Gage and Philander. The three former of these represent the young folks of Flying Hill farm; the two latter are representatives of the Roaring Brook locality. The action of the farm children involves a day in court, a question between Ben and Phonsie, and the educating process of Garibaldi, a pig; that of the Brook children shows the disappointment of Dilly Gage and the suspicions of Philander. A final meeting of these factions ends in a surprise.

Sweyn, Frances. Millicent Simonds; or, through cleansing fires. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., [1892.] c. 3–192 p. il. D. cl., 80 c.

Millicent Simonds was over-sensitive; therefore when she heard of the stigma on the name of Simonds her trouble became almost unbearable. Her subsequent action makes an interesting story, in which it is shown that we become more perfect by being chastened.

Swinburne, Algernon C: The sisters: a tragedy. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 3–126 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The dialogue is blank verse, and tells of the love of Anne and Mabel Dilston, twin sisters, for Reginald Clavering, a brave soldier, but a timid wooer. The subject of his love, however, returns his sentiments and reveals her own in an effective scene, which makes the lovers divinely happy, and Anne correspondingly miserable. The trio are to take part in a play, written by Reggie. Anne's part in this is responsible for an idea, which ends in prompt and tragic action.

Symonds, J: Addington. The life of Michelangelo Buonarroti, based on studies in the archives of the Buonarroti family at Florence; with etched portrait and fifty reproductions of the works of the master. N. Y., C: Scribner's Sons, 1893 [1892.] 2 v., 32+ 469; 8+441 p. O. cl., $12.50.

This life of the great sculptor will probably, on account of the new information it contains, supersede all others. Mr. Symonds, through special permission given him by the Italian government, examined and copied the manuscripts in the Casa Buonarroti at Florence, which had never previously been used by any biographer, and which set at rest many disputed points in Michelangelo's life, especially as to his personal relations with the Marchioness of Pescara and Tommaso Cavalieri. The reproductions of portraits, plans, models, etc., especially of the designs of the frescoes in the Sistine Chapel and the cupola of St. Peter's and the Medicean Tombs, are full of interest. Mr. Symonds' exhaustive studies of the Italian Renaissance make him the highest authority on this subject.

Tait, Ja. Selwin. My friend Pasquale, and other stories. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., 1892. c. 333 p. D. cl., $1.

The initial story deals with the homicidal mania of a man who, while sane, sets to work to unravel a series of mysterious murders committed by himself while insane. The other stories are: The lost wedding-ring; The legend of the Red Moss Rapids; Two ninety-day options; A strange story; Two Christmas eves; Glancing shafts.

Tait, Ja. Selwin. Who is the man?: a tale of the Scottish border. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., 1892. c. '89. 2–294 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Tasma, [pseud. for Mrs. Jessie Couvreur.] The penance of Portia James. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. '91. 293 p. cl., $1.25.

The author of "Uncle Piper of Piper's Hill" has again taken Australian characters to play their parts in a story of artist life. The scenes, however, are chiefly in England and France. Portia James on her wedding-day learns of the faithlessness of her husband, leaves him, supports herself as a model, and finally does penance by taking care of her husband's child at the sacrifice of her life's happiness.

Australia is again made the scene of a novel, by the author of "A Sydney Sovereign," "Uncle Piper of Piper's Hill," etc. Linda Robley is a wayward, beautiful girl, who has been educated in Paris, and has advanced ideas. She marries one man while loving his cousin; then learns to despise her husband on finding he is a coward. Under the influence of a third admirer, her sneers drive her husband to his death. Her remorse and expiation are deep and life-long.

Tennyson, Alfred (Lord.) The death of Œnone. Akbar's dream and other poems. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. c. 4+113 p. D. cl., $1.25.

"In a slender book of one hundred and twelve pages we have the final offering of the master of English song of this century. It is not so great as most of its predecessors, yet the quality of the poems is sufficiently fine to make it worthy of the genius which produced it—the mark of whose individuality is clearly stamped upon it. 'The death of Œnone' is in blank verse and recalls the poet's earlier compositions that deal with similar themes, though it lacks much of their warmth and passion 'Akbar's dream,' also in blank verse, is the longest poem in the volume and is fully annotated by the poet. It contains many fine lines."—The Critic.

Tennyson, Alfred (Lord.) The foresters, Robin Hood and Maid Marian. N. Y., Macmillan & Co, 1892. c. 4+155 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Tennyson describes Robin as the Earl of Huntingdon, outlawed by the Regent Prince John, who covets his lady-love, the fair Maid Marian. The main action takes place in Sherwood Forest, where Robin establishes himself as chief of a freebooting fraternity, and nearly all the ballad characters are introduced—Little John, Friar Tuck, Will Scarlet, and the rest. The play is in four acts, and the plot turns on the misfortunes of Maid Marian's father, Sir Richard Lea, a neighbor of Earl Robin's before the latter was outlawed.

This heart-history of two young Roman noblewomen was enacted about twenty-five years back, immediately after the battles between Church and State that led to the unification of Italy. They are the daughters of a princess of the old school who designs them both for convent life. The eldest receives a brilliant offer of marriage and is allowed to accept it. Her lover loses fortune and the princess-mother again wishes to make her a nun. But Lavinia shows her new independence gained under her liberal lover's influence and defies her mother. Her devoted sister aids and abets her, and when she sees her darling sister happy becomes herself "a bride of the church."

The Touraine country, "the orchard of fair France," is the home of Prosper de la Jugie, a sentimental, poetical fruit-grower, who in his fiftieth year still believes in true love. He refuses a dowry to his niece until she meets the right man, an energetic designer for a large pottery factory. Prosper and his two men friends have interesting conversations on the civilization of the day, spoiled by the excess of its refinement on young people rendered effeminate through a surfeit of good things, and on many telling problems of life in all countries.

This work is of great value to telegraphists, the plates showing in the clearest possible manner the various connections used in modern telegraphy, the authors having adopted the method of showing the different lines in colors. This is the first book published on the subject in which colors are employed, an advantage which will be apparent and which will be appreciated by all those studying the subject.

Thomas à Kempis. Meditations on the life of Christ: tr. and ed. by Archd. Wright and Rev. S. Kettlewell, with preface by the latter. N. Y., E. P. Dutton & Co., 1892. c. 51+378 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The Ven. Archdeacon Wright, of England, and the Rev. S. Kettlewell, who is the leading authority in Europe on all matters relating to Thomas à Kempis and "The Brothers of Common Life," have for the past two years been at work translating and editing this very remarkable treatise, which is quite unknown to the world at large. Its story is ably given in the preface. The Archbishop of Canterbury has read each part of the work as it has come from the printer, and the work is dedicated to him. The preface, by the Rev. S. Kettlewell, endeavors to account for the singular scarcity of this work and gives many interesting reasons for its probable suppression by the Roman Church. He thinks the "De Vita" was suppressed because it seemed to favor the views of the reforming party who were so eager for the revival of true and earnest religion, and also because it was first printed with a treatise by Gerard de Tutphen, who publicly contended that an open Bible should be allowed and the prayers of the church said in the vulgar tongue. It is believed that à Kempis earnestly desired to have this work counted a proper sequel and companion to his "Imitation."

The familiar adventuress, with a history that would seem to place her in the ranks of the middle-aged, but who possesses the fresh and innocent looks of a girl, and also the power to win every man who comes in contact with her, is the central figure—"Old Dacre's darling." She forces her way into a peaceful English home and scatters ruin all around her. After breaking almost all of the commandments she ends her career as a suicide.

Thomas, Miss Margaret. A scamper through Spain and Tangier; il. by the author. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., [1892.] 12+302 p. O. cl., $3.

Miss Margaret Thomas, who wrote and illustrated this work, is an English artist born in Australia who studied art in London, Paris and Rome; her most noted work is in the line of sculpture. With another lady also an artist she made this journey through Spain to study the works of the great Spanish painters. The cities and places visited were: St. Jean De Luz; Burgos Cathedral; Madrid, El Escorial, Toledo, Cordoba and its mosque; Seville, Granada and the Alhambra; Malaga; Gibraltar and galleries and Tangier. The art criticisms are as unconventional as the journey, which is clearly and brightly described.

Thomson, Mary S. Rhythmical gymnastics, vocal and physical. N. Y., Edgar S. Werner, 1892. c. 127 p. D. cl., net, $1.

This book is intended for the use of those in public life as well as of those in private life. It is a presentation of the most modern and advanced theories of vocal development. One of the special features of the book is a complete set of breathing exercises, comprising muscular development, rhythmical breathing accompanied by music, acting upon imagination and automatically imparting the sense of time to tone and movement. The vowel and consonant exercises impart automatically that nice muscular adjustment of the organs of phonation and articulation essential to the refined pronunciation of any language. Other features are the study of bird-notes with their musical scores, and the insistance on the use of stringed instruments for the special training of the ear so as to improve the quality of tone.

Thoreau, H: D. Autumn: from the journal of Henry D. Thoreau; ed. by H. G. O. Blake. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 6+470 p. D. cl., $1.50.

More than ten years have gone by since the first volume—"Spring"—of this series was published. Since then we have had "Summer" and "Winter," the present volume completing the cycle of the seasons. As in the other volumes, it is the life out-doors that is recorded. Thoreau seldom wrote of his material affairs. The sunset, the landscape, the deeds of animals were the things that interested him. No detail of life under a New England's autumn sky was too small for him to notice.

The scene of this allegory is the undiscovered Arctic continent. Here it is represented a strange race is found by a shipwrecked party; the country is beautiful, the people happy and intelligent and the government just and free. The people go through an experience like our late war and the subsequent money difficulties. A crisis in the affairs of the farming population of the Arctic continent serves to point many lessons for our own farmers, and to offer remedies for an improvement of their condition.

"San Salvador" pictures life as the author thinks it ought to be—the book offering an ideal of human existence on earth. The story opens in Venice with the death of wise old Professor Mora, who leaves his granddaughter Tacita alone in the world with an unhappy love affair in her heart. She leaves Venice with her old nurse, and finally drifts to St. Salvador, a Utopian community, where she finds peace. The place is entirely secluded from the world, great simplicity prevails there in life, dress, etc., and the religion is free from superstition and error, "for Christ is king." Miss Tincker wrote "Signor Monaldini's niece" and "The two coronets."

Tinseau, Leon de. Love knows no law; tr. by Camden Curwen. N. Y., Worthington Co., 1892. c. 256 p. il. D. (The fair lib., no. 1.) pap., 25 c.

Albert Count de Senac, while smarting under the effects of a disappointment in love, believed that his vocation was that of a monk, and accordingly entered a convent. After a short novitiate he confessed the error of these views, and left his religious refuge for Cairo, where he meets Thérèse Quilliane, designed by her aunt to become a nun. The result of this meeting is a romantic love affair, in which Thérèse and Albert are hero and heroine.

The theme of Mrs. Toland's poem is Plato's Atlantis, with its tropical splendor, its peace and prosperity. The beauties of the Isle and the semi-mythological character of the subject afford abundant opportunity for illustration. Illustrated by full-page photogravure reproductions of drawings by Bloomer, Weir, Church, Dielman, Jones, Jacacci, Denman, Dumond and Twachtman, and numerous decorative designs throughout the text by A. F. Jacacci. Mrs. Toland is the author of "Eudora," "Legend Laymone," "Tisáyac of the Yosemite," etc.

Tolstoï, Count Alexis. Prince Serebryani: an historical novel of the times of Ivan the Terrible and of the conquest of Siberia; from the Russian, by Jeremiah Curtin. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. c. 25+430 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Sovereign power in Russia reached its climax in the reign of Ivan the Terrible, in the sixteenth century. Tolstoï has made an exhaustive study of the historical data of that age, and has woven the material at his command into a picture of the life and times of this cruel tyrant, which is accurate enough to be of lasting service to the student of Russian history. Believing, like the good Russians of his time, that "the Tsar's will is God's will," Prince Serebryani is torn between his loyalty to his sovereign and the inborn instincts of his chivalrous nature. There is pathetic interest in his fateful love for the fair Selena. Admirably translated, with instructive introductory sketch, by Mr. Curtin.

Mona Maclean, although gifted far beyond her fellow-students in originality of mind and capacity for hard work, fails unaccountably at the medical examination. She decides to wait before trying another term, and goes to live with relations of her mother's who keep a little shop in one of the outskirts of Edinburgh, Scotland. The book is largely devoted to discussions on theories of life and the position of women. Mona loves and marries, and the story closes with a scene showing her position in her husband's home and heart.

Tredwell, Daniel M. A monograph on privately illustrated books: a plea for bibliomania. Flatbush, L. I., Privately printed. [N. Y., W. E. Benjamin,] 1892. c. '91. 5-506 p. O. cl., $5.

The greater part of the work of privately illustrating books in this country has been done in the last fifteen years. The nucleus around which this volume grew was a lecture delivered before the Rembrandt Club, of Brooklyn, December 8, 1880. This lecture, nearly intact, forms the prefatory chapter. The facts were generally taken down in the libraries described with the books to verify them before the writer. Some owners objected to the publicity proposed to be given their collections, and insisted on dictating the descriptions of their books. Special attention has been given to collections outside of New York, Boston, Philadelphia and Chicago. Very handsomely printed and dedicated to John Allen, the first American who indulged in extra illustrating.

Tremain, Mary. Slavery in the District of Columbia: the policy of Congress and the struggle for abolition. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1892. c. 2+100 p. O. (University of Nebraska Seminary papers, no. 2.) pap., $1.

Trent, W: P. William Gilmore Simms. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 8+351 p. por. D. (American men of letters.) cl., $1.25.

This prolific romancer of the South was born at Charleston, South Carolina, on April 17, 1806. The Professor of History in the University of the South represents William Gilmore Simms as a vigorous, hearty man, with a versatile and talented mind, a very large heart, an indomitable will and keen sensibilities. His personality was strong and lovable. The biography gives a picture of the South during the Civil War, and also gives the history of the attempt to establish a Southern sectional literature. Appendix gives a list of writings. Full index.

Embraces practical hints on the power-house and its apparatus, dynamo-motor and line construction; describes car wiring, the trolley apparatus, treats of traction roads and other relative matter; includes general remarks on motor-men, a history of the electric railway, methods of electrically controlling street cars, and considers the electric street railway as an investment. The work is designed for students, and indexed.

Trevert, E: How to make and use induction coils. Lynn, Mass., Bubier Pub. Co., 1892. c. 3-81 p. T. cl., 50 c.

Trollope, Mrs. Frances Eleanor. That wild wheel: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4+410 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

That wild wheel of fortune brings many ups and downs to a great variety of characters. The scene shifts between London and Vevey, Switzerland. An old maiden lady and a bachelor artist, brother and sister, who have devoted their lives to taking care of other people's children, live their lives of perfect unselfishness to the end, bringing happiness into many hearts. The inheritance of a great fortune occupies many possible heirs.

Trowbridge, J: T. Father Brighthopes; or, an old clergyman's vacation. New and rev. ed. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. '53, '92. 2-264 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

In introducing this new edition of one of his earliest and most successful books, Mr. Trowbridge gives a short sketch of his experience in getting the volume before the public. The book has been out of print for some time, but the demand for it has been such that the author has revised it and added new illustrations. Written under the author's pseudonym, "Paul Creyton."

Trowbridge, J: T. The fortunes of Toby Trafford. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 315 p. il. sq. S. cl., $1.25.

Toby Trafford was the son of a former senior member of the firm of Trafford & Tazewell. Although it was expected that Toby would eventually enter this business house in accordance with the wishes of his dead father, the latter was in no hurry to take decisive measures. The unexpected failure of the house, however, complicates matters, and Toby is seen in a menial position until the adventure which makes him once a hero and the pilot of the Queen of the Lake.

Trumbull, H. Clay. The knightly soldier: a biography of Major Henry Ward Camp. New rev. ed. Phil., J: D. Wattles, 1892. c. '65, 92. 16+323+6 p. por. D. cl., $1.50.

Trumbull, M. M., ["Wheelbarrow," pseud.] The free-trade struggle in England. 2d ed., rev. and enl. [Also,] Making scarcity. Chic., Open Court Pub. Co., 1892. c. 2+288+9 p. D. cl., 75 c.; pap., 25 c.

By the free-trade struggle in England is meant the campaign from 1838 to 1846, or from the formation of the Anti-Corn Law League to the final overthrow of the protective system. This book was first published in 1882 and dedicated to John Bright. To keep it abreast of the debate on the issue between free trade and protection, the questions of the hour in the United States, the author has revised it and given some additional facts.

Tuttle, Hudson. The convent of the Sacred Heart. Phil., The Carter Pub. Co., 1892. c. 173 p. D. (Portrait ser., no. 2.) cl., 50 c.; pap., 25 c.

San Alegro is the site of the Convent of the Sacred Heart and the scene of Zelda Joslyn's enforced religious zeal. The story is based on an episode in the life of a young nun. Rather revolting details are entered into, the author claiming that his book is an exposé of Roman Catholic convent life.

Tuttle, Hudson. Life in two spheres. Phil., The Carter Pub. Co., 1892. c. 242 p. D. (Independent ser., no. 1.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Hero and Leon, two mortals happily united in wedlock on earth according to their individual belief, again come into unison after death. A sage in the realm to which they are transported undertakes to make them acquainted with the conditions of their new life, to show them some of the failings of those who are of the earth sphere, and finally brings them into contact with the people of the sphere of light. A novel which is a means of ventilating religious beliefs which incline to the spiritualistic.

Tyndall, J: Fragments of science: a series of detached essays, addresses and reviews. [New rev. and enl. ed.] N. Y., Appleton, 1892. 2 v. 6+452; 3+452 p. D. cl., $4.

The first edition of Prof. Tyndall's "Fragments of Science" was published some twenty years ago as a single volume, which was made up of a score or more of his detached essays, addresses and reviews. The book was afterward revised, some of the papers re-cast, and from time to time new ones added, until the size of the work becoming somewhat unwieldy, the present two-volume edition was decided upon. This contains fifteen additional papers, and represents the author's latest changes and revisions. Uniform with "New fragments" recently issued, the three volumes together including all the occasional writings which their author has decided to preserve in permanent form.

Tyson, Bessie B. Red-letter readings: a series of grouped texts for every day in the year. N. Y. and Chic., Fleming H. Revell Co., 1892. 79 p. 12°, cl., net, 50 c.; pap., net, 25 c.

Underwood, Francis H. Quabbin: the story of a small town; with outlooks upon Puritan life. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 6+376 p. por. il. D. cl., $1.75.

The name "Quabbin" stands for a small town in New England, remote from any political or literary centre. The book is not a history, nor a romance, nor a sheaf of reminiscences, nor a study of social development; but it unites in some measure the elements of all. There is a strong purpose, but the framework is slender. In a series of light sketches are shown the prominent features of the scenery, together with the homely manners and the ruling ideas of the vanishing century. "The rude forefathers of the hamlet" appear in their proper garb, and reveal themselves in their natural speech. The parish ministers are the

Valera, Juan. Don Braulio; from the Spanish of Pasarse de Listo, by Clara Bell. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 2+244 p. D. (Appleton's town and country lib., no. 92.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

Don Braulio Gonzalez accepts a government position in Spain, and finally moves with his wife and her sister to Madrid. Dona Beatriz, the wife, is possessed with great ambitions, to further which she induces Dona Ines to flirt with the Count de Alhedin, whom the sisters first met in the Public Garden. The latter allows herself to be influenced, and the consequences are unforeseen and dramatic. The interest especially centres in the conclusions and final act of Don Braulio.

Valdés, Don Armando Palacio. Faith; from the Spanish by Isabel F. Hapgood. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 2+353 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 119.) pap., 50 c.

Pensascosa in Spain is the scene of the consecration of Gil Lastra. His career as a priest is a remarkable one. He has a short season of success, is chosen with avidity by the fair sex for their confessor, incurs the enmity of some members of the priesthood, makes strenuous effort to subdue analytical and heretical tendencies in his nature, and is finally the unwilling actor in an escapade which helps him to realize that man can only be saved by "Faith."

Van Anderson, Helen. Is it possible: a story of life. Chic., New Era Pub. Co., 1891, [1892.] c. 5–342 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Some of the possibilities of life are brought out in the trials, struggles and doubts of two children, and the power of love in religion is shown. By means of a marital venture of one of these and some strong scenes, the author vents theories about woman's rights and individual expansion.

Van Duzee, I. D. By the Atlantic: later poems. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1892. c. 7+484 p. D. cl., $2.

Van Rensselaer, Mrs. Mariana G., [Mrs Schuyler Van Rensselaer.] English cathedrals; Canterbury, Peterborough, Durham, Salisbury, Lichfield, Lincoln, Ely, Wells, Winchester, Gloucester, York, London; il. by Jos. Pennell. N. Y., The Century Co., 1892. c. '87, '92. 29+395 p. plans, diagrams, Q. cl., $6.

The twelve cathedrals described were chosen partly for their typical importance as buildings and partly because of the length and richness of their lives as cathedral buildings. They are in Canterbury, Peterborough, Durham, Salisbury, Lichfield, Lincoln, Ely, Wells, Winchester, Gloucester, York and London. Professor Freeman has stated that a more representative list of twelve cathedrals could not be made. The work is intended to represent the development of English architecture and the importance of English cathedral establishments. The chapters have been almost rewritten since their first appearance in the Century Magazine. Sumptuously gotten up as regards all details of bookmaking.

Venable, W. H. John Hancock: a memoir with selections from his writings. Cin., O., C. B. Ruggles & Co., (The New American Teachers' Agcy.,) 237 Vine st., 1892. c. 195 p. pors. D. cl., $1.25; subs., $1.

John Hancock was born in the little hamlet of Laurel in Ohio, on February 18, 1825. After his mother's death he was adopted by Mrs. Mary Moore, a woman of wide-reaching intelligence, positive political and social principles, extraordinary energy, warm enthusiasm and genial humor, all brought actively to bear upon the habits, studies and motives of her adopted son. He began life as a lawyer, but soon devoted his life to teaching. His work in the public schools of Ohio has been far-reaching and always progressive and earnest. He died in June, 1891.

Venable, W. H. Let him first be a man, and other essays chiefly relating to education and culture. Bost., Lee & Shepard, 1893 [1892.] c. 8+274 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Some of the twelve papers were originally addressed to teachers' institutes, while others first appeared in well-known educational journals. The purpose of the collection is to oppose the deadening influence of mere mechanical routine in the training of children. The papers are entitled: Let him first be a man ; The paragon of animals ; Functions of the preparatory school; Schoolmastery ; Nature the sovereign schoolmistress ; Topics of the time ; Books and reading; Unclassified trifles; Studies in the history of education ; The utility of the ideal ; Sylvan mythology, poetry and sentiment; William Downs Henkle—memorial address.

As far as possible chronological order is observed. The series are arranged to show to advantage the periods presented. Where the experiences of countries connect, sectional arrangement is differentiated.

Victor, Horace. Mariam; or, twenty-one days. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1891 [1892.] c. 3+329 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novels ser.) cl., $1.

The Lornadale, from London, which every year carried pilgrims to Mecca, gathered from numerous ports in the Orient is the scene in this romantic story of twenty-one days' duration. The story is told by Christopher Lanxon, a young Englishman, and the surgeon of the vessel. His philosophical reflections upon the characteristics of the pilgrims are as interesting as the story he tells. "Mariam" is the beautiful daughter of a sheikh, also making the pilgrimage to Mecca with a large party. An attempt to abduct her and a revolt among the pilgrims are among the many unusual and picturesque incidents.

Vigilans, [pseud. for M. N. Patrick.] Drifting: a novel. Denver, Col., The Chain & Hardy Co., 1892. c. 2+311 p. O. pap., 50 c.

Wilbur Lothorn first appears as a young man of twenty-one just leaving his Western home to study medicine in New York City. He becomes a rich, successful physician, and the incidents scattered through the story are supposed to come under his eyes as he follows his profession. Waifs and strays of all kinds tell him their sorrows. The author evidently has a very low opinion of the good performed by charitable institutions.

Giovanni Canova has a past which he strives to forget in constant change of scene; but he is ever the prey of remembrance and remorse, Finally the wonderful voice of a young singer brings oblivion. Then the pair are betrothed, and there follows a recital of the life histories of both. Here retribution overtakes Canova, and he is a second time the hero in a tragedy. The story occurs in Verona, Paris and Vienna. The heroine is introduced as a nun rendering Verdi's "Miserere." The characters are subtly drawn, and their action conveys a moral.

Walter Graham, statesman: an American romance, by an American. Lancaster, Pa., Fulton Pub. Co., 1891. c. 5+602 p. D. el., $1.50.

Walter Graham's individual story is a minor interest in a novel that aims to show the political condition of the United States before and after the secession of the Southern States. The time is from 1843 to 1887, and as Walter begins life as a Democrat and finally becomes a convert to the theories of the Whigs, both factions are viewed impartially. The fugitive slave question is especially dealt with.

War under water; tr. [fr. the French] by Mary J. Serrano. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 4+373 p. D. (Cassell's sunshine ser., no. 122.) el., 75 c.; pap., 50 c.

A new French writer, whose name is not given but whose methods are very like those of Jules Verne, is the author of this story. The characters are five patriots—a Pole, an Alsatian, an Austrian, a Frenchman and a Dane—all imbued with an intense hatred of Germany. A great inventor, who has solved the problem of submarine navigation, filled with a similar desire for vengeance, places his great submarine warships at their service. Its construction is described in scientific terms, which make everything seem plausible, and its wonderful destructive power and its equally wonderful deeds under water are graphically portrayed.

Was consecrated Bishop of Pennsylvania in 1787. Died 1836. A staunch American citizen and a devoted churchman. Introduction by Bishop Potter.

Ward, Mrs. Mary A., [Mrs. T: Humphry Ward). The history of David Grieve. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. c. '91. 3+576 p. D. (Macmillan's dollar novels ser.) cl., $1.

"Louie" Grieve, David's sister, is as much the heroine as he is the hero. They are the children of a self-educated farmer and a French woman, who is untrue to her husband and dies by her own hand. She had been brought up a Roman Catholic, while her husband was an atheist. All the best and worst traits of the parents are developed in David and "Louie's" careers, which are told with a wealth of incident and detail. The absence of all religious belief in either, the lax morality both show under temptation, seem to illustrate the author's rather hopeless theory of the impossibility of rising above one's inherited nature, however bad. "Louie," who is a most disagreeable character, specially illustrates this—but David is left repentant and aspiring to better things. The scene opens on a farm in Derbyshire, changes to Manchester, where David becomes a second-hand bookseller, thence is transferred to Paris, to a wild Bohemian set of artists, who are graphically described. David comes back to Manchester finally, where he endeavors to live up to the creed formulated by himself, in good deeds to the poor. By the author of "Robert Elsmere."

A young country girl, who marries in haste a man apparently of rank and means, is met at the very threshold of her married life with an alarming and puzzling mystery which promises to destroy her happiness. Her husband's identity is questioned, and he suffers frightfully for the misfortunes of another man. Who is the real "Ralph Ryder of Brent" is cleverly concealed until the last chapter. The characters are English, the scenes taking place in England and on the Continent.

Warden, Florence, [pseud. for Florence Alice Price, now Mrs. G: E. James.] Sea Mew Abbey. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., 1892. c. '91. 2–336 p. D. (Lovell's international ser., no. 218.) cl., $1; pap., 50 c.

The author of "The house on the marsh" lays her story on the lonely rock-bound coast of Yorkshire, and pictures the dangers and adventures of bold, reckless smugglers. A young girl brought up in a convent goes home to live with her unknown father in Sea Mew Abbey and day by day makes discoveries that at last point to a man whom she believes a faithful servant as her father, and the most enterprising smuggler of the dreaded gang. The details show all Miss Warden's old skill at detective work.

Warren, Cornelia. Miss Wilton. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 2+583 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Miss Wilton, an American girl, was educated in Europe, travelled extensively with a faithful maid, then returned to America and took up her abode in various boarding-places, where she met many interesting fellow-beings. Millionaires, match-makers, manly and unmanly men, and women "nobly planned" and those less so, play their various parts in shaping her life. There are many good thoughts on a practical working religion suited to the needs of active, go-ahead, intelligent human beings worked into the story that shapes Miss Wilton into a noble woman.

Warren, Mortimer A. Almost fourteen: a book designed as a gift from parents to their sons and daughters after those sons and daughters have passed the age of seven, and before they reach the age of fourteen. N. Y., Dodd, Mead & Co., 1892. c. 5+154 p. S. cl., $1.50.

Contents: The physical changes in our lives; Modesty dawns in childhood; Modesty as between the sexes; The sexual instinct; The two great mysteries; The urinary organs; Pure and sacred to myself; The new power which comes to us in youth; Sex in nature; Marriage is reciprocity; Home is the place where we share; Marriage is the bond of the home, the home is the foundation of the state.

Warring, C: B. Genesis I. and modern science. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 245 p. D. cl., $1.

A few years ago the same writer sent out a volume called "The Mosaic account of creation the miracle of to-day." The present work is a more extended study of a particular portion of the subjects considered in that book. The discussion is in the form of a conversation.

Washington, Beatrice. The story of Juliette: a child's romance. Bost., Roberts Bros., 1892. c. 5–186 p. il. D. cl., $1.

Washington, G: Journal of my journey over the mountains; while surveying for Lord Thomas Fairfax, Baron of Cameron, in the northern neck of Virginia, beyond the Blue Ridge in 1747–8, copied from the original with literal exactness, and ed., with notes, by J. M. Toner, M.D. Albany, N. Y., Joel Munsell's Sons, 1892. c. 3–144 p. maps, O. bds., $2.

It is the purpose of the editor to prepare a complete collection of all the writings of George Washington with that literal exactness as to text which can only be assured by the careful efforts of an experienced copyist and expert proof-reader having access to, and comparing in every possible case the copies with the originals. This initial "Diary" opens with his sixteenth year. Forthcoming volumes will give, in chronological order, Washington's co-operation in the march of events on this continent, and his life and opinions as seen through the writings he has left. The book is neatly printed on thick paper, and contains many maps and charts in fac-simile of "Washington's Journals."

Waterloo, Stanley. A man and a woman. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., [1892.] c. 3–250 p. D. (Ariel lib., no. 17.) cl., $1.25; pap., 50 c.

A series of incidents trace the causes and effects in two human lives. The scene is sometimes the frontier of Wisconsin, often the crowded city. The life of Grant Harlson depended in a measure on the interest of women associates of varied characteristics and aims, while the heroine's interests have been before marriage individual; after marriage, those of her husband and children. The final developments are rather unsatisfactory.

Watson, Augusta Campbell. The old harbor town: a novel. N. Y., G: W. Dillingham, 1892. c. 4–275 p. 1 il. D. pap., 50 c.

The scene is New London, Connecticut, during the struggle for American independence. Incidents of the stirring time are interwoven with the quaint personal histories of Letty Chester and Love Mainwaring, and there is a plot in which a British as well as a Colonial hero figures, and a young girl is effectively seen as heroine and a victim of war. Benedict Arnold is incidentally mentioned.

The author has prepared "Judges and Ruth" for the Expositor's Bible. His argument places Job among the later books of the Old Testament, as the style shows it to have been written after literary finish had come to be of importance in the world of letters. He claims the Book of Job is intended to show the doubt and fear, the devastating godlessness of man, the strange, sad enmity of the carnal mind which Christ has to overcome.

The Morays, of Moray Moss, were very proud of their noble descent and old family name. This trait led Douglas Moray, whose duties as a soldier forced him to confide his little sister to her grandmother's guardianship, to impress on Mrs. Baily the necessity of Alicia's remembering her name. The child overheard the injunction, and thought it related to her Christian name, which signified noble. This fancy so impresses the little heroine that she strives to live up to it. The incidents which follow this resolve lead to an episode in which the Pilgrim's progress, Robin and Mr. Despair are important factors. The scene is English.

Cruising around the English coast in a miniature yacht is the chief subject of the little volume. A few love-scenes are thrown in, and some sketchy descriptions of out-of-the-way places. The characters are the "wee widow" and her girl friend, who have tired of the annual regulation yachting trip. They borrow the little Speck from a friend, and with a crew of one man start on a voyage of adventure.

The purpose of this paper is twofold. In the first place the writer seeks to show that the earliest settlers in North Carolina were not religious refugees; that they came to the province not from religious, but mainly from economic motives. In the second place he traces the progress of the struggle for an Establishment, and shows that beginning with 1701 the Episcopal Church was for three-quarters of a century the legal church in North Carolina.

White, Eliza Orne. Winterborough. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. c. 3+350 p. S. cl., $1.25.

By the author of "Miss Brooks." Winterborough is a New Hampshire town sadly given over to gossip. The hero is a school-master, the heroine a school-girl, both of strong character and resolute will, who take opposite views on most questions. Other persons, typical of New England towns, figure in the story. The conversations are very bright, replete with the satire and cleverness that made the writer's first novel so popular.

White, J: Williams. The beginner's Greek book. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 14+428+70 p. D. cl., $1.60.

Intended to furnish work for the first year's study In preparing this volume Prof. White has assumed that the main object of elementary instruction in Greek is to teach the beginner to read; further, that the pupils who use it will be fifteen years of age, on the average, when they take it in hand; that they will already have studied Latin for at least one year, and that they are to be fitted at the end of two years to read simple Attic prose at sight. The book differs in important particulars but not essentially in its plan from the author's "First book in Greek," first published in 1876.

White, J: Williams, and Morgan, Morris H. An illustrated dictionary to Xenophon's Anabasis; with groups of words etymologically related. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. '91. 8+290 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

This dictionary has not been compiled from other vocabularies and lexicons, but has been made from the Anabasis itself, on the basis of an independent collection and examination of all the places where each word occurs. The editors have aimed to give all words found in the principal editions of the Anabasis now in use, including Dindorf's fourth edition and Hug's recension of the Teubner text, as well as the editions of Krüger, Vollbrecht, Rehdantz and Cobet, and Goodwin and White's edition of the first four books.

White, Rev. Lorenzo. The democracy of Christianity; or, equality in the dealings of God with men. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1892. c. 307 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author says: "The right of this book to be rests upon its bringing into clearer view two closely related truths hitherto but dimly seen—the absolute freedom of man upon probational issues to choose for himself and form his own character, and to all who are held to the responsibilities of probation perfect equality of opportunity for securing the favor of God and eternal life."

*Whitla, W:, M.D. Dictionary of treatment; or, therapeutic index, including medical and surgical therapeutics. Rev. and adapted to the pharmacopœia of the United States. Phil., Lea Bros. & Co., 1892. 938 p. 8°, cl., $4.

Whitman, Walt. Autobiographia; or, the story of a life: selected from his prose writings. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. c. '75–92. 5–205 p. il. D. (Fiction, fact and fancy ser.) cl., 75 c.

Shortly before his death Mr. Whitman gave his consent to have an eclectic volume prepared from his poems, and also to have a volume of autobiography selected from his prose works. "Specimen days" forms the basis of the book, and the compiler has added in their proper order passages from "November boughs," "Good-by, my fancy," and "Memoranda during the war." Mr Harrison S. Morris has assisted in the preparation of this autobiographia. Some connecting links are supplied from the "Notes" of John Burroughs.

Whitman, Walt. Selected poems. N. Y., C: L. Webster & Co., 1892. c. '55–'92. 4–179 p. por. S. (Fiction, fact and fancy ser.) cl., 75 c.

The editor, Mr. Arthur Stedman, says in his preface to this volume of Whitman's poems: "My intention has been to offer, in a conventional form, those of his poems which are held to be most nearly in harmony with the poetic era (though really they have a character quite apart from it), and to add selections from his more distinctive chantings. With the choice and arrangement of the poems Mr. Whitman has had nothing to do, save in the most general way of approval. I sincerely believe this little collection will be a revelation even to those who know their Whitman.

Whitney, Mrs. A. D. T. A golden gossip: neighborhood story number two. Bost., Houghton, Mifflin & Co., 1892. 4+348 p. D. cl., $1.50.

In this second "neighborhood story" Mrs. Whitney shows how the acrid stream of ordinary gossip in a New England village may, by the influence of an earnest and beautiful nature, be made "golden"—cheering

A literary résumé of the myths of Colorado, pointing out the poetry and strange romance they testify to in a now extinct nation.

Whitney, H: C. Life on the circuit with Lincoln; with sketches of Generals Grant, Sherman and McClellan, Judge Davis, Leonard Swett and other contemporaries. Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1892.] c. 6+601 por. il. O. cl., $3.50.

This biography of Lincoln is founded on the memories of many people who had known Lincoln intimately and given their information at first hand to the author, one of Lincoln's closest friends, a fellow-lawyer, who shared his confidences and knew him intimately during his evolution from a circuit lawyer to a national statesman. Profusely illustrated with portraits of Lincoln and his contemporaries and scenes connected with his life. Contains thirteen fac-simile letters. The writer specially dwells on the great contrasts in the characteristic attributes of Lincoln.

Whitney, Rev. S: W. The revisers' Greek text: a critical examination of certain readings, textual and marginal, in the original Greek of the New Testament adopted by the late Anglo-American revisers. Bost., Silver, Burdett & Co., 1892. c. 2 v., 361; 350 p. D. cl., $5.

An examination of some of the readings adopted by the late Anglo-American revisers of the New Testament in their Greek text on which their revised English Version is based. The so-called authorities for those readings are cited, so that the English reader of the Revised Version can see and judge for himself what and how much value is to be attached to those readings. The work is the result of over ten years' painstaking labor and research. It has been prepared with special reference to readers of English who are not altogether at home in Greek. Where Greek words are introduced the corresponding English generally accompanies them. The well-made index is the work of Rev. Henry C. Graves, of New Bedford. Rev. S. W. Whitney is pastor of the Baptist Church at Ashfield, Mass.

Short essays by representative men, such as Van Beuren Denslow, W: G. Sumner, W: Lloyd Garrison, and others, explaining "why I am" a protectionist, a free-trader, a single-taxer, a socialist, a nationalist, a communist, an anarchist, an opportunist, an individualist, a Christian socialist, etc.

The author of "Scramblers among the Alps" has made himself a reputation as the boldest and most scientific mountain-climber of his generation. The travels here described were undertaken for the scientific purpose of discovering and proving how far above the level of the sea life can be sustained in such a manner as will permit of the accomplishment of useful work. His book records new discoveries in almost every branch of science. A supplementary appendix contains contributions from fifteen zoölogists and other scientists on the birds, insects, reptiles, fishes, etc., which the author brought from the Andes. Ninety-six of these were new to science. Excellent maps are included.

Ten chapters upon the duties of parents and teachers to children; The rights of the child; Children's plays; Children's playthings; What shall children read? The relation of the kindergarten to social reform; The relation of the kindergarten to the public school, and Other people's children, are by Mrs. Wiggin. How shall we govern our children? and The magic of "together" are by Nora A. Smith, Mrs. Wiggin's sister, who was her collaborateur in "The story hour." Contains many home truths made palatable by Mrs. Wiggin's unfailing humor.

Wigston, W. F. C. Francis Bacon, poet, prophet, philosopher, versus phantom Captain Shakespeare, the Rosicrucian mask. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., 1891, [1892.] 48 p. por. O. cl., $2.

A contribution to the Baconian theory of the Shakespearian plays. The writer aims to prove his case by quoting parallel passages from Bacon's acknowledged writings and from the plays attributed to Shakespeare. Aside from its value as testimony to a special theory, the work is one of great interest, as the digest of a vast amount of hard study and intelligent thought.

Wigston, W. F. C. The Columbus of literature; or, Bacon's new world of sciences. Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., [1892.] 5–217 p. il. O. cl., $2

thorship of the Shakespearian plays by deducing the evidence which the author claims is present in a greater or less degree in these plays. In his analytical treatment of the subject, and by arrangement of chapters, the author strives to prove Rosicrucian affinities; in brief, to deal with a difficult problem of literature.

Dolores King and Helena Moxon meet in a boarding-school and become dear friends. Dolores has theories against marriage founded on a diary left by her mother, whose married life was a failure. Helena looks forward to a happy home with children to love and care for, such as she has always known her mother's to be. The "sweet danger" comes to Dolores who, loving a man devotedly, consents to live with him but not to marry him. The experiment ends after two years. Her old friend Helena finds her home and happiness after Dolores has fallen a victim to impossible theories. Scene shifts between New York and Paris.

Wilder, Mrs. C. F. Polly Button's New Year. N. Y., T. Y. Crowell & Co., [1892.] c. 9+137 p. S. cl., 75 c.
Polly Button is a humble member of the church, but to her it suddenly occurs that she as well as the minister has a duty in the world to perform. She begins a new year with a sense of her responsibility and with a sincere desire to change her life. Thus in her little way she becomes a genuine power in the community, an example to those about her in wealth and position, and a help to the young with whom she comes into contact. Her quaint soliloquies and comments are piquant and bright.

Wilkins, Miss Mary E. Jane Field: a novel. N. Y., Harper, 1893 [1892.] c. 4+267 p. il. S. cl., $1.25.
In this her first novel, Miss Wilkins has made an unlovely middle-aged woman the centre of a story of sustained power. Jane Field is a gaunt, stern New England woman, poor, hardworking but devoted to her delicate daughter Lois. She grieves with all the intensity of her silent nature as Lois fades under poor fare and hard work. Then temptation comes to her—temptation by yielding to which she will gain material comfort for her child, and but recover what should justly be her own. She yields, and the story marches on to the inevitable end, showing her stern struggle with fate and unfaltering persistence in the path she has chosen. Lois' pretty love-story lightens the dark places, and the many minor characters are drawn with that fidelity, perception and graphic power which make Miss Wilkins' New Englanders living, breathing men and women.

Wilkins, Miss Mary E. The pot of gold, and other stories. Bost., D. Lothrop Co., 1892. c. 5–324 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.
Short stories: The pot of gold; Cow with golden horns; Princess Rosetta and the Pop-Corn Man; Christmas monks; Pumpkin giant; Christmas masquerade; Dill; Silver hen; Toby; Patchwork school; Squire's sixpence; A plain case; A stranger in the village; The bound girl; Deacon Thomas Wales' will; the adopted daughter.

Wilkins, Miss Mary E. Young Lucretia, and other stories. N. Y., Harper, 1892. c. 4+258 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
Young Lucretia was so called to distinguish her from an aunt of the same name. Her career is that of a bright child, who fails to live up to the standard of her guardians, two prim New England maiden ladies. She appeals to her aunts and the reader in her own quaint and individual way. This story is followed by twelve others, entitled: How Fidelia went to the store; Ann Mary, her two Thanksgivings; Ann Lizy's patchwork; The little Persian princess; Where the Christmas tree grew; Where Sarah Jane's doll went; Seventoe's ghost; Little Mirandy, and how she earned her shoes; A parsnip stew; The Dickey boy; A sweet grass basket; Mehitable Lamb.

Mrs. Willard is home missionary to Alaska of the Presbyterian Board of America. When a committee of United States senators visited Alaska to inquire into the condition of the natives, she was applied to for a paper on the subject, and wrote one on "Needed legislation for the protection of native children," which was considered the most discriminating, faithful and able one received. The facts she had studied so carefully she has here woven into a story of love and suffering in this wild, strange country, where women are as yet little above animals.

Wilson, Marian Calvert. Guy Ormsby: a romance. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. 3–208 p. D. (American authors ser., no. 43.) pap., 50 c.

A story of modern life, dealing with the mariage de convenance of a young man who is in love with a charming Italian girl whom for family reasons he cannot marry. The death of the unloved wife clears the way to an orthodox conclusion. The scene is laid partly in England, partly in Italy.

Wilson, Marian Calvert. Manuelita: the story of San Xavier Del Bac. N. Y., United States Book Co., [1892.] c. '91. 3–305 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

In this story of the old Californian mission of San Xavier Del Bac, the famous Father Kino, the first Jesuit missionary in Sonora, is an important figure. Much of the story is historical, and taken from the early records of the Spanish explorers. Manuelita is a little Indian girl adopted by Padre Kino on his historic visit to the Moqui towns of Arizona. Her betrothal to Captain Balthazar Carillo affords an opportunity for self-sacrifice on the part of a young priest, and her marriage results in a life of self-devotion and the final completion of the San Xavier church.

Wilson, Olivia L. At the sign of the White Swan: a tale of old Pennsylvania: [il. by Copeland.] Bost., Estes & Lauriat, [1892.] c. 5–240 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

In 1840 the inhabitants of Fayette County, Pennsylvania, were startled by a series of daring mail robberies, which were finally traced to a Dr. Bradder, a well-known "quack." Under different names and with a change of locality, these facts are woven into a thrilling story for boys and girls, the leading episode occurring at "the sign of the White Swan," a rechristening of the National Hotel, the real name of the tavern celebrated in the records of the facts.

Wilson, W: Bender. A few acts and actors in the tragedy of the Civil War in the United States. Phil., published by the author, W: Bender Wilson, 1892. 3–114 p. D. cl., $1.

A series of articles on "Scenes and actors in the War of the Rebellion," first published in the Lancaster New Era, have been revised, enlarged and published in a more accessible form by their author, who was military telegrapher during the War of the Rebellion. The book presents the operations and organizations of the Army of the Potomac, opens with John Brown's raid at Harper's Ferry, and closes with a sketch of Abraham Lincoln, with whom Mr. Wilson was closely associated in his functions of telegrapher. Many notable men are reviewed, and much incidental history is introduced.

Wiltse, Sara E. The place of the story in early education, and other essays. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 7+132 p. D. cl., 60 c.

Winchester, M. E. Adrift in a great city: a story; il. by G. P. Jacomb Hood. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1893 [1892.] 4+382 p. il. D. cl., $1.50.

A poor little descendant of a proud English house comes to live with his peevish maiden aunt and gouty uncle while still requiring a wet-nurse. After five years the aunt dismisses the nurse and the poor little boy is seeking for her when he finds himself adrift in a great city. He meets kind friends among poor people and helps support them by playing the violin. All ends happily.

Abel Drinkwater, publisher, is evidently a medium of attacking the entire publishing trade, rather than an individual member. In his reminiscenees, which are told in a satirical vein, he introduces the methods of the publisher, defines the position of the author, describes the literary hack in his relation to both author and publisher, reviews diverse types of writers, and concludes with a literary translation, in which Abel Drinkwater has still the advantage.

Jack Broughton's extravagance led to dishonesty and arrest. When his wife learned of his disgrace, she appealed to Lord Esseldine to spare Broughton, but the latter was insulting in his refusal to help the erring man. Years after he retracted his harsh words, but Mrs. Broughton showed she was human in her action in reference to this. The scene is English and American. The novel ends romantically.

Betty McKenzie, who transgresses against the laws of propriety and the rigid rules of Madame Le Brun's seminary by carrying on a clandestine correspondence, is consigned for that offence to a sequestered convent school. The incidents that follow an episode in Betty's life are cleverly interwoven in a novel which deals with English home life.

Wister, Owen. The dragon of Wantley, his rise, his voracity, and his downfall: a romance; il. by J: Stewardson. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1892. c. 5–149 p. il. O. cl., $2.

Owen Wister offers a new version of the old ballad of "The dragon of Wantley," whose dainty humor will amuse old and young. His "dragon" masquerades as a monk and lives with his followers in an old monastery, where secret carousals are held upon the good things stolen from the neighboring towns. The slaying of the dragon—known in the romance as Francis Almoign, Knight of the Voracious Stomach and Grand Marshal of the Guild of Go-as-You-Please—is an amusing burlesque upon the old tales of knightly deeds and the days of chivalry. The illustrations fit well into the humor of the text; they are in full pages and in chapter headings, and also woven in with the reading-matter.

Wittrock, F: A lucky mishap: a novel. Chic., Donohue, Henneberry & Co., 1892. c. 2–405 p. D. (Optimus ser., no. 25.) pap., 50 c.

The principal incident is a train robbery committed in the west. By showing the evil effects of this crime upon the innocent families of the criminals concerned in that and other desperate deeds, the author hopes to save the victim of sensational newspaper reports. A lucky chance leads a prisoner to secrete a rope in order to effect escape from prison. On this episode the interest depends.

Wolf, Annie. The truth about beauty. N. Y., Lovell, Coryell & Co., [1892.] c. 5+212 p. il. por. D. cl., $1.25.

The author treats beauty from a spiritual rather than from a physical standpoint, believing that "the highest beauty is beauty of soul." She discountenances the use of cosmetics, and bases physical beauty on health, exercise, hygienic living and fresh air. If to these be added a happy temper, loving nature and an earnest desire to become attractive, any woman can she argues, make herself beautiful.

Wolf, Emma. Other things being equal. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 3–275 p. D. cl., $1.

At a brilliant evening reception in San Francisco Ruth Levice, a young Jewess, meets Dr. Kemp, a celebrated Christian physician. The point of the story of home-life and filial devotion to an old father and a young, beautiful mother is that "other things being equal" a difference of religious creed should make no difference in married happiness.

Wood, H: God's image in man: some intuitive perceptions of truth. Bost., Lee & Shepard. 1892. c. 3–258 p. D. cl., $1.

This is not a theological treatise. It consists of graphic pictures of advanced religious thought in prose form, but of poetic quality. It is a series of visions through the intuition rather than an argument. It separates the external and dogmatic from what is internal and intrinsic. The different modes of divine revelation, the universality of law, race solidarity, evolution and the present great transition from the old to the new in spiritual and metaphysical science are presented with a glow which is thoroughly unconventional. By the author of "Natural law in the business world."

Wood, J: Seymour. Gramercy Park: a story of New York. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 3+218 p. S. (Appleton's summer ser.) bds., 50 c.

A story of the life of a young Wall Street broker whose wife is ordered to the mountains in summer and to Florida in the winter. The wife's father and mother, old-fashioned residents of Gramercy Park, represent the real, honest life that built up American cities, the younger generation the weak imitation of foreign customs that is sapping the strength and morality of modern home life.

Woods, Mrs. Katharine Pearson. From dusk to dawn. N. Y., Appleton, 1892. c. 310 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The author of "Metzerott—Shoemaker" has again written with ethical purpose. Her hero is Cyril Deane, a young Episcopal deacon in a poor American parish, who discovers within himself an unknown power of controlling and helping others. A faith-healer, a theosophist, an orthodox clergyman and a strong mesmerist and magnetic medium, all hold discussions as to how the world may be made a good place to live in. True love towards one's fellow-men sums up the rather involved solution.

Woods, Margaret L. Esther Vanhomrigh. N. Y., Hovendon Co., [1892.] c. '91. 4–380 p. D. cl., $1: pap., 50 c.

Esther Vanhomrigh, whose stormy love for Dean Swift is a matter of history, is the heroine of this novel of the eighteenth century. The author of "A village tragedy" has photographed in words the surroundings of Swift, Steele, Addison, Pope, Lord Bolingbroke and the gay young Lotharios of that day. The sad story of Esther Johnson and Esther Vanhomrigh is skilfully used to bring out the character of Swift, that strange combination of virtues and faults with its keynote of passion for power. The story shifts between London and Dublin and occupies ten years, beginning in 1712.

Roger Hunt figures in two marital experiences and an elopement for the obvious purpose of venting a theory on the obligations and possibilities of matrimony. The scene shifts. The novel is based on the questionable act of a rather weak woman and an essentially selfish man.

"Little Alix, a story of the Children's Crusade" opens the volume in a pretty setting of characteristic scenes from this picturesque movement of the Middle Ages. "Hodge the cat" has been quoted in many periodicals; it illustrates one of the virtues of Dr. Johnson of dictionary fame. The many other poems, such as "The world-wide consolation," "Queen Margaret's needles," "What is the wind like?" "How the snowman felt," etc., etc., are all of a kind to give small readers much pleasure.

Wormeley, Katharine Prescott. A memoir of Honoré de Balzac. Bost., Roberts Bros. 1892. c. 4+370 p. por. D. hf. rus., $1.50.

Based upon a narrative of Balzac's childhood and early youth, written by his sister Laure, Madame Surville, and upon portions of Balzac's books, which are derived from that period of his life. His manhood and the closing years of his life are depicted through his correspondence and the records of his contemporaries Miss Wormeley has written this memoir of Balzac for American readers, her single aim being to depict the man as he was to those who knew him and loved him best, and not his work. The portrait which adorns the volume, taken one hour after death by Eugène Giraud, was considered by Madame de Balzac as the best likeness of her husband.

The design is to commemorate the deeds of certain Burmese missionaries who have not had the full credit of their great work accorded them. The initial chapter introduces William Carey and Kristno Paul. In a description of their work is traced the practical beginning of Karen mission work. Brief biographies of the Comstocks, Abbotts and other notable missionaries outline the progress of the Burman movement. Experiences with the natives of Arakan and Burma are a feature of the work.

Wyndham, Julian. Theo Waddington: a novel. Bost., United Pub. Co., 3 Somerset st., 1892. c. 3-292 p. D. (Carlyle bi-monthly ser.) pap., 50 c.
Theo Waddington, a rather opinionated girl, is ostensibly one of the author's means of conveying religious theories. She is introduced at thirteen, constantly warring with the conservative religion of her father, who learns of his daughter's unorthodox proclivities, combats them, and succeeds in converting Theo to his way of belief. There seems to be likewise intent in the action of Horace Rushmore, who meets Miss Waddington in New York, and although opposed to her Puritanism, succumbs to fate and marries her.

Wynman, Margaret, (pseud.) My flirtations; il. by J. Bernard Partridge. Phil., J. B. Lippincott Co., 1893 [1892.] 6–185 p. D. $1.25.
It is the charming daughter of a famous Royal Academician who relates the history of her flirtations. There are thirteen recorded, but the first, "the primeval one, is lost in the mists of antiquity." They are all short-lived and never tragic, and form a series of amusing sketches of London society. One of the "flirtations" culminates in a wedding, but whether it is the pessimist, the lieutenant, the undergraduate, the economical admirer, the "society" youth, the country doctor, the poet, the diplomatist, the stockbroker, the American, the Frenchman, the actor or the solid business man who carries off the prize, the reader must discover.

Wyss, J: Rod., and Montolieu, J. I. P. de B., Baronne de. The Swiss family Robinson; a new tr. from the original German; ed. by W: H. G. Kingston. N. Y., G: Routledge & Sons, [1892.] 9+564 p. il. O. (Routledge's colored classics.) cl., $1.50.

Xenophon. First four books of Anabasis; with notes adapted to the rev. and enl. ed. of Goodwin's "Greek grammar;" ed. by W: W. Goodwin and J: Williams White. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. '77. 4+290 p. D. hf. leath., $1.65.

Xenophon. Hellenica, Books V.–VII.; ed. on the basis of Büchsenschütz's ed., by C: E. Bennett. Bost., Ginn & Co., 1892. c. 3–234 p. O. (College ser. of Greek authors.) cl., $1.50.

Xenophon. Works; tr. by H. G. Dakyns. In 4 v. V. 2, Hellenica, Books III.–VII.: Agesilaus, the politics, and revenues. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 91–395 p. 12°, cl., $2.50.

Yaple, Alfred. A country preacher; read before the Literary Club of Cincinnati, April 9, 1892. Cin., O., Rob. Clarke & Co., 1892. 22 p. O. pap., 25 c.
At the age of four the writer's mind was awakened by a country preacher using a new illustration to convey the idea of eternity. At the age of nineteen, full of conceit as to his knowledge of theology and religion, he meets the same country clergyman, who, by subtile reasoning, shows him that he really knows nothing, and that almost anything can be proved from any given premises. An earnest Lutheran, this country preacher points out the necessity of faith, as all knowledge is relative and unreliable.

Yeats, W. B., ed. Irish fairy tales; ed. with an introd. by W. B. Yeats; il. by Jack B. Yeats. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., 1892. 5+236 p. S. (The children's lib.) cl., 75 c.
The stories are about land and water fairies, evil spirits, cats, and kings and warriors. They are both humorous and pathetic. Mr. Yeats has included no story that has already appeared in his "Fairy and folk tales of the Irish peasantry" in the Camelot series. These two volumes together make a fairly representative collection of Irish folk tales.

Yechton, Barbara. Christine's inspiration, N. Y., Ja. Pott & Co., 1892. c. 32 p. D. bds., 60 c.
Christine Brownlow, a struggling young artist, had been commissioned by a picture-dealer to paint him a picture. Just as Christine had despaired of ever having an inspiration it came in the shape of a little new neighbor. After her conception was committed to canvas a pathetic incident leads her to sacrifice her work and fame in the cause of a grief-stricken friend. An Easter story with a moral.

Yonge, Charlotte M., comp. A book of golden deeds of all lands and all times, gathered and narrated by the author of the "Heir of Redclyffe." N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 11+464 p. 16°, (Macmillan's school lib.) cl., 50 c.

Yonge, Charlotte M. The Cross Roads; or, a choice in life: a story for young women and older girls; il. by J. F. Weedon. N. Y., T: Whittaker, [1892.] c. 243 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.
Tom Tolman and Emmeline Osbourne, upper servants, were betrothed lovers with no immediate prospects of marrying, until the death of Tom's uncle provided a means for them of realizing their hopes. Emmeline, however, questions the advisability of Tom attaining his purpose through the proprietorship of the Cross Roads, a public-house. Her decision and action convey a moral and have much varied interest.

Yonge, Charlotte M., ["Aunt Charlotte," pseud.] That Stick. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. c. '91. 5+299 p. D. cl., $1.
Frank Morton had waited for twenty years to marry the poor young teacher at Mrs. Lang's, having been forced to provide for his brother's wife and children. Suddenly he inherits property and becomes Lord Northmoore. His quiet, methodical ways had gained him the name of "That Stick." The story tells of his good work for all his relations and his happy life with his elderly bride, visiting all the places described in the "Waverley" novels.

Young, Arthur. Arthur Young's tour in Ireland (1776–1779); ed. with introd. and notes by Arthur Wollaston Hutton; with a bibliography by J: P. Anderson. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 2 v., 12°, cl., $2.

Young, Arthur. Hades up to date. [Humorous.] Chic., F. J. Schulte & Co., 1892. 100 p. obl. F. cl., $3.50.

Young, Egerton Ryerson. Stories from Indian wigwams and northern camp-fires. N. Y., Hunt & Eaton, 1893 [1892.] c. 293 p. il. D. cl., $1.25.

A description of the characteristics of the North American Indians, by a native missionary, who left Hamilton, Canada, for the Rossville mission in 1868. After describing the means of transportation of himself and family the author pictures the conditions and customs of the Cree Indians, introduces some of their traditions, gives an outline of Fort Garry, some incidental matter about the Hudson Bay Company and a brief biography of the Rev. George Young.

Young, Gerald. The wild pigs: a story for little people; il. by W. Parkinson. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 3+131 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Tusco, Grumphy, Snout, Frisky and Chunk lived contentedly in a forest, until the death of Tusco and Grumphy deprived the three little pigs of parental restraint, when Frisky and Chunk gave way to their besetting weakness, and were taught through the experiences which attended their fall that it is wiser to be satisfied with the conditions that nature and circumstances impose.

Young folks' story of the New Testament; il. by Sir J: Gilbert, W. J. Webb, L. Huard and others. N. Y., McCarthy & Co., [1892.] c. 6+93 p. il. O. bds., 50 c.

The life of Jesus Christ, from his birth to the resurrection, is simply and directly told in accordance with New Testament records, with a view of impressing young readers with the beauties and teachings of Christianity.

Young Men's Christian Associations: a handbook of the history, organization and methods of work; ed. by H. S. Ninde, J. T. Bowne and Erskine Uhl. N. Y., The International Committee of Young Men's Christian Association, 40 E. 23d st., 1892. c. '91. 2–448+63 p. D. cl., $2; hf. mor., $3.

Young people's library. 2d series. Oakland, Cal., Pacific Press Pub. Co., 1892. 6 v. il. 12°, cl., $3.60; ea., 60 c.

Younghusband, Frances. The story of the Bible. Pt. 2, The story of Exodus. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 18+148 p. 8°, cl., $1.

Zahm, Rev. J. A. Sound and music. Chic., A. C. McClurg & Co., 1892. c. 4–451 p. il O. cl., $3.50.

The main purpose is to give musicians and general readers an exact knowledge, based on experiment, of the principles of acoustics, and to present at the same time a brief exposition of the physical basis of musical harmony.

Zander, W: Modern decorative painting: colored designs in different styles for decorating ceilings and walls of sitting-rooms, parlors, dining-rooms, halls, boudoirs, smoking rooms, staircases, vestibules, churches, etc. N. Y., Hessling & Spielmeyer, [1892.] 30 pl. F. bds., $20.

Zangwill, I. Children of the Ghetto: being pictures of a peculiar people. Phil., The Jewish Pub. Soc., 1892. 2 v., 2–151; 2–328 p. D. cl., $2.50.

A serious novel dealing with the life of the Jews who swarm in the East End of London. The writer is in sympathy with his subject, but aims at impartiality. He presents vivid pictures of that strange London Ghetto in Whitechapel, where old beliefs and habits exist comparatively uncorrupted by Christianity and wealth and he writes as one who knows intimately the strange and uncouth habitants of this London Jewry. The second volume introduces "The grandchildren of the Ghetto," the wealthier and more refined Hebrews who have removed from the slum district. The entire novel presents a most graphic and comprehensive picture of the little-known details of every-day Jewish life.

Zangwill, I. The old maids' club; il. by F. H. Townsend. N. Y., Tait, Sons & Co., [1892.] c. 4–333 p. D. cl., $1.25.

The "Old Maids' Club" was founded by Lillie Dulcimer at the age of seventeen. According to its conditions of membership every candidate must be under twenty-five, beautiful and wealthy, and have refused at least one offer of marriage. Its by-laws required the members to regard all men as brothers, not to keep domestic pets, not to have less than one birthday a year, to abjure medicine, art classes and Catholicism, never to speak to a curate, not to wear caps, curls, etc., and also worded a number of general recommendations. The history of this club is brightly told and facetiously illustrated.

Zeller, E. The stoics, epicureans and sceptics: from the German, by the Rev. Oswald J. Reichel. New ed. N. Y., Longmans, Green & Co., 1892. 16+586 p. 8°, cl., $5.

Zickel's illustrirter Deutsch-Amerikanischer familien kalender, 1893. N. Y., S. Zickel, 1892. 64 p. 4°, pap., 25 c.

Ziehen, Theodor. Introduction to physiological psychology; tr. by C. C. Van Liew and Dr. Otto Beyer. N. Y., Macmillan & Co., 1892. 15+284 p. il. 12°, cl., $1.50.

Zimmer, H. The Irish element in mediæval culture: tr. by Jane Loring Edmands. N. Y., G: P. Putnam's Sons, 1891 [1892] c. '91. 7+139 p. il. D., cl., 75 c.

"This essay originally appeared in the Preussische Jahrbücher for January, 1887. A remarkable paper, which treats of the known facts of ecclesiastical history and gives a graphic description of the successive groups of Irish missionary monks, their labors in France, Italy, Switzerland and Germany, their strength and their weakness."—The Nation. Copious footnotes and full index

Zimmermann, G. A. Deutsch in Amerika: beiträge zur Geschichte der deutsch-amerikanischen Litteratur, (Biographieen der deutsch-amerikanischen Dichter, nebst Auswahl ihrer besten Dichtungen.) V. 1: Episch-lyrische Poesie. Chic., Ackermann & Evller, 86 5th ave., 1892. c. 56+265 p. sm. 4°, cl., $3.

Zirndorf, H: Some Jewish women; from the German. Phil., Jewish Publication Soc. of Amer., 1892. c. 7+280 p. D. cl., $1.25.

Presents brief biographies of nineteen famous women of Judaism. Thirteen are taken from the Talmud; the others are from the Apocrypha or from the historic records of the Græco-Roman period. To these it is the author's intention to add, at some future time, the portraits of the women of the time of Gaonim and of the Middle Ages.

Zola, Émile. The downfall (La débâcle), (The smash up); tr. by E. P. Robins. N. Y., Cassell Pub. Co., [1892.] c. 3+565 p. D. cl., $1.50.

Incidents and horrors of the Franco-Prussian War are presented with vivid realism in the history of a regiment in the luckless Seventh Corps d'Armee. The book is divided into three parts: the terrible march from Rheims to Sedan; the disaster of Sedan, from inception to denoûement; and the downfall—the crash of Paris, falling in fire and blood. The action is varied, covers a wide field and brings in a multiplicity of characters, but chief interest centres in two soldiers —one the Jean of "La Terre"—whose friendship, experiences and final tragedy are important parts in a story of war, relentless and terrible, stripped of all glamour, and painted with grim detail.

A Chapter in the History of Human Error, by HENRY B. WHEATLEY, author of "How to Form a Library," etc., etc. Cloth, uncut edges. $1.25.

The "History of Literary Blunders" is a wide subject, and necessarily covers many centuries and countries. Mr. Wheatley has here brought together an interesting collection of instances of literary blundering—gleaned from many fields and different times. Thus, startiog with "Blunders in General," he gives many instances of the long life which a literary blunder enjoys. He then takes up the "Blunders of Authors" in particular, giving examples from the writings of well-known literary men and newspaper critics. "Amusing Blunders in Translation" are also illustrated. Numerous cases are given of "Bibliographical Blunders," of defects in classification, and other weaknesses in well-known works. "Lists of Errata" are made to yield a curious chapter of human fallibility, etc., etc.

II. New Book by Rev. J. R. Macduff, D.D.

"THE WORLD LIBRARY."

A Brilliant Novel.

The Son.

By PAUL BOURGET, author of "Cosmopolis." Cloth, $1.25; paper, 50 cents.

"Paul Bourget must certainly be heralded as the modern Balzac."—EMILE ZOLA (in recent interview).

"A refined realist."—HENRY JAMES, the novelist.

By the author of "She." New Illustrated Edition.

Nada the Lily.

The latest novel by H. RIDER HAGGARD. Printed on fine paper, with numerous handsome illustrations from drawings by R. Caton Woodville. Paper, 50 cents.

This novel is not for sale by news companies.

Countess Sarah.

By GEORGES OHNET. New edition printed on excellent paper, in unique cover. Paper, 50 cents.

"Killing in the First Degree."

Memoirs of a Mother-in-Law.

By GEORGE R. SIMS, author of "'Ostler Joe," etc. New edition on excellent paper, in unique cover, paper, 50 cents.

The most amusing book since "THAT HUSBAND OF MINE." Only one laugh in it—from beginning to end. Read it, and you can conscientiously recommend it.

Third Edition.

Love's Cruel Enigma.

By PAUL BOURGET, author of "The Disciple," "The Promised Land," etc. Profusely and elegantly illustrated with drawings by the late Emile Bayard. Paper, in handsome cover, 50 cents.

When a Man's Single.

By J. M. BARRIE. New fifty-cent edition, on good paper, in unique paper cover, in imitation of cloth.

"The word 'racy' is a well-worn and often misused critical term, but it has no synonym that could so fittingly be applied to Barrie's story, 'When a Man's Single.' The book is a budget of quaint conceits, witty epigrams and Barrie's own peculiar humor."—New York World.

A Masterpiece.

The Ironmaster.

By GEORGES OHNET, author of "Countess Sarah," etc. New fifty-cent edition on good paper, in unique paper cover, in imitation of cloth.

THE

The new volume of the American Catalogue covers the period July 1, 1884, to June 30, 1890, and contains besides the regular features of its predecessors a list of State publications and publications of literary and scientific societies. The list of Government publications is brought down to June 30, 1890.

Only 1250 copies printed, and there will be no re-issue.

Quarto, Half Leather, $15.00; in Sheets, $12.50.

"The Catalogue is a monument of patient, dry, uninviting work. . . . There is scarcely a bookseller in the country who would hesitate a moment to expend twenty-five dollars in advertising his stock; ought he to hesitate a moment about an expenditure that would enable him to sell hundreds of dollars' worth of books in a year? Such an investment would also purchase for him a reputation among his customers for intelligence and trade knowledge that would pay him five times over."—A. D. F. RANDOLPH.

Mahan (Captain A. T., U.S. Navy)—The Influence of Sea Power upon the French Revolution and Empire. With 13 Maps and Battle Plans. 2 vols. 8vo. cloth, gilt top, 30*s.*

The TIMES, January 6, 1893, in a review of Capt. Mahan's new work, says:—'Capt. Mahan, if not the founder, is at any rate the most eminent living expositor of what may be called the philosophy of naval history. No historian and no writer on naval warfare has displayed so profound a grasp of the true meaning of sea power as a determining factor of human affairs. For the first time, so far as we are aware, in historical literature, he has shown us the true significance of the naval history of Great Britain. . . . . Of the way in which this great theme is treated we need say little; no living writer is so well qualified to do it justice as Captain Mahan, and certainly the true significance of the tremendous events of these momentous years has never been more luminously or more instructively displayed.'
